1—Sale by wife of joint property-Its validity—Consent of husband—Power of attorney—Registration Act, s 33

It is settled law that a Burmah Buddhist, with the express or implied consent of his wife, may dispose of their joint property It is a common practice for the husband alone to execute deeds of transfer of joint property Probably it is unusual for the wife to do so but if she has her husband's consent a sale by the wife would be as valid a sale by the husband A deed of sale of joint property executed by the wife alone does not require a registered power of attorney under s 33 of the Registration Act L B R 1872—1892, 403 Ref) Maung Tun Myat v Raman Chetty L B R 1893—1900, 37.

2—Widow's right of disposal of property

By Buddhist law the children have rights in the property as well as the widow If the children are young and she undertakes to manage for them she does this under the responsibilities of a trustee She may use the property for necessary subsistence but ought not except for their benefit, to dispose of it otherwise If however there is family necessity to sell, the sale may be valid as against the children, but it will lie on the purchaser to prove the necessity Nga Shwe Yo v Mi San Byu L B R 1872—1892, 108.

5—Attachment—Suit to establish right to attach property Sale before attachment valid if bona fide and for good consideration—Fraud—Burden of proof Buddhist Law—Sale of his share by co sharer—One co heir acting on behalf of all

There is nothing to prevent an owner from selling or any one from purchasing property before it is attached, provided the transaction is bona fide and for good consideration The burden of proving fraud rests on the creditor who impeaches the sale A sharer has an absolute right to dispose of his own share, even while the property is undivided subject to the right of pre emption by co-heirs (2 L B R 167, F.) It is common to find one or more co heirs acting on behalf of the general body of co heirs Subramanian Chetty v Maung Shwe The 11 Ind Cas 781.

6—Power of husband to alienate joint property of himself and wife—Whether alienation, transfer of his share and interest

In this case, a Burmese Buddhist husband had executed a deed of sale of the hnapazon property of himself and his wife The lower Courts found that it had not been proved that the wife was aware of, or that she had consented, to the sale It was, also, clear that the vendee knew that the wife was interested in the land and yet chose to take a conveyance from the husband alone. The following questions had to be decided and they were referred to a Bench of the Court, (1) Whether a Burmese Buddhist husband can validly sell or alienate the hnapazon property of himself and his wife without her consent or against her will? (2) Whether such a sale by the husband, made without the consent of his wife, constitutes a valid transer of his share and interest in the property sold Held, that no grounds having been made out for disturbing the decision of Mr Fulton in the case of Ma Thu v Ma Bu that a Buddhist husband cannot sell the joint property of himself and his wife without his wife's assent, express or implied, the first question must be answered in the negative: (i e) subject to the reservations stated in the above mentioned Ma Thu's case, a Buddhist husband has no power to make a valid sale of the joint property of himself and his wife without her consent or against her will, (a) and that in view of the various decisions forming distinct authorities for the position that under Buddhist law, it is competent for a husband to validly alienate his share alone of the joint property of himself and his wife, the second question must be answered in the affirmative (i e,) a sale by a Buddhist husband of the joint property of himself and his wife, made without her consent, does constitute a valid trasfer of his share and interest in the property sold (1891 S J L B 578 Fol 1874 S J L B 19, 1 L B R 11, 2 U B R (1892 96 303 Ref)

An undivided estate was in the possession of the eldest of the co-heirs, who sold it without the consent of the other co heirs The latter brought the present suit to recover their shares in the estate sold The question for decision was whether or not Art. 10 of Limitation Act applied to the case Held, that the suit was governed by Art 142 and not by Art. 10, for the vendor was in possession of the property on behalf of the other co-sharers and his sale dispossessed them Ma Ko h v Tun E 3 L B R 7.

2—Pre-emption sale.

If ancestral property has passed into the hands of third persons, the heirs of the original owner do not possess an absolute right of pre-emption back. But if the possessor wishes it to sell, he must offer it first to them who have a right of inheritance in the land. A sharer in undivided ancestral property, if he wishes to sell his share, must first offer his share to his co-heirs, and consequently a sale to strangers effected without such offer is invalid if the co-heirs promptly assert their rights. Nga Mysing v Mi Paw L B R 1872—1892, 39.

3—Sale—Consent of all the co-heirs is necessary to the sale of undivided ancestral property

One co-sharer cannot alienate even his own interest in undivided family estate without consulting his co-sharers and ascertaining their unwillingness to buy him out. This doctrine has its parallel in the rule which prevales in those parts of India which are governed by the strictest Hindu Law where the consent of all the shareholders is necessary even to the alienation of an individual share. Mi Te v Po Maung L B R 1872—1892, 41.

1—Burman Buddhists, Law as to Divorce among—Husband and wife—Buddhist Law—Dhammathats. Authority of—Menu Kyay, Authority of—Desertion—Procedure.

In a suit for divorce instituted by a Burman husband on the ground that his wife had deserted him for no reason whatever, and had been living apart for the past eight months, refusing to resume cohabitation with him (there being no charge against the wife of misconduct affecting morality or any bad habits), the wife pleaded that the above ground was, under Buddhist Law, no ground for a divorce, and further pleaded the conduct of the petitioner as a justification for her refusal to cohabit with him. No division of property had taken place between husband and wife. Held, upon a reference to the High Court, that upon the Law as administered among Buddhists the petitioner was not entitled to a decree. If the plaintiff in a suit for divorce governed by the above law establishes any of the grounds which the Dhammathats recognize as good grounds for a divorce, he will be entitled to a divorce. The Dhammathats contemplate grounds justifying a divorce other than those mentioned in the judgment of the Special Court in Nga Nwe Tu Su Ma, viz, other than matricide, patricide, killing, stealing, shedding the blood of a Buddha, rahan, heresy, and adultery. A desertion, properly so called, by the wife is a good ground for a decree by the husband, provided that during the period of one year prescribed by the Menu Kyay (ch v, ch 17) the husband has not supplied anything to the wife. Suits for divorce between Burman Buddhists being suits of a civil nature are governed by the Indian Divorce Act, should be commenced by a plaint and not by a petition. The decision of the Special Court is observed upon. Passages in the Menu Kyay Dhammathat cited and commented upon. Moung Tso Min v Mah Htah.

3—Husband or wife, right of, to obtain divorce without fault on, or consent of other party—Necessity of surrender of joint property.

In this case, the husband sued for divorce. The defendant opposed the suit on the ground that her husband had ill-treated her and forced her to leave him. She also denied that he was entitled to a divorce, by Buddhist Law, and the sole question for decision on appeal was, whether a husband, whatever his own conduct may have been, is entitled, by Buddhist Law, to obtain a decree for divorce against his faultless wife, on condition of surrendering to her the joint property and paying the joint debts

Held, on a consideration of the various texts relating to the question that the texts in the Dhammathas establish the law, that one of the parties to a marriage can separate from the other even if the latter does not consent, provided that the properties belonging to both and their liabilities should be divided. There is no insuperable legal bar to divorce against the party desiring it, where that party is prepared to surrender the share of the joint property to which he would, otherwise be entitled. Held, therefore, that the plaintiff, in this case, having offered to resign the jointly acquired property to the defendant he may be granted a decree for the divorce sought by him. In a suit for divorce by mutual consent and for partition of property, held, on the authority of the Manuagne, Book XII, S.3, that, where the relation of Nissayo and Nissito subsists between the husband and the wife with respect to atet property, the wife, if she is the Nissito, is entitled to one third of such property ; she is also entitled to a third of the undivided ancestral property, which was inherited by her husband during the marriage. The profits of the atet or ang property are lettetpwa, and the inherited property being itself lettetpwa, its profits are lettetpwa also. 5 Adultery—Cruelty—Whether ground for divorce.

Held, that among Burma Buddhists, the mere fact of the husband committing adultery or taking a lesser wife unaccompanied with cruelty does not of itself entitle the wife to claim divorce.

The committing of adultery under the conjugal roof is not such cruelty as is contemplated by the Dhammathas, as affording a ground for divorce. (1886) S J L B 391: 4 L B R 340, (1881) S J L B 103 Fol:) Ma Ein v Te Nsung. 5 L B R 87.

6—Child of divorced couple—Rights of inheritance—Maintenance or renewal of filial relations sufficient to entitle plaintiffs to inherit property acquired during second marriage.

There seems to be a great weight of authority in favour of the proposition that a child of a divorced couple is entitled to inherit from the parent, with which he or she lives, and is generally not entitled to inherit from the other parent, (when that other parent has married again and has children by the second spouse) property acquired during the second marriage, and that visiting the other parent and receiving presents or even maintenance from him does not constitute a continuance or resumption of filial relations, such as would entitle the child to inherit such property.

The appellant Maung Lo, in execution of decree against Ma Aing, wife of respondent, Maung Pyaung, attached a durion garden which stood in the joint names of Maung Payaung and Ma Aing Maung Payaung applied for removal of attachment, alleging that she had no concern with the durion garden in dispute. The application was refused and Maung Pyaung then brought the present suit for a declaration that the land could not be attached in execution of decree against Ma Aing as it belonged to him. The Township Court found that there had been no proper divorce between Ma Aing and Maung Pyaung. Held, that the township Court had decided it correctly, as it appeared that Maung Pyaung, after a long married life with Ma Aing, had separated from her a few years ago and had since lived apart from her, but that there had been no formal divorce nor any division of property acquired during coverture. The durion garden in suit was admittedly inherited by Maung Pyaung from his parents several years after his marriage with Ma Aing. Held, that it was not paying but let-tel-paw property and that Ma Aiung had a vested interest in it and that the extent of her interest was one-third. (U B R 1904—1906 Bud. Law—Divorce 19, F.) Held, also, that there had been a divorce mutual consent, Ma Aiung would be entitled to receive one-third of the garden as property inherited by her husband during co-venture. Held, further, that although a wife could not alienate her share in joint property without her husband's consent, her interest in joint property was attachable (U B R 1902—1903, Vol II Execution of decree, 1 U B R 1904—1906, Bud. Law—Divorce 1, Fol:) Held, therefore, that although Ma Aiung had not "a disposing power which she may exercise for her own benefit" over the one-third share in the durion garden, that one-third share, neverthless belonged to her, and that this was sufficient for the purpose of S. 60.of the Civil Pro. Code 1908.

10.—Grounds of divorce.

Before a court can order divorce against the wish of one party there must be proof either of some fault committed against the other of a sufficiently serious nature justify divorce according to the Dhammathats, or of some evil deed for which a separation of destinies can take place. Mere willingness on the part of one party to pay Ko-bo or the price of the body will not constitute a ground for divorce. It might equally be held that willingness to surrender the whole of the joint property constituted such a ground. (L B R 1872—1892, 391 Ref.)

22 —Rule of Buddhist law with respect to the disposal of property upon divorce on the ground of the wife's adultery where the husband and wife had been married from youth but separated and subsequently reunited

There are two rules of Buddhist Law on the subject of a divorce for adultery one of them relating to the case of husband and wife married from their youth and the other to the case of husband and wife where there has been a previous marriage by one or both or at least by the wife When a woman has been married but one the probability is that she has formed relations through giving birth to children or through the acquisition of property, which ought to be considered when she has entered into a subsequent union which has to be dissolved On the other hand when the woman has been only once married there is no body to be considered but herself and the children and as the latter are the offspring of the husband it is probably immaterial so far as they are concerned to which parent the property goes as they would eventually inherit from one or the other The same mutatis mutandis would apply in the case of a husband whom the wife was entitled to divorce for misconduct Where the parties had married no stranger at only each other, they must be regarded as the husband and wife of youth (U B R 1892—1896 Vol II, 116 U B R 1897—1901 Vol II 28 Ref) Maung Yin Maung Maung v Ma So U B R 1897—1901 Vol II 34.

24 —Suit for divorce—Claim to partition of property—Causes of action distinct

A suit for divorce and for division of property do not constitute a single cause of action (U B R 1897-1901 Vol II 1, Diss). Partition of property is not an essential feature of a divorce The termination of the marriage status in itself appears to be a sufficient cause of action and till this question is settled the grounds for partition of the property do not arise and may vary according as the decree for divorce is based on findings of fact as to which party is in fault A suit for divorce need not necessarily contain a prayer for division of the property Maung Tha Chi v Ma E Mya 1 L B R 7

25 Divorce—Validity

The existence of either of the two conditions, namely either a decree or order of Court or a written agreement executed by both parties in presence of respectable witnesses, is not essential to the validity of a divorce between Burman Buddhists Mi Hnin Ngon v Nga Aung L B R 1872—1892, 73.

27 —Second marriage—Polygamy.

At Buddhist law where no special custom exists a husband who in the life time of his first wife marries a second wife without the first wife's consent, does not thereby commit a fault against the first wife Such a second marriage does not in itself constitute in Lower Burma a ground for divorce Ma In Than v Maung Saw Hla L B R 1872-1892, 103.

The presumption in the absence of special facts is that the affairs of people divorcing and re-marrying are settled definitely at the divorce or the re-marriage, (L B R 1872 1892, 14, Fol.) 30.—Essentials — Procedure— Plaint— Petition.

A divorce cannot be had merely because one of the parties has no love for the other, or does not comply with the desires of the other. Desertion, according to the Manu Kye, is no doubt a good ground for divorce· but there is this condition attached namely, during the periods of time prescribed therein the husband should not have supplied anything to the wife. If a plaintiff in a suit to divorce establishes any of the grounds which the Dhammathats recognize as good grounds for divorce he would be entitled to a divorce even if such grounds are not among those particularized in the judgment of the Special Court. In suits for divorces the proper procedure is to present a plaint and not a petition for divorce, the case being not governed by the Indian Divorce Act, and the action being one of a civil nature. Where a petition for divorce is presented with a Court-fee required for a plaint, the Court has power to allow the person who has wrongly instituted proceedings in the form of a petition to amend by converting the petition into a plaint. Maung So Min v. Burmese Law (Ecclesiastical).

1.—Wuttagan land—Duties of Thathanabaing—Res judicata—Limitation.

A piece of wuttagan land was originally the subject of a dedication by plaintiff's grandfather to a monastery and then confiscated and re-dedicated by the Burmese King, and plaintiff, a layman, applied to the Thathanabaing for its restoration. The monks in occupation, the defendants, objected pleading the confiscation, and the Thathanabaing and his council decided that the land should be restored to the plaintiff. Held that the ecclesiastical authorities were competent to make such an order, and the defendants could not object to it and that questions of res judicata and limitation did not arise in such a case. U B R 1897–1901, Vol II, 52 Ref. U Teik Ka v. Nga Tin Byu U B R 1910 4th Qr 78.

2.—Civil Court whether can give effect to an order of the Thathanabaing or of any other ecclesiastical authority until such order is confirmed by a judgment and decree of the Civil Court·

A Civil Court cannot give effect to an order of the Thathanabaing or of any other ecclesiastical authority until such order is confirmed by a judgment and decree of the Civil Court. The decision of the Taunghyin Sayadau cannot be treated as if it were a judgment and decree of a Civil Court and it cannot be executed without even giving the other party an opportunity of showing cause against its execution. So far as the Civil Courts are concerned, the Sanad is merely an authoritative declaration that for the time being the Taunggwin Sayadau is the ecclesiastical who has supreme control as Thathanabaing. Shin Kunthala v. 3.—Authority of Thathanabaing—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

Where a monastery is thingika property which was dedicated to the monastic body before the sect to which the defendants (schismatics) belong came into existence, held that, according to ancient custom, the Thathanabaing had authority to decide disputes relating to it. It is not the province of the Civil Courts to decide whether an order of the Thathanabaing or any other Ecclesiastical authority is strictly in accordance with the Vinaya or not. A defendant may object to the jurisdiction of a Civil Court, but if he declines to appear to contest the case on the merits, he does so at his peril, and, if on appeal, the question of jurisdiction is decided against him, he will not be allowed to re-open that case on the merits. U Kuthala v. U Sanda U B R 1910 2nd Qr 35.

4.—Civil Courts duty of—Civil Courts should abstain from deciding points which fall within the spehere of Ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

The Civil Courts are bound by the decisions of the Buddhist Ecclesiastical authorities in matters within their competence and they should also abstain from deciding points which fall within the sphere of Ecclesiastical jurisdiction. 5.—Award by ecclesiastical superior—Effect either as order of ecclesiastical authority or as ordinary arbitration award—Buddhist priesthood—Succession of one member to another in respect of religious buildings and other kinds of property—Possession — Dispossession — Specific Relief Act, s. 9.

A dispute having arisen between two Buddhist monks, the appellant and respondent, as to the right of inheritence and possession in a monestary and other property left by a deceased member of priesthood, the matter was referred by the Thathanabaing or head of the Buddhist hierarchy, to the magwadi Sayadaw and other Sayadaws or high ecclesiastical dignitaries, for decision. An award was given in favour of respondent defendant, and the appellant-plaintiff was dispossessed irregularly under orders of the district executive authorities. In the litigation that ensued, an unsuccessful attempt was made to confine the matter, to begin with, to proceedings under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act. The action was eventually fought on the question of the validity of the decision of the megwadi Sayadaw, which was impugned as not final on the ground that leave had been given for further reference on appeal. It was clear enough from the evidence that that award was pronounced by the ecclesiastical authorities appointed by the Thathanabaing or head of the Buddhist church for the purpose Held:—If it was an ecclesiastical decision in an ecclesiastical matter, the ruling of this Court in Circulars No 72 of 1893 No. 84 of 1895 would apply, and there would be no room for questioning the action of the ecclesiastical superiors of the parties within the scope of their authority. If on the other hand, the award was of a secular nature or partly secular and partly ecclesiastical, it would make little practical difference, for it had been shown that the plaintiff himself agreed to the reference to the arbitrators, or whatever was their proper character, being made. Either way the plaintiff was bound. The only cause he could show against the award now was its alleged want of finality, and this objection was founded on the assertion that leave was given to appeal from the decision, By this was meant apparently not exactly an appeal to higher authority but a reference to some other ecclesiastical law expert to hear and decide the case. Supposing, however, that such leave was given by the Megawadi Sayadaw, and that he could give it, which was doubtful from the evidence adduced by the plaintiff himself as to the Thathanabaing objecting to order and refusing to return it to plaintiff, still the plaintiff took no advantage of such permission and he could not, of course, be allowed to keep the matter open indifinitely. Apparently, however, the truth of the matter was that the Thathanabaing gave the plaintiff fifteen days within which to appeal or make a reference. The plaintiff did nothing, and after the expiry on the time allowed, the order of the Thathanabaing was issued to carry into effect the award of the Sayadaws. In whatever aspect, therefore, the award was viewed, it would seem that the appellant-plaintiff has no good cause

In dealing with cases of this kind, viz., suits to enforce an order of the Tabayin Sayadaw, the Courts have to ascertain that the matter is one within the jurisdiction of the Buddhist ecclesiastical authority and that a duly constituted authority has given a decision. It is not necessary that a decision in a matter within his jurisdiction by a duly constituted Buddhist ecclesiastical authority should be confirmed by a Civil Court. The duty of the Civil Court is to enforce it, if it is shown to be a decision enforceable. U. B. R. 1892—1896, Vol, II, 59, U B R 1897—1901, Vol. II, 42, 45, Ref. Wun Chit v U Zawta. The suit was to enforce these decisions. The defendant among other pleas, denied the jurisdiction of the Pakan Sayadaw and of the Sayadaws who had given the decisions in question and the Lower Courts held that the Pakan Sayadaw had been duly elected and that the Courts should now recognize him as the Thathanabaing. Held, in second appeal that it was not shown that the Pakan Sayadaw could be recognized by the Civil Courts as Thathanabaing of Burma and that it was not shown that the Burmese Law-Gift.

1—Death-bed gift—

Ordinarily Buddhist Law is not applicable to gifts. (U. B. R. 1892—1896, Vol. II, 400, Ref.) A promise to give for no consideration will be valid in Burma without delivery of possession, provided that, in other respects, it fulfils the conditions specified in s. 25 (1), Contract Act. Whatever law may be applied to ordinary gifts, death-bed gifts must be held to be a question of inheritance, to which Buddhist Law is applicable. Ma Pwa Swe v Ma Tin Nyo U B R 1902—1903 Vol II Buddhist Law Gift 1.

2—Gift, revocation of—Buddhist law not applicable to gifts—Succession—Inheritance—Meaning of terms—Burden of proof—Settlement of issues—Need for making parties clearly understand points on which evidence is required.—

It is undoubtedly the duty of the Courts to see that the issues framed are clearly understood by both parties, and this is particularly necessary when the issues are of a technical character, or are drawn in a technical manner, and when, as is so frequently the case in Upper Burma, the parties are ignorant and inexperienced in our judicial ways. It may easily happen that a party omits to produce essential evidence from sheer inability to comprehend what is wanted, and care should always be taken to point out distinctly the matters upon which the production of evidence is required. S 53 of the Civil Justice Regulation specially gives ample powers to the Courts to ensure the production of evidence which they themselves deem necessary in the interests of justice even when the parties fail to do what they ought on their own behalf. Suit by Burmese father for recovery of land transferred ten years before to his daughter and her husband, solely enjoyed by them ever since, and entered in their names and as their property in the revenue records. Suit brought on allegation of temporary transfer, but trial of case confined to question of power of father to revoke gift once made to child and followed by delivery of possession. Held—that the burden of proof was entirely on the plaintiff, who was bound to show that the ownership of the land was not that of the defendants in possession, and that the question was not one of succession, inheritance, or a religious usage or institution so as to make Buddhist law the rule of decision, and that therefore the rule of decision must be found in some other law, if any, for the time being in force, and otherwise in the principles of equity, justice, and good conscience. Such other law would, to some extent, by the Contract Act, s 25 and Expl. 1, under which the gift having been actually made, be valid as between donor and donee in the absence of any incident that could be attached to it not inconsistent with the provisions of the Act. Such incident could not be inferred from the passages in the Dhammathats permitting parents to recall gifts made to their children those passages being of the nature of religious or moral precepts which could not be applied as binding in the practical affairs of life, unless their general acceptance as having such force were proved as a matter of custom among the people. Maung at Gyi v Ma U Me. 3—Possession-What is requisite to transfer possession-Thingika gift of mortgaged land—Assent of son to gift by father not necessary—No vested interest possessed by son in father's estate before father's death—Diversion of estate from natural heirs to religious endowment should be strictly looked into.—

S. 43 of the sixth chapter of the Manugye Dhammathat deals with the mutual power over the property of each other pertaining to teachers and scholars, parents and children, husbands and wives, masters and slaves. It discusses the case of teacher and scholar and says the others are the same. It is obvious that the case treated of is that of joint property, and the object is to lay down some rules of partnership. There is no authority for holding that a son can exercise any restraint over the alienation of property by his father. It is necessary for the Courts to look strictly into transactions by which the estates of Buddhists are diverted from their families. Maung Hmon v Ucho. U B R 1892—1896 Vol II, 397.

4—A gift by a Buddhist monk to take effect after his death.

A gift made by a Buddhist monk, not accompanied or followed by delivery of possession, and intended to take effect only on the death of the donor, is not valid. (U. B. R. 1892—1896, Vol. II, 397, U. B. R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, 59, L. B. R. 1872-1892, 70, Ref:) U Thathana v U Awbatha. U B R 1897—1901 Vol II, 62.

5—Gift—Validity—Necessity for strict proof, especially of transfer of possession, which is the crucial test.

Actual parting with possession is the only true test of the completion of a gift, and Burmans evade that final and crucial test if they possibly can. The result is that, as a general rule, a genuine gift is not commonly made except for religious purposes and under special circumstances. The safest course in all matters of this kind is to insist on strict proof, and in this case, the evidence was most unsatisfactory Maung Shwe Thwe v Ma Saing U B R 1897—1901 Vol II, 59

6—Gift by Buddhist monk.

Under Buddhist law a layman upon embracing a religious life becomes ipso facto divested of all property, which thereupon vests as it would upon his divorce or decease. Ma Pwe v Maung Myat Tha U B R 1897—1901 Vol II, 54.

8—Revocation.

The right in property obtained by gift, where the gift has been accepted under a condition to support the donor, will terminate if the donee neglects to fulfil the condition. Every gift from a parent to a child does not raise by necessity the inference that the child is bound, by a condition of the gift, to support the parent in case of need. In cases other than those of inheritance, succession, marriage, and religious usage, the Court should, before applying the Budhist law, look at the effect of their decisions and consider whether that law is equitable. Although under Buddhist Law a donor, who has become poor, may revoke his gift, the Court declined to apply the law where a gift of immoveable property had been perfected by ten years' possession, and where the donee's name had been registered as owner Mra Do Aung v Shwe U. 9.—Possession Revenue Register.

Execept in the special case of gift made to a child on the occasion of entering the priesthood, a gift is not under Buddhist law complete unless

10.—Priesthood.—

Absence of delivery of possession does not invalidate a gift given on the occasion of the donee entering the priesthood The court should not, under this law, decree immediate and exclusive possession of gift to the donee or his representative, as against his parents, the donors. That is to say the Courts cannot decree possession of the gift to the donee until the death of his parents.

11.—Possession.

Where a gift is made for the purposes of evading the ordinary Buddhist rules of inheritance,the Buddihst Law applies. There is nothing to prevent a man from making a gift to one or more of his children in the absence of others. A gift of property made by a father to his children holds good, and such property is not liable to partition after his death, provided that delivery of possession has taken place. The law requires strict proof of delivery, and delivery cannot be presumed from mere continuance of possession at any rate in the case of sons actually living with and dependent on an aged father. 13.—Gift to priest—Poggalika and Sangika gifts—Individual and general gifts—Claim on poggalika Kyaung by recipient after he has left the priesthood.

A gift made with a view to future existence, whether poggalika and sangika, always retains its religious charactar and cannot be claimed back for secular uses In the case of poggalika gifts the recipient can dispose of the same to any other priest. In the absence of his having specifically disposed of the same to some other priest on his death, the original donor has a right of selecting another individual priest as the recipient of his offering. Failing the exercise of such selection the gift would become sangika. Property derived from parents or otherwise acquired purely as defined in section 409 of the Digest does not become sangika, but reverts to the natural heirs of the deceased. In the case of Poggalika Kyaung the recipient cannot after he has left the priesthood make a gift of it to another priest ; it ceases to become his personal property when he leaves the priesthood. Maung on Gaing v U Pandisa. 16—Necessity for delivery of possession under Mahomedan Law–Subject-matter of gift remaining in donor's hands, effect of—Contract Act S. 25, Expln. 1—Buddhist Law (Gifts)

S. 4 (1) of the Upper Burma Civil Court Regulation (or s 13 of the Burma Law Act, 1898) only refers to cases of succession inheritance, marriage or caste, or any religious usage or institution And questions relating to gifts which do not fall under any of those heads, must be governed by s 25 Contract Act. This has been so held in regard to gifts by and to Buddhists The effect of Expl 1 to S 25, Contract Act, is that a gift actually made is valid, though it may not have been expressed in writing or registered.

The Mahomedan Law does not render it impossible for a husband to make a gift to his wife of the house in which they both live. Actual delivery of possession is not necessary. If the character of the possession changes, the mere retention of the subject-matter of the gift in the hands of the donor would not affect the validity of the gift.

Under the Mahomaden Law, the husband takes a fourth of his wife's estate, where there are children.

It depends upon the circumstanaces of each case whether the Mahomedan or the Buddhist Law applies to gifts. C. A. (208) of 1905 (unpublished), 28 All 127 Ref Abdul Gafur v Deyan Singh U B R (1907) Buddhist Law Gift 1.

1.—Lettet Pwa and Hampazon property—Property acquired after marriage, interest of husband or wife in—Power of Husband to alienate property which he has inherited after marriage.

The wife or husband has an interest in property acquired by the other by inheritance after marriage when they are living together and helping each other. In considering what power the husband has of alienating property which he has inherited after marriage the court should be guided by the rules applicable to a partition upon divorce when neither party is in fault. The rule as to equal division upon divorce only applies to property conjointly acquired after marriage. (L B R 1872—1892, 110, 113, L B R 1893—1900, 295) Maung Po Sein v Ma Pwa. 2—Husband and wife—Power of husband to alienate joint property of himself and wife—Whether alienation, transfer of his share and interest.

In this case, a Burmese Buddhist husband had executed a deed of sale of the Hunpazon property of himself and his wife The lower courts found that it had not been proved that the wife was aware of, or that she had consented to, the sale, it was also clear that the vendee knew that the wife was interested in the land and yet chose to take a conveyance from the husband alone. The following question had to be decided and they were referred to a Bench of the Court:—(1) Whether a Burmese Buddhist husband can validly sell or alienate the hunpazon property of himself and his wife without her consent or against her will ? (2) Whether such a sale by the husband, made without the consent of his wife, constitutes a valid transfer of his share and interest in the property sold. Held that no grounds having been made out for disturbing the decision of Mr. Fulton in the case of Ma Thu v

Ma Bu that a Buddhist husband cannot sell the joint property of himself and his wife without his wife's assent, express or implied, the first question must be answered in the negative, i. e. subject to the reservations, stated in the above mentioned Ma Thu's case a Buddhist husband has no power to make a valid sale of the joint property of himself and his wife without her consent or against her will. (L B R 1872—1892, 578 Fol, L B R 1872—1892, 19, 1 L B R 11, U B R 1892—1896, Vol II 303 Ref), and that in view of the various decisions forming distinct authorities for the position that, under Buddhist Law, it is competent for a husband to validly alienate his share alone of the joint property of himself and his wife the second question must be answered in the affirmative (i. e.,) a sale by a Buddhist husband of the joint property of himself and his wife, made without her consent does constitute a valid transfer of his share and interest in the property sold 1 L B R 184 over U B R 1892—1896, Vol. II 46, 201, U B R 1902—1903 Vol II Ex. of decrees, U B R 1904, Buddhist Law—Divorce 1, 1 L B R 198, 3 L B R 8, L B R 1893—1900, 568, 3 L B R 167 Ref) U B R 1907 4th. 3.——Act done by husband in pursuance of common business binding on wife- Sale of immoveable property by husband without knowledge of wife—Apparent acquiescence subsequent to sale, by wife no proof of consent—Presumption.

For many purposes *B*urmese husbands and wives may be regarded as partners, and, where the husband manages a business on behalf of himself and his wife, acts done in pursuance of the common business would no doubt bind the wife, but this principle cannot, we think, be applied to such a transaction as the sale of immoveable property belonging to both. In such a case further evidence is required, besides the fact that the transaction was in some way connected with the business, in which it might perhaps be presumed that the wife made no open protest against the sale *B*ecause a wife consents to or acquiesces in a mortgage the presumption does not arise that she also assents to a sale of the property. Nor should apparent acquiescence subsequent to the sale be regarded as proof of consent by the wife to such sale. 4.—Joint property

Three years absence with neglect on the part of the husband to provide the wife with the means of subsistence, is required to give the wife the right of re marriage. Until the expiration of that period the relation of marriage subsists, unless, of course, it is put a stop to by some formal act of separation The Burmese law recognizes the husband as the lord of his household The wife cannot retain possession of joint property in opposition to her husband. So long as marriage subsits the Courts cannot decree an absolute dominion over it to either husband or wife, but the husband, rather than the wife, is entitled to retain possession of it in trust for both. Maung Ko v Ma Me. In a suit for divorce from a Mahomedan husband, brought by a *B*urmese woman professing the *B*uddhist faith, but at the time of her marriage simulating conversion to Islam, and married with Mahomedan ceremonies, the Mahomedan Law should form the rule of decision, and the Courts cannot grant a divorce in such a case when no fault is established on the husband's side. Kumal Sheriff v Mi Shwe Ywet. 6.—Divorce—Joint property.

Where a woman has a separate establishment from her husband and takes no share in the management of his business, and performs the duties of a wife no more than by receiving his visits, is not entitled to hold the property acquired by her husband, who carried on his business in the house of his first wife, as joint property. 7.—Liability of Buddhist wife for obligations contracted by husband—Wife not privy to obligationer benefited by it—Buddhist law how far binds Courts.

To hold a wife personally responsible for an obligation contracted by her husband to which it is shown that she was in any way privy, and from which it is not proved that she received any profit, is certainly not, in accordance with justice, equity, or good conscience. The wife is not personally liable for an obligation contracted by her husband, who had been absent from home three years. (Special Court judgment in Civil Appeal No 10 of 1882, 1, Fol) The husband is the lord of the wife. There is no authority for the proposition that while the marriage subsists the wife is to have exclusive possession of the husband's property or the joint property. There is nothing in Buddhist Law to render a child whose parents are dead or unknown incapable of adoption. This was an appeal to recover a share in the estate of the Pakan Mingyi Kadaw, (deceased). The estate is in the possession of the first respondent defendant, who asserts his right to it as being the kittima(adopted) son of the Mingyi Kadaw.The plaintiff appellant is a relation of the Mingyi Kadaw. Held that the respondent Maung Kan Gyi was legally adopted as a kittima son and as such was entitled to inherit. 11—Orasa son—Partition—Right of grand son to claim a share on re-marriage of grandfather

The term orasa has two distinct meanings It applies to all legitimate natural born children as opposed to adopted illegitimate children and it means also the eldest legitimate son or daughter or as has been said the eldest legitimate child. It is in the sense of the eldest son or daughter that it is generally used in the reported decisions The eldest born son is the orasa by right, but he does not obtain the complete status as such till he attains his majority, and becomes fit to assume his father's duties and responsibilities and to assist in the acquisition or management of the family estate. If he dies before he attains his majority, or if he is incompetent to fulfil the above conditions, then the next younger brother subject to the same conditions, succeeds to his position as orasa It, however, the eldest son attains his majority and fulfils the conditions and then dies before his parents, his position as orasa remains unfilled and the next brother will not succeed to it These principles are consistent with the previous decisions, and they reconcile the rulings and texts which provide for the devolution of the status of orasa, in certain circumstances and the texts which distinguish between orasa and kanitha children, even after the death of parents It may also be deduced from the texts that a son when the orasa has attained his majority death of his father that he can claim his share of the inheritance, unless the mother is living There is no authority which recognises the right of an orasa son, who is a minor at the death to claim from his mother a share on attaining majority. The principles set forth in the system also to explain the rules concerning the right of grandchildren, to claim a share on the death of one of their grandparents 1 L B R 59 2 L C 61 1901 2 L C 207 1 L C 1 L B R 198 2 L B R 255 1 2 L C 124, 1 L B R 101 cited Tun Myaing v Tun 2 L B R 99.

14.—Descent — Step-children — Step grandchildren Blood relations

Excepting undivided ancestral property, the estate of a deceased step parent or grand-parent goes by descent to the step children or step-grandchildren in preference to collateral relatives by blood Collateral blood relations or descendants can succeed to an inheritance only when there are no possible heirs in the descending line, step children are treated as entitled to some share of the inheritance like descendants by blood and in the absence of natural descendants, step descendants are classed as heirs entitled to succeed the bond of blood yielding to the more important consideration of having a descendant living representative. The rule as to reaching inheritance or obtaining a vested interest applies to where the claimants to inheritance are of different classes, that is in different degrees of proximity to the deceased. Thus, if there is no nearer heir a grand child, all the grandchildren belong the same class and are on an equal footing their, although their parents have died before reaching the inheritance Where there are no children but only grandchildren surviving the latter succeed on the same footing as children although their parents had died without reaching the inheritance or obtaining a vested interest, principle of Buddhist law on this point appears being that this rule is requisite only where distinction has to be made between the claim different classes of heirs and its application unnecessary when the nearest heirs all stand in the same legal relationship to the deceased owner of the estate to be divided (L B R 1892–1896 Vol II 121 Ref.). Maung Bon v Maung Po Kywe U B R 1897–1901 Vol II, 66

21—Suit by children against their widowed mother for protection of joint family property.—

When the mother is alive the children are not entitled to partition of inheritance On the mother attempting to alienate the property improperly they might possibly be entitled to sue to restrain her from parting with it (L B R 1872—1892, 108, Ref) Maung Hmu v Ma Min Dok, U B R 1892—1896, Vol II 174

The plaintiff now respondent, was Ma Meinkale daughter of one of the wives of Maung Tun E deceased Maung Tun E left two sons, Maung Chit Saya and Maung Aung Tha and a daughter Ma Thin On by his first wife, a daughter Ma Meinkale by a subsequent wife and a widow Ma U Ma without children The questions that arose in the case were what was the property subject to division, and what share of that property was Ma Meinkale entitled to in accordance with Buddhist law The Court of first instance, following ss 7 and 66 of Book X of the Manugye, gave respondent one fourth of the property after deducting and adding certain items, and the lower appellate Court found the Dhammathats conflicting, but considered respondent entitled to a fourth share of the pay in property Held, that the rule is to divide the property into four shares of which the children of the first marriage received two and the child of the next marriage and the surviving widow, one each (L B R 1872—1892, 46 95 Ref) Maung Chit Saya v. 24—Priority of birth—Rights of eldest son or daughter passing to next eldest as representative of the father or mother —

According to Buddhist law priority of birth is recognised and certain duties pass by succession to the next eldest son or daughter The following are the principles as to the succession of the children on the death of the father First The eldest son, if competent is representative of his father and in that capacity is entitled to one-fourth of the inheritance on the death of the father Second Where there are both sons and daughters the eldest competent son is preferred to any daughter Third The rights of the eldest son or daughter pass to the next eldest as representative of the father or mother. Ma Mya v Maung Po Thin, L B R 1893—1900, 585

25—Divorce—Partition on divorce —

It is dangerous to hold that an only daughter has, after her father's death and before partition with her mother, an interest in the estate capable of alienation. (L B R 1872—1892, 108 115, 123, Ref:) A woman who has obtained a divorce by a decree of the Court cannot be made to relinquish all her property, the forfeiture of property being a punishment for improper desertion (1 Bom 97, Fol.) Maung Po Lat v Mi Po Le L B R 1872—1892, 212

27—Daughter removed from her father's family and continuously resident with her divorced mother—Rights in father's family.—

A child removed from the father's family, and continuously resident with her divorced mother after she is of an age when she might assist in the affairs of her father's family appears to be in the position nearly of a child adopted from the father's family into mother's family and, while she acquires or retains rights in her mother's or new family's property she loses right in the family whence she came. A person is not obliged to claim all that he is entitled to claim. Maung Hmat v Ma Po Zon, L B R 1893—1900, 469.

28—Share of eldest daughter by second wife.-

Property inherited by a father from his ancestor during marriage is not hnapa on or joint property of the husband and wife On his death, leaving a daughter by a previous marriage and a widow the daughter is entitled to one-half and the widow to an equal share In deciding such a case the Court must be guided by analogy in applying the rule prescribed by the Dhammathat for the division between a daughter and her stepfather of property inherited during coverture by the mother from her ancestors (L B R 1872—1892, 18, L B R 1872—1892, 27, Ref.) Maung Shwe Ngon v Ma Min Dwe, L B R 1872—1892, 110.

30—Illegitimate daughter—Concubine.—

The case of the kanina or damsel's son is provided for in the Dhammathats, although not always by mention of the Sanskrit name. When the deceased left legitimate children it was held that his daughter by a damsel not recognized as concubine could not share in the property. 31—Daughter of divorced husband and wife living with mother and separating entirely from her father.—

Daughters of a divorced wife, who live with their mother and do not maintain filial relations with their father, but live entirely separate from him, are not entitled to a share in his estate when there has been a division of property at the time of the divorce. (U B R 1892—1896, Vol II, 102.194, 623, 110, 159, U B R 1897—1901, Vol II, 104, Ref.) Ma Pon v Mong Po Chan. U B R 1897—1901, Vol II, 116.

32—Eldest daughter, claim of to a share of the general joint estate on the death of the mother—Rights of eldest child—Claim of eldest son to one fourth share of the mother, when the father marries again.

The hasty abuse of a father on a single occasion—conduct which was also forgiven and was not made a ground for any public declaration by the father—is not such conduct as to deprive the plaintiff of any rights he had. The principle that a daughter gets a share on the death of her mother and the son on the death of his father simply because the daughter and son perform the family duties of the mother and father respectively, is not to be found clearly enunciated, although, as noted above, there are indications of such a principle. The son gets the father's official and personal belongings when the father dies, and in a corresponding way the daughter takes her mother's official and personal belongings; but as regards the rest, while some Dhammathats are indefinite, others, notably the Vilasa, Kyetyo, Rasi and Dhammathat Kyaw appear to give rights to the eldest child, because he or she is obtained by the prayers of the parents in early married life and helps the parents before other children can. Occasional passages, however, put the daughter in an inferior position to a son. It may not be very clear from the Dhammathats now available that a son can claim a one-fourth share from his father when he lives separately and when the father does not marry again, though this has been held; but we do not think it open to reasonable doubt that when the father does marry again, the eldest son, especially if he be the eldest child, can claim a one-fourth share of the general joint estate of the parents. Maung Seik Kaung v Maung Po Nyein. 1 L B R 23.

equitable principles. The only rule of Buddhist Law shown to be operative in respect of the partition of inheritance between two sisters on the same footing, except as regards age, is that of equality of partition. 35 -Position of daughter of divorced wife who lives with her mother or mother's family and not her father.

Under Buddhist law a child has no vested interest in the father's property and cannot interfere to prevent him from disposing of it, and if that is so it is difficult to see what right there can be to the proceeds or the disposal or what power to control the father's dealing with such proceeds in any way he may think fit If the father chose to spend all the money obtained by the sale of his property the child could not make him responsible for its reimbursement, and the fact that instead of spending the money the father chooses to keep it or to buy property with it so as to make the money or the property subject to a different rule of inheritance cannot apparently affect the matter. The father might make a gift of such property to the person entitled to inherit it after the conversion, and the person entitled to inherit the original property if it had not been converted could not prevent him. The deceased Maung Myat No left a wife Ma Kywe the defendant, and a daughter by her, Ma U Gywe. He had previously had other wives, of whom one, Ma Kyi Su, was by mutual consent divorced some 16 years before. By Ma Kyi Su he had a daughter, Ma Sein Nyo, the plaintiff, who went to live with her maternal grandmother and mother, who, having remarried, subsequently resided in the same house. Ma Sein Nyo never lived with her father but only visited him from time to time. All Maung Myat No's property was apparently acquired before his Marriage with Ma Kyi Su or after his marriage with defendant. His sister Ma Kaung Gywe jointly owned part of the property. She divided it after his last marriage and by an instrument of transfer conveyed her share to him and his wife, the defendant, partly for the purpose of a religious trust, partly in consideration of the payment of debts, and partly as a gift. Plaintiff sued for a three-fourth share of whole estate. The first Court gave her a half share of the ancestral property and no share of the hnitpazon lettetpwa property acquired after the marriage with defendant on the ground that she had not duly maintained the filial relation. Defendant did not appeal and plaintiff appealed unsuccessfully. In second appeal by plaintiff, held—that plaintiff was not entitled to a threefourths share of the estate as she was not brought into the second marriage by the father, and probably was not entitled to any share at all, the principle of Buddhist law being, in the absence of testamentary power, that the continuance of the family tie for purposes of inheritance should be manifested by plain and unmistakable outward signs, and their being apparently no clear reason for the distinction drawn as to the right of inheritance in respect of ancestral and non-ancestral property; that, if plaintiff was entitled to any share, it was not necessarily a half, the deceased having left not only a widow but also a daughter by his last marriage; that the trust property was not a part of the estate subject to division; that the property transferred by Ma Kaung Gywe was not ancestral but acquired during the second marriage; that the current income of all property being hnitpazon lettetpwa any property [illegible] by the expenditure of such income would [illegible] the same. 38—Marriage—Kanwin.

The Buddhist Law favours the equality of the sexes, and in many ways treats marriage as creating a partnership in goods. Kanwin is property set apart at the time of marriage by the bridegroom or his parents for the joint purposes of the married pair. Where property is not set apart as kanwin but is simply entrusted by the parents to the bridegroom to manage, he and the parent shall share it equally. If he died without children his widow shall take half and his parents half. (L B R 1872—1892, 22, Ref.) Ma Hla Aung v Ma E. L B R 1872—1892, 219.

39—Succession—Wife's property inherited after marriage-Close analogy of *B*urmese system with that of Tamil inhabitants of Jaffna—The question as to the interest taken by a husband in property inherited after her marriage by his deceased wife considered but not decided.

The *B*urmese rules about women's separate property of different sorts are somehow connected with the Hindu Law The closest analogy to the *B*urmese system is contained in the rules of the Tamil inhabitants of Jaffna in Ceylon, called the Thasawalamy, compiled by the Dutch rulers in A.D. 1907. About these Mr J D Mayne remarks that they probably contain the customary law of Southern India before British Courts introduced Brahman shastrees to interpret Hindu Law in the Madras Presidency. These rules begin by dividing property into three classes ; hereditary, when brought by the husband; dowry, when brought by the wife ; and acquisition, if acquired during the marriage. The second rule lays down that property inherited by the wife devolves like her dowry, There are so many resemblances between these rules and those of the Burmans as to induce one to suggest that they should be closely studied when the question of the surviving husband's or wif's interest in property on the death of the other comes up for decision.

43- Power of parents to dispose of their property—Partition—Interest of widow in the family property.

47—Position of concubine or lesser wife living along with head wife, and of child of such concubine living with father—Apparent principle of Buddhist law with respect to marriage.

Effect of subsequent regular marriage after death of head wife on position of offspring of concubine or lesser wife. Held—that such offspring is not the son spoken of in the Dhammathats as brought by the father with him when he contracts a second marriage. Share of such offspring seems to be provided for by the rules relating to the case of a head wife with a free concubine or lesser wife. (L B R 1872—1892, 225, U B R 1892—1896, Vol II, 194 Ref.) The provisions of Buddhist law which come nearest this case are those relating to a head wife and a free concubine, and a superior and inferior wife. The former are a little complicated by the introduction of slave concubines, and, any way, the difference between the shares in the two cases is insignificant, only about one-thirty-fifth, so that the proportion of three to two may be accepted. Ma Shwe Ma Hlaing, U B R 1892-1896—Vol II, 145.

49-Second wife entitled to share in inheritance with first or chief wife when she has clearly the status of a wife.

A wife of a distinctly inferior class. who is in the position of a concubine and who has a separate establishment, has no claim to inherit a share in her husband's estate; but the mere fact that she lives in a house separate from that occupied by the husband merely raises a presumption that her status is inferior, the presumption being not conclusive but rebuttable. When the husband has lived indifferently with both his wives and when neither of them can really be considered as having lived separately from him, the status of both wives seems to be precisely the same though one may have been the first or chief wife.(U B R 1892—1896, Vol II, 194, U B R 1897—1901 Vol II, 138. 54.—Authority of Manugye Dhammathat Book X, s. 62, denied—Inheritance can ascend when there are no descendants.—

Under ordinary circumstances s. 62, Book X, of the Manugye Dhammathat is unsuited to the conditions of modern life. The rule laid down in Upper Burma Rulings, 1892—1896, Vol II p. 184. namely, that "when it cannot go by descent the inheritance is allowed to ascend" must be taken as a settled principle of law in Upper Burma. 55—Claim to share of inheritance before death of both parents—Waiver of interest in portion of estate by surviving parent.

It appears clear enough that the parent can only give the children property of which he or she is in possession. As in the case of any other gift, delivery is essential to its validity, and possession cannot be conferred on the child when the possession of the property is not in the parent. Surviving parent cannot give one heir status to sue another for share of inheritance with 56.—Inheritance—Absence of descendants, husband or wife—Preferential right of parents to succeed—Exclusion from inheritance-Proof of deliberate neglect of ordinary duties of affection and kindred necessary.

Where a deceased Burman Buddhist has no direct descendants and leaves no surviving husband or wife, the parents should inherit to the exclusion of all other relatives. (L B R 1893—1900, 524, U B R 1892—1896, Vol II, 184, U B R 1897—1901, Vol II, 157, Rff.) 57.—Jointly acquired property—Payin property or property anterior to second marriage—Step-father's claim to estate of deceased wife, and to estate of deceased step-daughter—Claim of paternal relatives to latter.—

Held that as in this case Ma Ein Nyein admittedly had every-thing and defendant nothing when she took him as her second husband, and as the property in dispute was land acquired by transfer of the proceeds of disposal of other land, the presumption was that the original fund was preserved, the object of investment only being changed and that in the absence of proof the burden of which was on defendant, there was no necessary presumption that any of the property was lettetpwa or jointly acquired after the second marriage under the circumstances. Held, also—that the step-father had no good claim as against the relatives of the father of his step daughter to the estate left by the latter. In the absence of a husband or descendants the estate of the step-daughter must ascend, and her father being dead, must go to the nearest collaterals. The uselessness in general of evidence of the performance of death-bed attentions and funeral obsequies pointed out. When there had been no deliberate and intentional neglect

58—Ascent of inheritance when it cannot go by descent—Parents preferred to brothers and sisters and grandparents to uncles and aunts.—

The Buddhist law is opposed to the ascent of inheritance, but when it cannot go by descent the inheritance is allowed to ascend, first to the father and mother, and, failing them, to the first line of collaterals, and, in the absence of heirs in that degree, to the grandfather and grandmother and next line of collaterals. 59—Suit for possession of land—Heirs on either side being uncles and aunts or their representatives— Shares to which each entitled.—

Plaintiffs-appellants sued for possession of six plots of land measuring 80 acres to which they alleged they were entitled, as heirs of Tun Maung, deceased. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the grounds that defendant-respondent, as the uncle and guardian of Tun Maung and as having paid his funeral expense was entitled to inherit on Tun Maung's death to the estate he left. On appeal the District Judge confirmed this decision. The principal facts were:- (1) That the land in question came from Tun Maung's maternal grandfather and was in fact his mother's (Miyan Gyaw's share of the inheritance, which, on the division after his mother's death, was put down as his share; (2) that at this time Tun Maung's father, Yan Aung, was still alive and consequently that the land in question, his wife being dead was his property, till he died, when it became that of Tun Maung, the only, or only surviving, son of himself and Mi Yan Gyaw; (3) that from, or very soon after, the partition the land in question came into the possession of defendant-respondent on behalf of

Tun Maung, then a minor, and that he has ever since enjoyed the usufruct of it; (4) that Tun-Maung lived partly at least with defendant-respondent when not in Lower Burma. Both parties claimed to have paid the funeral expenses and defendant-respondent also alleged having paid Rs. 112 during Tun Maung's life-time to pay for his journeys to Lower Burma. The Lower Courts held that it was not proved that plaintiffs-appellants paid the funeral expenses, and that it is proved that defendant-respondent did. On this point it was clear from the evidence taken on commission that the funeral expenses were met by contributions from the relations who happened to be at the place in Lower Burma, where Tun Maung died, including plaintiff-appellant Tun Aung, and by the people of the village. Held—that defendant-respondent having for many years enjoyed the usufruct of the land in question, could not be allowed to plead payments on deceased's account as a reason for refusing to share the inheritance with any person who might be entitled to share it. Held also—that Tun Maung having inherited the land on the death of his father, his relatives on his mother's side had just as much right to inherit as those on his father's. Held also-that the plaintiff-appellants represent an uncle and an aunt and are entitled to two shares out of six, the remainder being the shares of the remaining four uncles and aunts or their representatives. Where the question was, to what shares, if any, of the original property of Maung Tun and of the jointly acquired property of Maung Tun and Ma U, the plaintiff-appellant, Ma Kyi Byun, was entitled to, held that the appellant Ma Kyi Nyun was entitled to a share in the estate of her deceased grand-father, whether original or jointly acquired, with her step-grandmother. Held, also, that under the circumstances stated, the share of the grandchild in jointly acquired property is one-eighth. Held-also, that the weight of authority inclines to the position that the grandchild's share in the original property is one-half. 7 Cal 453 U B R 1892—1896 Vol II, 159, 184; U B R 1897—1901 Vol II, 122, 66 Ref. Ma Hnin Dok v Ma U. 61—Brothers and sisters already divided--Estate of divided deceased sister—Equal rights of elder brothers or sisters on failure of younger brothers or sisters—Exclusion of children of brother predeceasing his divided deceased sister.—

It is a principle of Buddhist Law that only those closely related should inherit (see Dhammathatkyaw, s. 378, Digest) and that relations of the same degree should inherit to the exclusion of those of a more remote degree, that, for instance, children should exclude grandchildren. There are certain exceptions to this rule (e. g, in cases where there has been no division). In such cases elder brothers within reach of the inheritance would share equally, and one brother so within reach dying before distribution, his children would take per stirpes and not per capita. In cases where there has been division, however, if the eldest brother predeceases his sister, his children cannot succeed to her estate where there is a surviving second brother; the surviving second brother is the sole heir. In the case of brothers and sisters already divided, the elder brothers or sisters inherit only on failure of younger brothers or sisters; but the second of such elder brothers or sisters would not exclude one older than himself or herself. The principle that property does not ascend, does not operate in such a case, the eldest is not barred from equal rights with the second. Maung Hmaw v Ma On Bwin 1 L B R 104.

68.—Adopted children—Effect of separate living from adoptive parents—Adopted child also a blood relation—Adopted child returning to house of natural parents.

Manukye, X 5—26.—A Burmese Buddhist cannot disinherit his or her children, whether adopted or natural. As regards kettima children, the Manukye and the Attathankepa do not explicitly require joint living of parents and children where there are no direct natural descendants. The requirements of residence might be more safely relaxed in the case of an adopted child who is also a blood relation. (L B R. 1872—1892, 8, 191, U B. Circulars, 35 of 1893, Ref.) The strict letter of the Dhammathats is not to be taken as the present rule of law in this matter. Customs and conditions have modified the ancient rule ; and there should be some liberality of construction in questions concerning the maintenance of the bond formed by adoption. Where, therefore, an adopted child who was also a blood relation went to live in her natural parents' house, but maintained her relationship with her adoptive parents, held -that she did not forfeit any rights that by adoption she may have acquired.

This appeal is based mainly on the grounds that the property in dispute is lettetpwa property and not the payin or attetpa property of the defendants mother and that the law as to share, awarding plaintiff only one fourth, has been wrongly applied The plaintiff-appellant is the daughter of Maung Tha Po, and the defendant respondents are the (adopted) son and daughter of Ma Kywin Maung Tha Po and Ma Kywin married 25 years or more ago, having at the time the aforesaid children. Maung Tha Po had no property, Ma Kywin owned the land in dispute Ma Kywin died shortly before Maung Tha Po Maung Tha Po had no property when he married Ma Kywin and when divorced on two occasions by her, received only small money payments and no share of land The lower appellate Court held that the money with which the lands were redeemed could not have been common property of husband and wife, and came to the conclusion that the lands were the payin property of Ma Kywin and granted plaintiff a onefourth share as the defendants had admitted plaintiff's claim to that share, though otherwise the plaintiff's claim would have been rejected Held—in second appeal, confirming the decree of the lower appellate Court that the lands in question were attetpa or payin property. Held, further that the one fourth share which the defendants were willing to allow the plaintiff was all she was entitled to U B R 1892—1896 Vol II 184 Dist Ma Lin Si v Maung Wa Yon U B R 1897—1901 Vol II, 131.

The question whether an adopted son who for many years has lived apart from his adoptive father has been guilty of such negligent and undutiful conduct as to disentitle him to inherit is one of evidence (L B R 1872—1892, 8, 170, 184, Ref) The burden of showing that he had not been undutiful lies on the adopted son because of his separate residence for so many years Such burden would be discharged by giving proof that the father,near his death, acknowledged him as his adopted son and that he acted as such, without dispute, in performing the funeral A man must not be disinherited on mere suspicion or ambiguous evidence

77—Shares of elder and younger brother—Adoption-Shares of adopted and natural child —

Where land was taken in mortgage and was let out to tenants by one brother or the other, and further advances on mortgage were made sometimes by one brother and sometimes by the other, the general presumption from the circumstances is that all the immoveable property belonged to the joint estate, and the clearest proof is required that any of it was owned otherwise and was separate property. All the immoveable property ought to be dealt with on the same principle and it is clear that there is every reason to believe that the whole of it was joint, and that the evidence that one brother rather than the other had most to do with any portion of it at any particular time, practically proves nothing contrary to the general ownership in common. In this case what were virtually two suits for partition were dealt with in one action. Plaintiff, Ma Gyan,claimed the shares of her father,Maung San Aung in the undivided estate of himself and his elder brother, Maung Kywin, first defendant; the question in this first case was whether certain parcels of land belonged to the common estate or were the separate property of one or the other brother and it was held in second appeal that the same principle must govern all the items in dispute, namely, that, as there was a joint estate of which portions were alternately dealt with by one brother or the other, there was no presumption from such dealing at any particular time that there had been a permanent separation of interests, but on the contrary the continuance of the unity of the estate must be presumed in the absence of clear and distinct proof the other way of which there was none It was agreed in the Courts below that the respective shares of the elder and younger brother were to be calculated in accordance with s 163 of the Attathankepa Dhammathat, namely, 437/729ths and 292/729ths. In what may be called the second case, the questions were whether Ma Gyi, the daughter of Maung Kywin, had been adopted by Maung San Aung, whether that adoption continued up to the time of Maung San Aung's death, and if so, what share of inheritance Ma Gyi was entitled to As to the first point,Ma Gyi was taken by San Aung as an infant on her mother's death. No formal document was drawn up, but as the parents were brothers this was considered natural enough There was evidence that the child was brought up as daughter of the house, she never returned to her own father's house, and it was held that the arrangement would never have been allowed unless it was a kittima or full adoption. With regard to the second point Ma Gyi married and lived in a different house from San Aung, but the residences were close together, and there was no evidence of interruption of filial relations. It was therefore held that the continuance of the adoptive state must be presumed On the birth of a child of his own, the plaintiff Ma Gyan, a good many years after Ma Gyi's adoption, Maung San Aung might have wished to set aside the adoption, and this he might possibly have done by making suitable provision for Ma Gyi on her marriage, or by arrangement with her own father, or by otherwise coming to an agreement with her in settlement of her claims to inheritance, but, as he had done none of these things, the adoption must be treated as still subsisting. The requirement in the Dhammathats as to joint living must receive a reasonable construction adopted to the changed conditions of modern times in the country, the object of the requirement doubtless being to provide a rough and ready means of settling questions of disputed succession turning on the unbroken maintenance of the family tie The real issue for determination in such cases is whether the surrounding circumstances proved to exist, establish an intentional severance of the family tie or not. The Buddhist in practice has no testimentary power which would prevail against the established rules of inheritance and consequently the conduct of the several parties in their lifetime is of the greatest importance as a guide to what they intended their respective relations should be in respect of rights of inheritance upon the death of the owner of the property to which contending claims are made. 78.-Claim to share of joint property of brother and sister working together, both being alive-Law of inheritance not applicable.

This suit was brought by a young woman against her brother and his wife for a third of their property. Her parents died when she was a little girl, and her brother kindly brought her up and took care of her, and she gave some help work as a toddy-tapper. In return for his kindness she has thus put him in Court. The parents not only left no property, but even died in debt, and the plaintiff's brother had that burden to discharge in addition to her maintenance. Held,—in second appeal, reversing the decree of the Courts below, that Buddhist law was inapplicable, the suit not coming under the law of inheritance, but being in fact of the nature of a claim to a share of the profits of a partnership, 79.—Manugye Dhammathat, Ch. X, S. 26—Partition of property between brothers and sisters —Equality of shares-Adoption-Child given in adoption loses claim to inherit any share of the estate of his natural parents-Evidence-Burden of proof.

The adopted child drops out of his own family and is provided for in that adopting him. The expectations and arrangements of the members of the family he has left are framed accordingly, and it would be manifestly inequitable to let the child adopted into another family come back into his own and disappoint the reasonable calculations for the future which have been made therein. The number of prospective co-parceners in the inheritance of the original family is reduced by the adoption, and the adoptee cannot be permitted to come back and, as it were, to be born again. Apparently an adoptee drops even more completely than a deceased child out of the original family, for the deceased may leave children of his own who are admitted to a certain share, which does not seem to be the case with the children of an adoptee. Held, that in such cases as the present the burden of proof is shifted by a comparatively small amount of prima facie evidence from the claimant to the manager and de facto trustee of the estate. There is nothing against partition in equal shares. (U B R 1897—1901, Vol. II, 79, Ref.) Maung Pan v Ma Hnyi. U B R 1897—1901, Vol. II, 104.

87.—Family arrangement—Inheritance.

Among the Burman Buddhists, the father, foreseeing that the heirs may quarrel about the division of the property on his death, not infrequently arranges a special contract before his death among these heirs where they bind themselves, among themselves to accept a certain proportion or a specified field, or specified area of land, or a certain number of cattle, or particular chattels. The motive of convenience inducing the heirs to accept such an agreement is often aided by a religious awe of the father and a religious feeling of obedience to his wishes. But such an agreement will not usually give them a cause of action against him during his life. (L B R 1872—1892, 22, 30, 44, Ref.) Mi Thit Mi Sin v Maung To Aung and Maung Gaing.

A female Burmese Buddhist inherited some property from her mother. She died leaving a a husband and five daughters. Held, that the eldest of the daughters was entitled to succeed to one-fourth share of the property. (3 L B R 8; 2 L B R 255, Ref.) Tha Tu v. Maung Bya. 4 L B R 181.

90.—Death of husband and wife within a short time of each other-Rights of relatives to succeed to estates.

Where on the death of a husband, his wife inherited all his property, as his widow, but within a very short time after his death the widow also died, leaving her surviving neither descendants nor ancestors, the relations of both may inherit the estate. As has been observed in 2 U B R (1897 1901), 66, the apparent reason of this distinction seems to be that, when husband and wife die within a short interval of each other, their joint interest in the estate is regarded as predominant, whereas when one lives long after the other, the presumption arises that the joint interest has completely merged in the sole interest of the survivor. (U B R (1892-96), 136; U B R (1897-1901), 66 and 146, Ref:) Ma Kadu v. Ma Jon. U B R (1905) Buddhist Law 7.

91.—Orasa child-Daughter surviving parents with brother-Whether such daughter, orasa child —Share of children of such daughter.

The plaintiffs sued the children of the orasa daughter of the original owners to recover a third of the properties left by them Held, that the plaintiffs' position was untenable. The Plaintiffs' mother was neither the eldest child nor the eldest daughter of the original owners. She was not even the eldest survivor among a family consisting of daughters only, for, at the time of her mother's death, who survived her husband she had an adult brother. There is no authority for the suggestion that a second daughter, who is also the fifth child, can under any circumstances, become an orasa, child so long as there is a brother surviving and competent to assume the headship of the family. As there were two children of the original owners still living, the plaintiffs could get only one-twelfth, and not one-third of the properties of the owners. Po Sein v Po Min. 3 L B R 45.

92.—Grand child of first wife deceased share of in the presence of second wife and her child.

The question in the case was as to the share that could pass on inheritance to a deceased Buddhist's grand-child by his first wife on the one hand and his second wife and her daughter on the other. Held, that, under the Burmese Law, a grand child, whose parents died, after one grand parent and before the other, is not to receive any share on the death of the surviving grand parent, only because, and if, their parents had already received their portion. Otherwise, according to the law, nine twentieths of the atetpa property and oneeighth of the lettetpwa property of the grandparent would pass to the grand child. Sein Tin v Mi On Kra Zau 3 L B R 219.

93.—Property inherited by Burman Buddhist father after death of first wife and before marrying his second wife-Share of child by deceased wife.

94.—A Methila nun, whether a woman loses rights to property by becoming—Orasa meaning of.

The question was whether, under the Burmese Law, a woman by becoming a nun renounced her property and died a civil death. Held, a nun does not occupy a position analogous to that of a monk. The Methila nuns especially undergo no ceremony of ordination as a nun but are simply lay devotees corresponding to religious laymen. Counsequently there is nothing in the Buddhist Law to support the proposition that a woman loses her rights to the property held by her, be reason of her having joined the order of Methila nuns,

Held, also, that the eldest born son is the Orasa by right and the eldest son (or eldest capable son), whether eldest child or not, clearly has the special privileges possessed by an Orasa son under Burmese Law. 95.—Priority between sister and sister's daughter,—

In this case the question for decision was, whether, under Buddhist Law, the daughter of a deceased sister is entitled to any share in competition with the sister of the owner. Held, that in the case of collateral succession, the general principle of the nearer, excluding the more remote takes full effect and that so long as there is a surviving brother, he excludes the children of a previously deceased brother. Applying this principle, the sister excluded the sister's daughter. (U B R 1897-1901 172. Distd.) Ma Ma Gale v Ma Me. U B R (1905) Buddhist Law 5.

96—Share of child of deceased first wife in property inherited during second marriage.

A Burman Buddhist had a child by his first wife. After the death of the first wife, he contracted a second marriage, and by the second wife he had another child. During the continuance of the second marriage, he had inherited certain property from his mother. His second wife predeceased him. He died last, leaving him surviving the two children one by his deceased first wife, and the other by his deceased second wife. Held, the two children were entitled each to a moiety in the property inherited by the deceased from his mother. 97—Deceased sister's daughter's estate—Exclusion-Surviving brothers and sisters excluding children of deceased brothers and sisters.

Held, that, under the Buddhist Law, applying the general principle that only those closely related should inherit and that relations of the same degree should inherit to the exclusion of those of a more remote decree, the surviving brothers and sisters of a deceased sister inherit the estate of the deceased sister's daughter to the total exclusion of the children of the brothers or sisters who predeceased that sister. 1 L B R 104 and 2 U B R (1905), Inheritance 5, Fol: Kan Gyi v Ma Ngwe Nu 5 L B R 70.

98—Right of daughter of divorced wife to succeed to her father's property as against his sister.

Where the husband divorces his wife, after she was conceived, and dies without other wife, child or grandchild, the child by the divorced wife is to succeed to his estate. If the father lived alone, the child succeeds to the whole estate. If the father lived with his coheirs the child succeeds to half and the coheirs to the other half. Therefore, where a person dies leaving only a sister and a daughter by a divorced wife, they share his property equally. The rule that the daughter of a divorced wife, who lives with the mother and does not maintain filial relations with the father, is not entitled to a share of his estate, does not apply to the above case. 99—Inheritance—Division among children of same parents after parents' death—Division in equal or unequal shares.

The question for decision in this case, was, whether, under the Buddhist Law, Burmese daughters inherited the estate of their deceased parents in equal or unequal shares. Held, on consideration of all the authorities on the subject, that children of the same parents, dividing an inheritance, after their parents' death, take each an equal share. 102—Review of judgment—Sufficient reason.

Where it is requisite for the ends of justice, a review can be granted where there is an apparent error of law or where the decision has preceded on a mistaken view of law, but not because of a ruling of law later than the decision of the case nor for the purpose of rearguing the case on previous materials in the mere hope of inducing the same Court to take a different view The law in question ought to be sufficiently settled and determinate to permit of its definite ascertainment. A native Judge interpreting the Buddhist law ought not to ignore its difficulties; he should give reasons for selecting one rule out of several. 106—Partition—Mother marrying twice—Division on second marriage between herself and children by first marriage—Legality—Property acquired thereafter during second husband's lifetime—Property acquired after his death-Children after two marriages - Mode of division.

H. a Burmese woman, married twice. By her first marriage she had four children, and by the second marriage she had two children. On her second marriage, she effected a division between the children of the first marriage and herself. She acquired some properties after such division and during the lifetime of her second husband, and acquired some other property after his death. Held, that a division on the re-marriage of the mother is authorised; that the children of the second marriage are entitled solely to the property acquired by the mother after the division and before the death of the second husband; and that, as regards property acquired after the second husband's death, the children of each marriage take per stirpes and not per capita. 107—Inheritances—Orasa son—Devolution of the status on the next eldest son—Transmission of right.

If a first-born son dies in infancy, the status of 'orasa' is capable of devolving on the next eldest son and does so devolve when he attains his majority, provided that he is unaffected by any of the disabilities or disqualifications mentioned in the texts on the subject. He can transmit the superior right of inheritance to his own issue in the same way as an 'orasa,' who is actually the first-born of the family, can do. 108—Buddhist Law—Succession—Husband and wife—Status of lesser wife living separate from the head wife—Association of husband in public—"Mistress" distinguished from lesser wife or concubine—Presumption arising from separate living of lesser wife—Presumption from second marriage—Marrying two sisters.

In order to get any share in the inheritance, a second wife must prove that her status was superior to that of a lesser wife or concubine. If she succeeds in proving this, she would be entitled to share on equal terms with the chief wife. Separation of residence affords no more than a presumption that the woman has not the status of one entitled to share in the inheritance, which can be rebutted by proof of the existence of a higher status. (U B R 1892—1896, Vol II, 194, U B R 1897—1901, Vol II, 138, 160, Expl.) A second contemporaneous wife is not of necessity a lesser wife or a concubine. A lesser wife or concubine, who lives with the husband, gets two-fifths of the inheritance, but when she lives separately, she gets nothing. U B R 1892—1896, Vol II, 145, Rel. on.) No formal demand in marriage and no ceremony are necessary, or even usual, in the case of persons who have been married before. The chief wife's consent to the second marriage is not required for entitling a second contemporaneous wife to inheritance. There is no such presumption in Burmese Buddhist Law that a Burmese woman, who co-habits with a man who, she knows, is already married, is a mistress and not a wife. There is no prohibition in the Buddhist Law against a man marrying two sisters. It is a mistake to use the word (mistress) with reference to a lesser wife among the Burmans. The Buddhist Law speaks of wives and concubines. The mistress of Western Europe is a different thing from the concubine of the Dhammathats. To convert a wife or even a lawful concubine into a mistress seems to be consistent neither with Buddhist Law nor with the cause of religion and virtue. Where it was found that the husband sometimes lived with the head wife and sometimes with the lesser wife, that he lived with both the wives on two occasions for a number of months, that he took the lesser wife also on his visits to Rangoon Shwezettaw pagoda, his oil wells, etc., and where it was abunbantly clear from the admitted facts that, during a long course of years, the head wife accepted the relations between the lesser wife and the husband without any sign of dissatisfaction. Held, that the lesser wife was satisfactorily proved to be a wife entitled to inherit on an equal footing with the head wife. Mi Shwe Ma v. Burmese Law (Joint family.)

1—Marriage of member of—Separate property—Limitation.

It is doubtful whether a Burmese Buddhist family is ever a joint family within the meaning of art. 127, Limitation Act. However that may be, a member of the family who marries certainly ceases to be a member of a joint family. Property acquired by a married son or daughter does not become part of the joint family; it is the separate property of the married member. 6 All 442 Ref: Maung Aung Ge v Ma Hla Win, L B R 1893–1900, 415.

2—Joint ancestral property—Suit for share of, by joint heirs excluded therefrom against other joint heirs—Limitation—Limitation Act, arts. 127, 142, 144.

A suit by Burmese Buddhists as joint heirs, against other joint heirs and their alienees, for recovery of a specific share in joint family property, must be brought within 12 years from the time the exclusion from share became known to plaintiff. A suit by a sharer under Buddhist law for a share against alienees from one of the sharers would, if there was a dispossession when the plaintiff was in possession along with the other sharers be governed by art. 142 and if there was no dispossession, by art. 144. Maung Tun v Ma Taw, L B R 1893—1900, 132.

1.—Husband and wife—Desertion of one by the other for a period, whether dissolves the marriage tie—Dhammathats, effect of custom on.

The point referred to the Full *B*ench in this case was, whether the desertion of the husband by the wife vice versa, for the period specified in the Buddhist Law Texts has the effect of dissolving the marriage tie, in the absence of any further and express act of volition on the part of either of them. Held, that, even if the actual texts of the Dhammathats, supported the proposition that marriage is dissolved by mere desertion, it must be remembered, in applying the personal law that it is in course of time apt to change by the development of customs inconsistent with such law. Further, it is quite conceivable that a husband and a wife may quarrel and live apart, each on their own means, without the least desire to proceed to the extremity of a divorce and the idea that marriage can be terminated at all, without the wish of one or the other of the parties to it, is contrary to and inconsistent with the fundamental principle of the marriage contract.

Held, however, (Fox J. dissentiente) that the decision should be based only on the correct interpretation of the Texts, irrespective of how the *B*urmese community may regard the matter and such texts have laid it down that, at the end of 2.—Right of wife to mortgage her interest in joint property without her husband's consent.

The texts declaring that the husband is lord of the wife must be construed in the present day in a strictly limited sense. Practically in respect of their respective rights to property, the Burman Buddhist husband and wife occupy a position of equality.

It is settled Law that the husband is not at liberty to alienate joint property without his wife's consent, but that he can make a valid transfer of his share and interest in such property. The same rules apply to the case of alienations by the wife.

Thus, where a wife mortgaged her interest in a house and land which was hmapazo» lettetpwa without the consent of her husband, it was held that the mortgage was valid. 3 L B R 66; U B R (1892-96), II, 45, 204 U B R (1902-03) II. A suit for restitution of conjugal rights naturally lies, and this is not inconsistent with the Buddhist Law U B R 1904-1906 II Budd. Law, Div p 3 Con and expl. Naga Chin Dat v. Mikin Pu. U B R (1909) Ist Quarter, Buddhist Law I.

6—Seduction—Pregnancy—Damages.

The Specific Relief Act, which is of greater to obigation than the Buddhist Law, says distinctly that a contract to marry cannot be specifically enforced. All persons are supposed to know the law, and women ought to know, that if they consent to sexual familiarity without marriage, they take the risk of the paramour ultimately refusing to marry. If there is no promise to marry, the woman who has consented has no right to sue. If there has been a promise to marry, the Court would look at all the circumstances before awarding damages, and the amount if any, awarded would depend on the circumstances as the Dhammathats very plainly show. When there has been no promise to marry, a Burmese woman cannot recover damages for seduction resulting in pregnancy. Nga Po Thaik v Mi Hnin Zan. L B R 1872—1892, 235.

7—And divorce—Inheritance—Rights of child of wife who has left her husband—Form of suits for share of inheritance.

Under Buddhist law, a divorce may be effected by the voluntary departure of the wife from the husband for a period of one year. If such departure is without good and sufficient reason, the wife loses all claim on the joint estate. The right of a child of the defaulting wife to inherit her father's estate depends on the special circumstances of the case (L B R 1872—1892, 184, U B R 1897—1901, Vol II, 45 Ref.) The valuation of an estate upon an application of letters of administration affords no exact criterion of what the share of each person entitled to share in the estate will eventually amount to. Such valuation is a valution of the property which the applicant expects will come into his hands. Some of the property may never be realized, or perhaps more may come to the administrator's hands The sharers are entitled to share in what actually does come to his hands. Consequently in a suit by a sharer for his or her share in an estate the taking of an account is almost necessarily involved, and in such a suit there should ordinarily be a prayer asking for an account and for the due administration of the estate under the orders of the Court, as contemplated by s.213, Civ Pro Code, 1882. In such a suit all interested parties should also be joined. Ma Thet v Ma San On 2 L B R 85.

Wives who live in separate houses from that of the wife with whom the husband takes his meals are not entitled to obtain, on the death of the husband, anything more than has already come into their possession. Living and eating together is not an essential of marriage, but merely a formal proof of the validity of a marriage. Separation of residence does not afford more than a presumption that the woman has not the status of one entitled to share in the inheritance left by her deceased husband, a presumption which can be rebutted by proof of the existence of a superior status. Ma Gywr v Ma Thi Da. 9—Suit by respondent plaintiff as wife of deceased to recover his estate from brothers and sisters.

When a divorce has occurred strict proof is required of the renewal of connubial relations when the question is whether there has been a re-union or not, just as clear proof of marriage in the first instance is required when the point in dispute is whether the status of a wife has been acquired or not. In this case the evidence of a re-union is altogether unsatisfactory, and the circumstances go to show that the probability is all the other way. Maung Lu Gyi v Ma Nyan. 9.A—Consent of both parties is necessary to a valid marriage.

10—Ante-nuptial Contracts—Proof.

Buddhist Law recognises certain property as the separate property of the wife. It is called "thin thi" and includes what belonged to the wife before marriage, and what has been given specially to her since marriage. It is distinguished from 'kan win" which is property set apart at the time of marriage for the joint purposes of the married pair, and from "knit pason" which is property acquired jointly after marriage. In ante-nuptial contracts it must be proved by clear evidence that, marriage was the consideration of the promise. On grounds of public policy, ante-nuptial contracts, which are not the usual incidents of a Buddhist marriage, must be admitted with caution and only on strict proof. Maung Ba v Ma Ok. Certain property was acquired during the marriage of M S and M B. On M S's death, M B had an absolute right to dispose of her share in the property. The property was partitioned between her, and her son. What she obtained came to her in her right of widow. A Burman Buddhist may have at the same time two or more wives,who are on equal footing though one of them may be styled the head wife, and her status may be superior to that of a free concubine When a Maya Nge is mentioned in the Dhammathats, it is such a wife that is referred to and not a free concubine.(L B R 1872-1892 6, U B R 1897-1901, Vol II, 160 Ref). though polygamy proper is undoubtedly coming to be looked on with more and more disfavour, it is by no means extinct. Of the wives who have borne an equal number of male children, the chief wife is the one first married. A wife who is barren may be "put away" but not divorced, and then another wife may be married without fault, and this rule appears to be the only one according to which a subsequently married wife can be set over a previously married one as his chief wife. The term "letsonmaya" means a wife who lives on terms of equality with her husband. Eating out of the same dish is but one, though perhaps the chief, indictum of such equality. A wife living separately from her husband, who is not entitled to inherit, is not at all a wife but a concubine. Separate residence merely affords a presumption, which, however, may be rebutted, that such a woman is a concubine and not a wife. (U B R 1892-1896. 15.—Husband and wife—Husband's rights over wife's payin property—Distinction between maiden wife and eindaungyi as regards husband's control over wife's payin-Amendment of plaint-When to be refused—Estoppel.—

A Buddhist wife, who is an eindungyi, may alienate her payin property in any way she likes, without even consulting her husband, provided that she does not give it to a paramour. An amendment of plaint should not be allowed on second appeal, when such amendment involves fresh issues and fresh evidence. Where a husband allowed his wife to receive certain land in mortgage in her sole name and to take the rent, the mortgagor is justified in the belief that the transaction only concerned her and himself and that she had power to reduce the debt if she wished to do so. The husband is estopped from disputing a redemption by the wife. Nga Tan Baw v Nga Kan 12 Ind Cas 200.

1.—Between father and daughters, the children of successive wives on the former marrying again.—

U Myaing, who had successively married three wives who had pre-deceased him, was on the point of marrying a fourth wife when his daughters by his former wives claimed partition of inheritance. At the time of partition U Myaing had by his first wife two children surviving, by his second wife one child, Ma Tha Zu, and by his third wife Ma E Ma, one child Ma Shwe Sein. There was also a daughter of Ma E Ma by former husband. All the property to be divided was the jointly acquired property of Ma E Ma and U Myaing. Held, that the property should have been divided into nine shares, of which U Myaing should have kept five, and given two to Ma Shwe Sein, the daughter of himself and Ma E Ma, and two to the children of the first two marriages and the step-daughter. Ma Ta v Ma Thu Za. 2.—Husband and wife—Partition of divorce—Property inherited by wife—payin and Lettetpwa property.—

The distinction between a division of property between husband and wife upon divorce and a succession to property by inheritance being sufficiently obvious, this distinction must be kept well in mind in interpreting the texts and rulings as to the various descriptions of property and the division of inheritance of the same under Buddhist Law. (L B R 1872—1892, 110, Fol.) As between husband and wife property inherited by the wife during coverture is viewed as lettetpwa and not payin when a partition of property is made between husband and wife on divorce. It does not by any means follow that property is to be viewed as joint property of the husband and wife, if on the wife or the husband dying during coverture, the estate of the deceased becomes distributed among the heirs. Property inherited by a wife is acquired during coverture, if the income of the inherited share is enjoyed during coverture, whether a distribution of inheritance into separate aliquot shares be made between the heirs before she is divorced from her husband or after such divorce. There is no authority for thinking that the eldest son, after taking his one-fourth share of the estate of his deceased father, retains any right to a further future partition or any right in the remainder of the estate, except the right of pre-emption in case of sale by the remaining co-heirs. (L. R. R. 1872—1892, 76, U. B. R. 1897—1901, Vol. II, Fol.) In such a claim for pre-emption the co-heirs would have to be made defendants or joined as plaintiffs. Maung Hmu v Maung Po Thin 1 L B R 50.

A declaratory suit by the real owner that a mortgage effected by the person in possession does not affect the property is not repugnant to the proviso to s.42 of the Specific Relief Act. second marriage, transferred the joint property of himself and his first wife to their daughter by way of inheritance, evidently with the intention of keeping the land out of the hands of his second wife: Held, that the transfer operated as a partition of inheritance and not as a gift. A partition between father and daughter is not invalid merely because the father assigns to the daughter a larger share than she could claim under the ordinary law of inheritance, or if the father thinks it expedient to make over the whole of the joint property to the daughter. A transferee cannot be allowed the benefit of the principle contained in s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act, when the slightest inquiry would have sufficed to acquaint the mortgagee with the fact that the land stood in the real owner's name in the Revenue maps and registers. Maung Hmwe v Ma Lun Aung 11 Ind Cas 855.

Burmese Law--(Pre-emption)

1—Right of pre-emption—Right of widow to dispose of family property subject to children's right of pre-emption.—

A Buddhist widow has a right of absolute disposal in respect of her own share, after her husband's death, and a life-interest in the remainder. This decision does not overrule the law relating to the right of pre-emption but is subject to the general rule, regarding the right of all co-sharers to pre-emption. Where a mother after the father's death sold her right over joint family property to a stranger, held, the son has a right of pre-emption over the whole property. 2 L B R 167, L B R 1872-1892. 378, L B R 1893—1900, 65, Ref: Mo Thi v. Tha Kwe, 4 L B R 128=14 Bur L R 205.

2—Pre-emption, widow's right of—Widow's right to inherit.—

According to Buddhist Law, a person selling ancestral property, whether it has been divided or not, must offer it to his co-heirs, before selling it to strangers. A sale to strangers effected without such offer is invalid, if the co-heirs promptly assert their rights.

A Buddhist widow is the heir of her husband whether there are children or not. The eldest son has a right to claim one-fourth on the death of the father, but this fact does not alter the position of the widow.

Where the widow has inherited her deceased husband's share, and the co-heirs of the husband have sold their shares to strangers, the widow has the right of pre-emption. Such right to pre-empt will be strengthend all the more by the fact that she has a son by her deceased husband. 3—Suit for Pre-emption under Chinese Customary Law—Suit by Chinaman-Indian Succession Act, Ss 5 & 331—Burma Laws Act, S.13.—

In a suit by a daughter for pre-emption of certain properties which had belonged to her father, who was a Chinaman, brought under the Chinese Customary Law, it was held:—

(1) if the father was not a Buddhist, the provisions of the Indian Succession Act applied to him, and not the law of China.

(2) if he was a Buddhist his estate would be exempted from the operation of the Indian Succession Act by S. 331 of that Act, and the Buddhist Law would form the rule of decision.

In this case, the father being a Chinese Buddhist, it would be necessary for the plaintiff to show that there is a Chinese Buddhist Law in China applicable to Chinese Buddhists only, as apart from the customary law of the country, applicable to all the inhabitants whether Buddhists or not, and that by that law there is a right of pre-emption in respect of the land in dispute. (2 L B R 95, Ref:) Apana Charan Chodry v. Shwe Nu, 4 L B R 124.

4.—Sale of undivided ancestral property—Pre-emption.

A sharer in undivided ancestral property if he wishes to sell his share must offer it to his co-heirs, and a sale to strangers effected without such offer is invalid if the co-heirs promptly allege their rights. (S. J. L. N. pp. 39, 41, Fol.) The right of pre-emption is in the co-heirs collectively, and there is no law by which a single co-heir can enforce pre-emption unless the consent of the other co-heirs has been obtained. U B R 1897—1901. Vol. II, 155, Fol.; L B R 1872—1892, 39, 41, 76, Ref.) 3—Chief Commissioner — Validity of Wills made by Burmese Buddhists.—

No Will by a Burmese Buddhist having heirs which dispossess of property, moveable, or immoveable, contrary to the Burmese Buddhist Law of Inheritance should be admitted as valid. There may possibly be some family customs in some remote part of the province, which the Chief Commissioner is unacquainted with, where this rule would not lie. In that case, of course, there will be an exception; and it appears probable that in some cases, as for cruelty or for a blow, a father or mother may legally disinherit an heir; but as a general rule, and without some special act of the Legislature, the Courts are bound to decide questions of inheritance, between Burmese Buddhists solely by the Law of Burmese Buddhists or by well ascertained custom.

A maiden lady, deceased, had three persons living with her, (1) S, the daughter of B, with whose father the deceased was living, (2) P, a boy, and (3) L, another girl. On her death, Y, the father of S applied, as father and guardian of S, for Letters of Administration to the estate of the deceased, and obtained it from the Court. A similar application was also made on behalf of L, but was refused. L, thereupon, instituted a suit in forma pauperis against the estate of the deceased, administered by Y, for possession of the whole of it, as keittima adopted daughter of the deceased. The suit, to which S and P were wrongly not made parties, and which was very badly conducted, was resisted by Y, but was finally decreed in favour of L as the adopted child of the deceased was entitled to inherit. Afterwards, the sister of Y, instituted, as next friend of S, the present suit on the ground that, S not being a party to the former suit, the decrees in it were not binding on her, and that she alone was entitled to the whole estate. P, who wished to put forward his claim, was permitted to be put on the record as second plaintiff in a suit in which the original plaintiff claimed the whole estate. The suit was decreed in favour of S, who was held by the District Judge to have been adopted by the deceased and not L and P.

Held that S's right to share in the estate as keittima adopted daughter of the deceased had been proved and that L should make or pay over 1/3 share of the property, which she had obtained or may hereafter obtain from Y under the decree in the former suit, to the properly constituted guardian of S, that L's right to share in the estate

Where there was no question of legal necessity, the only way in which a widow could have transferred an absolute estate was by a sale with the consent of the next reversioner. 10 Cal 1102.

Semble: Attestation by the next reversioner of a deed, by which the widow purported to convey an absolute estate, is not equivalent to a consent of the reversioner to the sale.

A widow sold a house in which she had a widow's interest on 29th October, 1857, and, after her death in 1906, the reversioner (plaintiff) sought to recover the same from the purchaser (defendant). The defendant contended that, under the Limitation Act (XIV of 1859), if the widow had been ousted, limitation would have run against the reversioner (plaintiff) from the date of her ouster, which there was just time for it to do before Limination Act(IX of 1871), and that, to make out his title, the plaintiff ought to show that she was not ousted.

Held, that the widow could not possibly be ousted after she had sold all her interest in the property, and that, if such an event occurred, under the circumstances, it would lie on the defendant to prove it.

Under Art. 140 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) no ouster of a widow would affect the right of reversioner, who can bring a suit within 12 years.

A "belief" in good faith under S.51 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) means not only acting honestly and fairly, but includes due enquiry. So, where a person consciously avoids making an enquiry, though he may be said to have a belief on the matter, it would not be a belief in good faith.

The position of the Crown as landlord of all immoveable property in Calcutta ought not to prevent the application of S. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). 22 Bom 1; 4 C W N=27 Cal 570. Abhoy Churn Ghose v Attarmoni Dassee. 13 C W N 931=3 Ind Cas 415.

By s 151 Bengal Act VI of 1863, the Justices are empowered in making any main or sewers for the drainage of Calcutta, "to carrry such sewers through, across, or under any street, or any place laid out as, or intended for, a street, or any cellar or vault which may be under any of the streets, and (after reasonable notice in writing in that behalf) into, through, or under any enclosed or other land whatsoever making full compensation for any damage done thereby; and if any dispute shall arise touching the amount or apportionment of such compensation, the same shall be settled in the manner hereinafter provided for the settlement of disputes respecting damages and expenses." S 229 provides that "in all cases where any damages, costs, or expenses are by this Act directed to be paid, the amount of the same in case of dispute, shall be ascertained and determined by a Judge of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes". S 226 provides that a month's notice shall be given before any action is brought under the Act against the Justices. By Act V of 1857 the Oriental Gas Company was empowered to lay down pipes and execute other necessary works for the supply of gas to Calcutta. In an application by the Company for a writ of mandamus to compel the Justices to join with the Company in referring to a Judge of the Small Cause Court to ascertain the amount payable to the Company as compensation for damage alleged to have been occasioned to their pipes, etc by the drainage works of the Justices, an affidavit was filed in which the Company's manager stated specifically the loss that had been occasioned, and that he had on personal inspection, satisfied himself that the loss was occasioned by the negligent execution of the drainage works of the Justices. The affidavit on behalf of the Justices stated that "in carrying out such drainage works, the Justices, or their contractors, agents, or servants, have not damaged the pipes, etc, of the Company, and that the Justices deny that they are in any manner liable for the damage in respect of which compensation is sought by the Company, or that they have done or caused any damage to the Company." Held, (per Phear, J), on the facts that the Justices' works had caused damage to the Company's main and pipes. Held, also, that the compensation-clause of S 151, Bengal Act VI of 1863, makes the Justices liable to compensate owners of land, or of any interest in land through which the drainage works are authorized to be carried, for any damage caused by any proceedings in such works. It applies to cases where the works have been done with due care and skill and where but for the Act there would have been a right of action against the Justices. Held, also, that the denial of liability by the Justices was simply a general denial that any damage had been done to the Company; the question therefore between the parties resolved itself into a dispute as to the amount of damage which, by s 151, must be settled in the manner provided by s 229,

4-S.200-Warrant for search and seizure-Jurisdiction of Chairman of Justices and of Justices-Procedure.—

The Chairman of the Justices of Calcutta, on the complaint of the Health Officer, issued a warrant for the seizure of certain articles of food, and without notice to the owners or reducing the proceedings to writing, condemned them as unfit for use. In support of rule nisi for a certiorari for bringing up the order that it might be quashed, it was argued that the Chairman had not, as such, jurisdiction to make the order, and that it was invalid, as notice had not been given, and the proceedings had not been reduced to writing. Cause was shown that the description of the Chairman was immaterial, as he was also a Justice of the Peace, and that such summary proceedings were necessary for the public safety Held that the Act does not empower the Chairman of the Justices, as such, to issue a warrant under the 200th section: that such a warrant must show, on the face of it, that the Justice issuing it had jurisdiction, that the application under s 200 must be reduced to writing, that the evidence taken therefrom must be recorded; and that notice must be given to the party proceeded against. Day & Co v Justices for The Town of Calcutta Bourke O C 232.

of action to the defendants was defective in form and the suit was dismissed on the 11th December 1888 with permission to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit. He gave a notice on 15th December and instituted the present suit on 15th March 1889. It is found out that by the beginning of December 1888 the house was incapable of sustaining further damages. Held,—that the cause of action arose on the day when the damage was done by the subsidence arising from the defendant's acts; that the plaintiff had not shown that a right to sue on which the suit could be maintained, had accrued within 3 months before the institution of the suit and that the suit was barred. That as to whether under S. 357 damage arising out of a subsidence referred to in the notice, but arising after the date of the notice could be recovered without fresh notice and fresh suit, a liberal construction should be put upon S. 357 as to the requirements of the notice.

In 1894, the Municipal Commissioners, acting under Act II of 1888, made valuations of certain properties. On these valuations assessments of rates were made for a period of six years expiring on various dates on or before the 31st March 1900. On the 1st April 1900, Act III of 1899 came into force. Shortly before that date the Commissioners made new valuations. These valuations were made under Act II of 1888, which was then in force, and were all completed prior to 1st April 1900. Objections to the valuations and assessments made therein was filed by the owners under Act II of 1888. The objections were disposed of by the Vice-Chairman and the owners appealed therefrom to the Small Cause Court. These appeals were filed after 1st April 1900 under the provisions of Act III of 1899. The Chief Judge held that the new valuations and assessments were not in force at the commencement of Act III of 1899, within the meaning of sec. 152 thereof and he set them aside. He further declared that the valuations in force at the commencement of Act III of 1899 were the previous valuations of 1894 and he directed these valuations to remain in force for the periods mentioned in Sch. VII, col. 2 of Act III of 1899: Held,—The Small Cause Court has jurisdiction to deal with the entire valuation and to set it aside, the only condition being that the procedure as to the filing of objections to the valuations laid down by sec. 135 of Act II of 1888 has been correctly followed. The procedure laid down by that section as to the form of the notice is directory only. The small Cause Court having jurisdiction to deal with the matter, the High Court cannot interfere either under s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, or sec. 15 of the Charter. The Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction to declare that the assessments under the previous valuations are still in operation and must remain in force for further periods of years.

time was given for objections. On similar notices being served on the owners of the remaining portions and objections being made by some of them it was determined by the Municipality without the knowledge of plaintiff that the new separate assessment should begin from the 1st quarter of 1902, the objections being disposed of on 28th November 1901. The plaintiff himself did not submit any objections in the notice served on him. The Municipality distrained the cattle etc., of the plaintiff for the whole assessment as was in force originally. Plaintiff brought this suit for damages. Held, that it was not in the power of the Corporation or of its officers to override the clear provisions of the Act 2. That having regard to S, 170, cl. 2 of the Act the new separate assessment can come into force only from the quarter next to that when the assessment was made. (3) That the next favourable computation is that the amendment can be deemed to have been made only on 20th October 1902, i. e. the date when the period allowed for his objections expired. (4) That he was liable to pay the old rate for the 4th quarter of 1901 in spite of the express notice of 30–9–01. The non-presentation of bill or notice of demand prior to distress is a mere irregularity and the distress is not on that account illegal ; and all that the plaintiff would be entitled to by reason of that irregularity would be such special damage as he can show he has actually sustained.

Corporation and an Engineer who was not an officer.

Held, that the plan was not bad in law. The section does not require that Engineer should be a permanent Municipal Officer.

Under section 408 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, a notice was served upon all the owners of land of a bustee. One of the owners objected to a certain proposed road in the standard plan going in a certain direction, on which the sub-committee decided that the road be deflected and the standard plan thus modified was approved by the General Committee. The petitioner was then served with a notice under section 408 to carry out the improvements according to the standard plan so modified. but was prosecuted for non-compliance

Held, that the petitioner was not entitled to a fresh notice with regard to the deflection of the road in order to urge her objections to the deflection before the General Committee.

The law contemplates that all persons interested will be present before the sub-committee and will present not merely their own objections to the scheme but also any objection which they may have to any modification of the scheme on the objections raised by others.

The Calcutta Municipal Act gives the General Committee full discretion to proceed either under section 406 or under section 409.

It is not possible that the deflection of the road may be an improvement on the original plan but that in itself is not sufficient under the law to invalidate the proceedings of the General Committee if the whole scheme was one calculated to effect a necessary improvement in the land covered by the bustee.

The sub-committee has power under the Calcutta Municipal Act to sanction any amendment of the original plan even though it be merely to avoid expense and not for the purpose of improving the bustee. Srimati Atarmani Dasi v The Corporation of Calcutta. 8 C L J 507 = 12 C W N 1116.

Chundra Coomar Biswas v Calcutta Corporation 30 Cal 421.

19—S 557 cl (d)—Presumption statutory—Land 'District and 'Re-assesment' meaning-of Valuation, time from which takes effect

The term land as used in S 577, cl (d) of the Calcutta Municipal Act (III of 1899) includes bustee land and is not restricted in its application to building land The term District as used in the proviso to S 557 cl (d) of the Act is equivalent to the term Ward and the two terms are synoymous The meaning of the term 'District as used in the Act cannot be ascertained by reference to an order issued subsequently by the Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation for administration purposes The term 'Re assessment as used in S 557 cl (d) of the Act is equivalent to re valuation (assessment signifying the official valuation of property for the purpose of taxation or the value assigned to property for the purpose) and not the re imposition of rate or tax The re valuation of bustee land must not be imagined to take place by operation of law from year to year The valuation does not mean merely the amount of the valuation, but covers the whole process or act of valuation when substantial part of the act of assessment or valuation is completed before the commencement of the Act of 1899 it cannot be reasonably maintained that there was a re assessment after the commencement of the Act, because some objection to the re assessment or re valuation might have been preferred or disposed of after that date 26 Cal 74 (77) referred to The presumption laid down in cl (d) of S 557 of the Calcutta Municipal Act (III of 1899) does not apply to a case where there has been no re assessment made after the commencement of the Act for the whole district or ward in which the land acquired is situated The Secretary of State for India in Council v Belchambers 3 C L J 169=10 C W N 289=33 Cal 296.

A Bye law must conform with the provisions of the enactment under which it purports to be made.

Bye law, section 1 so far as it relates to obstruction comes within the provisions of clause (18) of section 559 of the Calcutta Municipal Act (III of 1899)

Section 561 (b) only authorises the penalty for the continuance of a breach here notice follows breach The penalty is attached to breach which only arises after the notice and there is no provision for any subsequent notice which could come within the provisions of section 561 requiring that there should be notice after breach

The Bye law purports to create a continuous breach which is outside of and fails to comply with the provisions of section 501 clause (b) under which alone it can claim vitality There is, therefore no provision for a continuing breach that could take the case outside the provision of section 631 of the Calcutta Municipal Act

Valuation in s 135 of the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act (Bengal Act II of 1888) means not the amount of valuation only but also the process or Act of valuation. Vice-president of the Municipality on the objection of the rate-payer to the former valuation, took evidence and fixed the valuation within 6 years from this valuation. The Municipality made a revaluation to which the rate-payer objected on the ground that the Municipality had no authority to make a revaluation within 6 years from the last valuation. On appeal to the Small Cause Court Judge the objection of the rate payer was allowed. Held—that inasmuch as the objection raised by the rate payer was an objection to the 9.—Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act, Ss. 236, 241.

The Calcutta Municipal Act III of 1889 B C relates only to acts done after the commencement of that Act, including acts done to complete a building commenced before the Act came into force—S. 449 (3) relates to things done in breach of S. 391, which itself does not relate to the alteration of or addition to a building commenced before the Act came into operation. S. 8 of the Bengal General Clauses Act saves the operation of all repealed Acts in such a case, where the building was commenced when the old Act was in force. The words "material alteration of the structure of any house" in s. 236 of Act II of 1888 B. C, contemplated the erection of anything on a site attached to, or detached from any building standing on it, so as to alter the structure of the house, i. e. of the house with all buildings standing on that site. Sanction was necessary for such building, and failure to obtain the same entitled liability under s.241 of that Act. Where. therefore a building detached from other houses but standing on the same site, was commenced before Act III of 1899 (B C) came into force, but was completed after that period:—Held, that Act II of 1888 (B C) applied and that sanction was necessary under s.236 of the latter Act, and the liability under s.241 of that Act continued. But an order of demolition passed thereon under s 449 (8) of Act III of 1899 (B C) was illegal. Kesub Chandra Sen v Calcutta Municipal Corporation. 7 C W N 374.

There is no statutory provision enabling the Corporation to withdraw a sanction to build when once granted, even if such sanction be a conditional one. On the non-performance of the condition by the grantee, the Corporation has legal remedies in a Civil Court by injunction or otherwise for enforcement of the condition. The special limitation provided for by sec. 427 of Act II of (B C) 1888 does not apply to a withdrawal of a sanction to build once given, for such withdrawal cannot be considered as an act done or purporting to be done, within the meaning of that section. On the Corporation's failing to pass orders within a fortnight of an application for sanction to build, the right of the applicant for sanction to build under sec.250 of the above Act becomes an absolute one. The Corporation is bound by the acts of its officers. Tullarm and Rajendra Nath Sanyal v The Corporation of Calcutta. 7 C W N 329.

Canal.

1.—Hajiwah Canal in Multan District—Rights of Excavators and Government.

The plaintiffs instituted this suit against Government claiming proprietary right in the Hajiwah Canal in the District of Multan, which was supplied with water from Sutlej river. The Canal was excavated by the plaintiff's ancestors with the sanction of Government in the year 1861 at a cost of about nine lakhs of rupees. It passed through lands owned by persons not parties to this suit, whose consent plaintiffs' ancestors had obtained under agreement to supply them with water. In the Settlement Records the Canal was entered as the property of the plaintiffs' father. The Government waste lands of over 60,000 acres, which were farmed by plaintiffs and others, were incapable of cultivation for want of water The Government sanctioned in proprietary right a grant of this land to plaintiffs' father. Upon the death of plaintiffs' father disputes arose among his sons, and owing to such quarrel Government took over possession and management of the Canal. The Government denied the plaintiff's right to the Canal outside the 60,000 acres grant and relied on the 8th clause of an agreement executed by the parties. The clause was as follows:—The canal dug by the grantee and known as the Hajiwah shall for the present remain under the management of the said grantee: Provided always that in consideration of the promises that the said grantor, his successor and assigns shall at all times hereafter, whenever he or they shall think necessary be entitled without the consent of, or permission from the said grantee, his heirs, legal representatives and assigns, to take into his or their own hands and control the management and distribution of the water of the said canal without payment of any compensation whatsoever, and further to clear the said canal and recover the cost of clearance and management by a canal rate to be levied on the area irrigated. Held, that the ancestors of the plaintiffs acquired a proprietary interest in so much of the Government lands taken for the purpose of the canal as required for its construction and maintenance, and also a right to have the waters of the Sutlej River admitted into the canal so long as the canal was used for the purpose for which it was originally designed. The principles applicable to such cases are, "If a man under a verbal agreement with a landlord for a certain interest in land or, what amounts to the same thing, under an expectation created and encouraged by the landlord that he shall have a certain interest, takes possession of such land with the consent of the landlord, and upon the faith of such promise or expectation with the knowledge of the landlord and without objection by him lays out money upon the land, a Court of Equity will compel the landlord to give effect to such promise or expectation, I E. and I, Ap. 129 at p.170, 1865. Held, also that the Governmext were entitled under the agreement to hold possession and control of the land so long as they considered it neces-

Certain land situate within the limits of a contonment was granted free of rent for building purposes by the military authorities Under the Military Regulations relating to such grants such a grant could not be resumed by the Government without a month's notice and without the payment of the value of such buildings which might have been authorised to be erected. The land was subsequently resumed by the civil authorities, and the land being within Municipal limits, the ground-rents on it were assigned to the Municipality. The Municipal Committee having demanded ground-rent in respect of the buildings erected on such land under such grant, from the representative in title of the original grantee, and the latter having refused to pay the same or to vacate the land, the Secretary of State for India in Council sued him in the Civil Court for a declaration of proprietary right to the land, for its assessment to ground-rent, and, in the event of the refusal of the defendant to pay such rent, when fixed, for his ejectment therefrom, and for mesne profits of the land for six years. The cause of action was stated in the plaint to be the refusal of the defendant to pay ground-rent or to accept a lease or to surrender the land, after a notice to that effect had been issued to him by the Municipal Committee as the plaintiff's agents.

Held that the Municipal Committee were the plaintiff's duly authorised agents to lease and obtain rent for the land occupied by the defendant's buildings with their compounds; that such notice was properly issued in that character on behalf of the plaintiff; and that the defendant's subsequent refusal, to pay rent, or to accept a lease or evacuate the premises, amounted to a sufficient denial of the plaintiff's title to afford him a good cause of action; that, assuming that no agreement to pay rent existed, the plaintiff was entitled to demand and recover reasonable compensation for the use and occupation of the land by the defendant; that the suit was maintainable in the Civil Court, and it had power to grant the plaintiff the relief sought; that by the conditions of the grant by the military authorities the plaintiff was not disqualified from demanding ground-rent for the land before he had paid the defendant the value of the buildings, but that looking to those conditions, it would not be fair or equitable to grant the plaintiff a decree, pure and simple for the ejectment of the defendant, but he should be put under the condition that, if, in case of the defendant's refusal to pay the rent fixed, he desired to eject him, the value of the buildings as cantonment residences must first be determined, and, when determined, must be tendered to the defendant, and if the latter refused to accept it, the plaintiff would then be entitled to eject him.

On the question whether the Appellant's house situated within the Poona Cantonment was held by the appellants in proprietary right or under the military or cantonment tenure, so as to be resumable by the Government at their pleasure subject to the payment of compensation for buildings erected by the tenant.

Held, that, assuming that the house existed at or before the time the cantonment was formed there was, under the circumstances of the case, a strong probability that the owner was duly compensated along with other proprietors for the change in his position as owner to that of licensee :

That permission to build bungalows, though frequently given did not carry with it any sort of proprietary right, and the buildings were liable to expropriation at a price to be fixed by the authorities.

(4) Resumption of, with buildings thereon.

4—Resumption of, with buildings thereon—Notice—Payment of compensation—Land in Cantonment—Resumption—Government.

In 1862, E, the predecessor-in title of the defendants, obtained from the Government the land in dispute under the General order of the 31st July 1865. The General order provided among other things : 'Permission to occupy such ground in a Military cantonment confers no proprietary right, it continues the property of state. It is resumable at the pleasure of Government, but in all practicable cases one month's notice of resumption will be given and the value of the buildings which may have been erected thereon, as estimated by a committee, will be paid to the owner." E erected a bungalow on the land and in 1874 he sold the bungalow and all his interest in the land to H, whose interest devolved at his death on his executors the defendants. On the 19th October, 1903, a notice was given on behalf of the Bombay Government to the first defendant that he should on the 1st December, 1903, quit the possession of premises and deliver them to the Cantonment Magistrate of Poona : and that the Government was prepared to pay to him Rs. 15,500. The defendants having declined to comply with the notice, the Secretary of State for India in Council filed a suit to recover possession of the property from the defendants. The defendants in answer contended that one month's notice to the remaining two executors (defendants 2 and 3) was not given and that the value of the buildings had not been estimated or tendered. Held (1) that the giving of notice was not a condition precedent, the provision about it being nothing more than a statement of what will be done where praticable for the purpose of saving the occupant from such inconvenience as an immediate resumption might involve. That even if it be assumed that a notice was a condition precedent to the right of resumption, it was clear that the three executors on their own showing were joint occupants and notice given to one of them satisfied the provision. That payment was not made a condition precedent to resumption, though no doubt the right to that payment would arise on resumption. Secretary of State v Vamanrao. 7 Bom L R 735=30 Bom 137.

But it would be going a long way beyond this to hold that the officer commanding the troops could be held empowered to alienate in perpetuity, land forming part of the Cantonment, and undoubtedly Hyderabad territory, for a purpose wholly unconnected with military requirements. Pestonji v Edulji. 10 Bom L R 287=12 C W N 465=4 N L R 65=7 C L J 401=3 M L T 339=18 M L J 199=14 Bur L R 102=35 Cal 478, P C=35 I A 79.

Sixty years had not elapsed since the acquisition of the land by the defendant. Held that the suit was not barred by limitation.

A party who builds a house in Cantonments must be taken to have derived his title to occupy the land from the Military authorities, and their power to make a grant of it can only be co-extensive with their own tenure of the property and no assignment by them can subsist beyond the period the land might remain subject to Cantonment regulations. 6 All 148 Ref. Bank of Upper India v The Secretary of State for India in Council. 2 A L J 1194.

10.—Landlord and tenant—House in cantonments—Liability of landlord to repair—Damages for injuries caused from non repair.

On 15th November, 1875, plaintiff, Dr. Tandy, rented from defendant a house situate in the Cantonment of Peshawar, without any agreement in writing and without any special terms. On 13th December 1875, an earthquake took place in the Peshawer valley, which injured and shook the house.

Shortly after the earthquake defendant was shown over the house and requested to repair it. The defendant's attention was drawn to the cracked walls, but not to the roof, which was concealed from view by a ceiling. Repairs were executed by the defendant, but not to the roof, which neither he nor Dr. Tandy believed to be unsafe On 13th March 1876, the roof of the house gave way, and falling in, seriously injured Mrs. Tandy. By Para 1873 of the Bengal Army Regulations the landlord of a house is bound, and can be compelled, to repair a house in cantonments.

The cause of the roof falling in was the great weight of mud on the beams and supports, which were unfit for the heavy load upon them; and also the fact that the wood-work or a great portion of it, was unsound.

In a suit by Dr. and Mrs. Tandy for damages, held, that the defendant, as owner of a house in cantonments, was liable to keep the same in repair. and having failed in his obligation was liable to an action for damages sustained by the falling-in of the roof through the want of proper repair.

Cantonments.

1.—Landlord and Tenant—Bengal Military Regulations of 1836, Promulgation of, in the Punjab-Commanding a trespass—Invasion of proprietary right by convening committee under the Regulations—Act XVIII 1850.

By order of the Governor-General in Council, of the 12th September 1836, which was to take effect from the date of its promulgation at the different stations of the Bengal Army, applications for unoccupied ground for the purpose (inter alia) of being built upon, such ground being within the limits of a Military Cantonment, were to be made in the first instance to the commanding officer of the station, to be forwarded and submitted for the orders of Government; the applications were to be written in a form annexed to the Governor-General's Order; and the grantee was to subscribe to certain conditions, one of which was the following, viz, that all houses in a military cantonment being the property of persons not belonging to the army, which might be deemed by the commanding officer of the station suitable for the accommodation of officers, should be claimable for purchase or hire at the option of the owner, in the former case at a valuation, in the latter at a rent, to be fixed (in case of the parties disagreeing) by a committee of arbitration constituted in manner provided by the Governor-General's Order. This condition was subsequently modified by several G. G O's until by No.1,001 of 8th December 1864, the condition was stated to be that the owner of any house in a military cantonment not occupied by a person belonging to the army on duty at the station, might be required to rent the house to any Military Officer belonging to the station who might require it to reside in, if the officer commanding the station were satisfied that there was no other suitable house available; that in every such case, if the owner should offer to sell, rather than let, the house to the officer who had so obtained the house, and if the offer were not accepted, the officer should at any time be required to vacate the house within a week of his receiving notice that the house had been sold to another Military Officer on duty at the station who required it for his own residence: and that the rent to be paid in such cases, or the price of the house when the officer consented to purchase it, should be fixed (if the parties disagreed as to the amount) by a committee of arbitration. None of these Regulations were formally promulgated at Rawalpindi.

Plaintiff in 1850 made a verbal application to the Officer Commanding the station through Captain Y, of the 4th Regiment N. I., for permission to occupy certain land at Rawalpindi, and to build a dwelling house thereon. After a time, plaintiff was informed by Captain Y that the permission was granted Plaintiff did not subscribe to any conditions, but the land was marked out; and plaintiff built upon it, and from that time, he remained in undisturbed possession until October 1870. In that month, Captain W wished to occupy the house built by the plaintiff on this land, as a monthly tenant, at a rent of Rs 80, but as Captain P was willing to take the house for a year certain at the same rent, plaintiff refused to let it to Captain W, for any time less than a year, and accepted the offer of Captain P. The defendant, Major General M, commanding the Rawalpindi Division on the application of Captain W ordered a committee of arbitration to be assembled; this application was made before the house was actually let to Captain P. The committee though only convened to assess the rent, found that Captain W had a prior right to occupy the house as a monthly tenant, and that the rent (Rs 80) was reasonable. The defendant approved of this finding; and his approval was communicated to Captains W and P the latter being informed that the house was not available for him. Captain W made a forcible entry, and after occupying the house for a few months during which time plaintiff treated him as a trespasser he vacated it.

Plaintiff sued the defendant for damages for procuring or commanding this trespass on the part of Captain W, and for an invasion of his (plaintiff's) proprietary rights in convening and confirming the finding of the committee of arbitration contending that the Regulations above-mentioned did not apply to him, first, because when the Regulations were issued, the Punjab was not subject to the Bengal Military Regulations, nor was it even a Province of the Crown, and that they had not after it was conquered been formally promulgated at Rawalpindi, and secondly because plaintiff had not subscribed to the conditions.

Held, that a formal promulgation of the Regulations in question at the different stations was only intended for existing cantonments, which were governed by the earlier orders, and not for cantonments that might afterwards be established inasmuch as the latter would as a matter of course be governed by the same Regulations as the former; and that plaintiff held the land subject to the Regulations.

Held, also, that plaintiff was not justified in refusing to let the house to Captain W, as a monthly tenant (or unless it was taken for a year) and in letting it to Captain P.

Held, also, that defendant had not ordered Captain W, to take possession of the house, but had merely expressed an opinion that he was entitled to possession, and that even if what the defendant did, amounted to an order to Captain W, which the latter was bound to obey, that order would only justify Captain W.'s taking possession in a legal manner, and the defendant was not responsible for Captain W's forcible or illegal entry into the house.

Held, also, that defendant had not invaded plaintiff's proprietary rights in convening the committee of arbitration, as the rent for a monthly tenancy had to be fixed, plaintiff having only consented to take a certain rent for a yearly tenancy.

Held, also, that the plaintiff had no cause of action in respect of defendant's approval of the committee's finding that Captain W had a prior right, for first, inasmuch as in convening the committee to assess the rent, the defendant admitted the priority of Captain W to the occupation of the house, the committee's expression of opinion on the point approved of by the defendant was immaterial; and secondly, in confirming the decision of the committee, which was final, the defendant only unnecessarily expressed an opinion even if he had exceeded his duty as General of the Division in expressing it.

Held, also, that there was not want of due care and caution on the part of the defendant in convening the committee; and that unless he acted maliciously, he was not responsible, as in convening the committee and confirming their finding he acted quasi-judicially. Semble, if he did not act quasi-judicially, but called the committee under a mistake. he was not answerable unless he acted maliciously.

Held, also, that defendant was not a " person acting judicially " within the meaning of Act XVIII of 1850. Poley v Mc Murdo P R 71 of 1873.

2—Landlord and Tenant—Hire of house by prostitute in Mooltan Cantonment—Agreement to pay rent at specified rate—Subsequent refusal to pay at higher rate than that fixed by Cantonment Committee when permitting landlord to build—Act IX of 1872, Chapter II—Undue influence—Coercion.—

Plaintiffs, who were the owners of certain houses in the prostitutes' quarters in the Mooltan Cantonment, sued for arrears of rent alleged to be due by defendant, who was a prostitute occupying one of the said houses, under an agreement in writing to pay rent at the rate of Rs. 2 per mensem. Defendant pleaded that she executed the written agreement under protest, and under the exercise of undue influence by the plaintiffs. The lower Court gave effect to this plea, relying on the fact that the plaintiffs had obtained permission to build the houses in question from the Cantonment Committee on certain conditions, one of which was that they should not charge a higher rate of rent than Rs. 1-8-0 per mensem for a house of the description of that for which rent at Rs. 2 per mensem was claimed in the present case.

Held, that the above facts furnished no valid answer to the plaintiffs' claim; that the present suit not being one between the plaintiffs and the Cantonment Committee, but between the plaintiffs and a third party, it was not open to such party to take advantage of the agreement alleged to have been entered into between the plaintiffs and the Cantonment Committee for the purpose of avoiding performance of a contract entered into between her and the plaintiffs; and as that contract was not in itself illegal, or open to objection on any of the grounds specified in Chapter II of the Contract Act, the defendant was bound by it. Mohan Lal v. Under Sec. 10 of the Cantonment Act XIII of 1889, the Cantonment Judge has jurisdiction up to Rs. 500 only in the absence of any order of the local Government to the contrary. In a suit filed in the First Class Subordinate Judge at Belgaum, in its small cause jurisdiction, to recover Rs. 172 as arrears of rent, a question having arisen whether the court pecuniary limit of whose jurisdiction as the Court of Small Causes was Rs. 500, or the Court of Belgaum Cantonment Magistrate invested with small cause powers, had jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

Held, that the Cantonment Court alone had jurisdiction. By notification No. 2505, published at page 314 of the Bombay Government Gazettee for 1887, the pecuniary limit of the Belgaum-Cantonment Court is declared to be Rs. 200; and the declaration, which was made under Act III of 1880 (which is an Act repealed by the Cantonments Act XIII of 1889) is kept alive by Sec. 2 cl. 2 of the Cantonment Act, and it is, therefore, such an order of the Local Government as is contemplated by Sec. 10 of Act XIII of 1889.

(5) Delivery of goods carried by sea.

5—Landing goods—Custom of port of Bombay—Possession of goods.—

A carrier by sea is obliged to make an actual delivery of goods carried by him to the consignee, but such prima facie obligation may be affected by the custom of the port where the goods are to be delivered. Neither by the custom of the port of Bombay nor by the provisions of the Customs Act is the master of a ship bound to wait fifteen days before commencing to land his cargo; but within a reasonable time after the arrival of his ship—48 hours in the case of a sailing vessel, and somewhat less in the case of a steamer—he is at liberty to land goods if the consignee has not sent boats for them; and such landing is not unlawful, nor a breach of contract as carrier on the part of the master. The landing of the goods under the above circumstances and setting them apart for the consignee do not constitute a delivery of them to the consignee; but such goods, after being so landed, continue in the possession of the master as carrier. Such a person is bound to exercise reasonable and ordinary care in respect of baggage entrusted to him, but is not responsible for any loss which may not arise from the negligence or default of himself or his servants, he not being a common carrier bound to ensure the safe conveyance of the baggage against all risk, save the act of God or the Queen's enemies. He is to be regarded as a bailee for hire, and the fact that he does not deliver the baggage at the end of the journey should be accepted as prima facie proof that the loss has been occasioned by negligence for which he is responsible, and consequently the onus of proof lies on him that reasonable care was exercised by him. Todal Singh v Thompson. 2 N W 237.

(7) Conveyance of goods by Government bullock train-Concld.

Goods conveyed by Government bullock train are not entrusted to the Post Office for conveyance within the meaning of Act XIV of 1866. In respect of the Government bullock train, Government must be regarded as an ordinary bailee for hire, and not as a common carrier. As such bailee, apart from any special condition limiting its liability, it is bound to take ordinary care of goods entrusted to it for conveyance; and if goods are stolen through the negligence of its servants, it is liable to make good the loss to the consignor. But it may, as may any other bailee for hire, limit its liability by conditions, provided those conditions are not repugnant to public policy or positive law. A condition that it will not be responsible for loss occasioned by the negligence of its servants is certainly not repugnant to positive law, nor a condition repugnant to public policy.

10—Onus probandi.—

In an action to recover damages for injury caused to the goods by the negligence of the defendant as a common carrier, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to give evidence of such negligence unless the defendant has shown that the injury was occasioned by a cause which was within the exceptions. Then the plaintiff would be at liberty to show that there was negligence so as to deprive the defendant of the benefit of the exceptions.

(10) Passenger's luggage, loss of-Concld.

Plaintiff, who was a passenger by a steamer, which belonged to the M Co, a French Company carrying on business in Calcutta, and which was wrecked, sued the Company for the loss of his luggage. It was found that the wreck and subsequent loss of the luggage in question was the result of the negligence of the Company's servants.

The plaintiff, who did not understand the French language, after taking and paying for his passage, it appeared, had been furnished with a passage—ticket in the French language.

The Company relied upon certain conditions printed on the ticket, exempting the Company from liability for damage to luggage unregistered. It was also a condition that the ticket should not be available unless signed, and that the passenger accepting it should be bound by all the conditions printed thereon. The plaintiff did not sign the ticket, nor did he register his luggage. It did not, however, appear that any facilities for registration were afforded by the company. Held, that the defendant Company being a foreign Company were not a common carrier, that the plaintiff was bound by the conditions on the ticket, but that the condition could not relieve the Company from the consequences of their own negligence. Held, further, that in order to establish a defence upon the ground that the plaintiff's luggage was not registered, it was necessary for the defendant company to prove that it was ready and willing to register the plaintiff's luggage, and that plaintiff did not in fact register it.

Held, also, that inasmuch as the contract had been made in Calcutta, the defendant company was bound by the provisions of section 151 of the Contract Act,

The form of the risk note was approved of by the Governor General in Council under Section 10 of Act IV of 1879. 20—Carriers—Common carriers—Carriers by sea—Law applicable to—Non-liability for loss —Misfeasance and negligence.

Carriers by sea for hire between certain "termini" on a certain route are common carriers. The law applicable to them is the lex loci contractus; and where the contract is made in Calcutta, the lex loci is the law of England. A common carrier may enter into any contract so as to protect himself, but he can only do so by clear, definite and unambiguous words. Loss incurred by the carriers delivering goods in rainy weather instead of waiting to deliver till the weather was fine is loss occasioned by negligence and not by misfeasance and was covered by the exemption clause in the plaint contract. 6 Cal. 227 dist. Reference under Small Cause Courts Act, S. 69 28 Mad 400,

(17) Nature of obligation of common carriers-Origin of the liability.

21—Nature of obligation of common carriers —Origin of the liability—Shipowner.

The obligation imposed by Law on common carriers has nothing to do with contract in its origin, but it is duty cast upon common carriers by reason of their exercising a public employment for reward, and a breach of such duty is a breach of the Law and for this breach an action lies, founded on the Common Law, which action wants not the aid of a contract to support it. Held, that the Common Law liability of a carrier in the position of the defendant rests on the same foundation as the liability of a common carrier.

Held, that a carrier by water impliedly engages that his vessel shall be water-tight. Held, also that, under Sub-S. Consequently the bags became damaged and were destroyed on the orders of the Municipal authorities as being unfit for consumption Plaintiff sued the company for damages.

The bill of lading ran thus:—

Held, per Subrahmania Aiyar, J—The Company, in landing the goods as they did without precautions to prevent damage to them, failed to take the same care of the plaintiff's goods as a prudent person would, in similar circumstances have taken of like goods of his own, and the damage was, therefore, the result of the Company's negligence for which they were liable. 24.—Perishable goods shipped—Destruction of decayed goods at port by order of Municipal authorities—Obliteration of marks—Portion of goods not identified—Rest delivered—Claim for short delivery - Negligence—Liability of carrying steamship Company.

In July 1907, 2,035 baskets of onions were shipped from Madras to Moulmein by the B, I. S, N. Co. They travelled to Rangoon by a certain steamship and were there transhipped to two other steamships and conveyed to Moulmein in three different voyages. Three of the consignees of these onions were A, E, and P, and to them were consigned 100, 100 and 150 baskets respectively. A pleaded that he only received 70 baskets, and so he sued the Company for short delivery of 30 baskets. Under similar circumstances, E and P respectively sued the Company for short delivery of 25 and 54 baskets. The Company denied their liability by reason of the clauses of their bills of lading, and they especially relied on the endorsement on the bills: "Onion bags and baskets frail. Carried at shippers' risk. Steamer not responsible for condition or outturn of contents." On the merits of the case, they pleaded that the 2,035 baskets were shipped to 17 consignees in Moulmein and arrived in Rangoon on the 21st July (a Sunday, when no transhipment is done), and that the consignment was re shipped to Moulmein as per account stated by them. The Company stated that, by order of the Municipality, 176 baskets and 11 bags, containing 50 baskets, were destroyed in Moulmein, owing to the deterioration of their contents and that, after delivery, 32 Baskets still remained in the godown, and they urged that, owing to the barkets being frail and their contents having become bad and the consequent obliteration and destruction of all marks, it was impossible to say to whom any portion of the 258 baskets were consigned. The plaintiffs A, E, and P were invited to bear a rateable proportion of the loss. The plaintiffs had also been offered a portion of the 32 baskets in the godown, which they refused to accept with result that, on the 30th August the whole 32 baskets were destroyed as rotten. These baskets bore no marks. The plaintiffs did not urge that the onions had been damaged owing to the negligence of the defendant Company, but contended that the defendant Company had to show what had become of each cargo consigned to them. The company, however, did account for the whole 2,035 baskets consigned to them.

Held, that, having regard to the perishable nature of the goods, the frail packing, and the terms on which the Company undertook to carry in the absence of any proof of negligence on the part of the carriers, the Company could not be held liable for all the baskets destroyed by order of the Municipality and that the loss should fall on the owners of the goods; and that with respect to the baskets bearing no marks and, hence, undelivered, the several owners of the consignments became tenants in common of the baskets in proportion to the quantities which should have been delivered to them respectively, and the plaintiffs, who refused to take shares though offered could not hold the defendant Company responsible, (L R 3 C P 427, and L R A C (1894) 494, 505, 507, Fol:) The British India Steam Navigation Co. v. agent at another port, and on arrival at that port were placed by the company on the foreshore, where, however, they were destroyed under the orders of the Municipal authorities, on the ground that they had become damaged by rain and unfit for consumption. The condition in the bill of lading ran thus:—"In all cases and under all circumstances, the liability of the Company shall absolutely cease, when the goods are free of ship's tackle, and thereupon, the goods shall be, for all purposes and in every respect, at the risk of the shipper or consignee." In a suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the value of the rice so damaged. Held, per White C J and Sankaran Nair, J—The contract was not terminated by the deposit of the goods on the foreshore, and it was for the defendants to show that the plaintiff's goods were ready for delivery at the time they were damaged and not for plaintiffs to show they were not ready; and as there is no evidence to show that the bags were ever ready for delivery by being separated from the rest, the defendants were negligent. Per Wallis, J.—The plaintiff's claim is not so much for non-delivery of the bags, as for failure to deliver them in good order and condition, and the plaintiffs failed to prove that the condition of the bags, when put at their disposal, justified them in refusing to take delivery. Held, also per White C J; and Sankaran Nair J. (Wallis, J. contra),—A ship-owner is not exempted from liability for negligence, unless the contract which exempts him is both clear and express; and as the contract in this case, though clear, is not express, the defendants are not protected by their bill of lading (b). Per White C J and Wallis, J,—The law of the United States of America, forbids a carrier to exempt himself by contract from liability for negligence, while the law of England does not. On a question of this character the Courts in India ought to follow the law of England. (10 Cal 489, 28 Mad 400 Ref.). Per Sankaran Nair J.—The question of liability is not concluded by authority in India. A rule of English Common Law ought not to be followed, when it is opposed to the principles followed and acted upon by the Indian Legislature. A contract exempting a ship-owner from liability for the negligence of himself or his servants in not taking the care required by s. 151, Contract Act, is contrary to public policy and therefore, void under S. 23 of that Act. Such an exemption clause is clearly 26—27—Negligence—Attempting to board a tramcar in motion—Injury to passenger-Damages—Liability of the Tramway Company.

The plaintiff, in attempting to board a tramcar of the defendant Company which was in motion, set his foot on foot-board but failed to get a firm grip of hand bar; and before he could raise himself into the car he slipped and fell, and had his toes injured by the wheels of the car. He sued to recover from the Tramway Company damages for injury, alleging that the foot-board was loose and not properly fixed and the Company was therefore liable for negligence.

Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover damages, as he himself was negligent in trying to get into a car while in motion.

If a passenger chooses to attempt to enter or leave a moving car, he does so at his own risk. It is not what a prudent or a reasonable man should or would do, and if he does it and sustains injury while in the act of doing so, it would be an accident or a misfortune, for which the Company could in no event be held liable. Temulji Jamsetji Joshi v. the amount of the debt due from the 1st defendant:

Held, that the 2nd defendant Company was not liable, and the document relied on in the suit was not a mate's receipt.

Mate's receipts are not bills of lading, though they are sometimes referred to as such. A bill of lading is a mercantile document in use in connection with carriage of goods in a seagoing vessel. To no document, given by an officer of an inland waters carrier, could the term and the law relating to mate's receipts as known to mercantile law be properly applied.

Where an instrument is by the custom of trade transferable like cash by delivery and is capable of being sued on by the person holding it pro tempore, it is entitled to the name of at negotiable instrument, and the property in it passes to a bona fide transferee for value. The 2nd defendant Company's receipt in this case could not be held to fulfil these conditions:

Held, further, that the Rate Circular and its wording did not put the Company under any legal obligation or duty to any one except the persons with whom it contracted, and that consequently the plaintiffs had no right of action against it.

Held, also that, even if the plaintiffs had given notice of their claim to the paddy, the so-called mate's receipt not being a negotiable instrument, the Company would not have been bound to deliver them. The Irrawaddy Flotila Co v T S Nachiappa Chetty. 9 Ind Cas 465.

4.—Ss.6,8,9-Common carriers, liability of-The Carriers Act (III of 1865)-How related to English Carriers Act (II of Geo. IV and I Will. IV., C.68) —Effect of special contract between carrier and owner of goods—Two-fold risks of carriers—Exemption clauses, construction of—Insurer who has paid owner for loss of goods due to carrier's negligince, position of—Subrogation—Right of suit of owner—Damages recoverable by owner and equity in his hands in favour of insurer—Insurance policy containing stipulation, "warranted no recourse against carriers"—Damages not proved at hearing-Failure if to lead to dismissal of suit.

The relative rights and liabilities of common carriers and those for whom they carry are outside the Indian Contract Act and are governed by the principle of the English Common Law as modified by the Carriers Act of 1865. A common carrier therefore in India is subject to two distinct classes of liability, the one for the losses for which he is liable as an insurer, the other for losses for which he is liable under his obligation to carry safely. Speaking generally the first of these are insurable risks from which the element of default is absent,the second are risks of conveyance in which that element is present. The Carriers Act of 1865 has in some degree modified this position.

The effect of Ss.6,8 and 9 of the Carriers Act of 1865 is that the liability of a common carrier for the loss of goods, not being of the description contained in the schedule to the Act may be limited by special contract signed by the owner, save where such loss shall have arisen from the negligence or criminal act of the carrier or any of his agents or servants

The Ganges Manufacturing Co Ltd, had entered into an agreement with a number of Steamer Companies, the defendant carrying Company amongst them, to have all their jute carried from certain ports by one or other of the Steamer Companies for a term of 5 years Cl 10 of the agreement provided that the 'Jute Company undertakes to hold the Steamer Companies harmless and indemnified from and against all claims which can be insured against and covered by an ordinary F P A Policy, that is to say, against claims for actual or constructive total loss only of the goods insured, and not against claims for partial loss and damage unless the vessel be stranded, sunk or burnt and the Steamer Companies agree that they shall have no right to claim on the cargo for general average' a consignment of 1,000 bales of jute was shipped by one G. R. Chakravarty on the defendants Company's flat "Lemro" for delivery at the Jute Company's Mill, the bill of lading being endorsed to the said Jute Company, it being stated on the back thereof, amongst other conditions, that the Company will not be liable for the loss of or damage to any property delivered to them to be carried, unless such loss or damage shall have arisen from the negligence or criminal act of their servants or agents '

Held, on a construction of the agreement, that the exemption of cl 10 did not extend to loss arising from the negligence or criminal act of the carrying company.

It has been the policy of the English Courts, in dealing with exemption clauses to recognise the distinction between the insurance risks and the carrying risks of a common carrier, and to construe them as not extending to carrying risks in the absence of clear words to that effect. In India where there is a statutory prohibition against exempting a carrier from loss arising from negligence or criminal acts, there is perhaps an even stronger reason for adopting this canon of construction, at any rate, within the limits implied by this prohibition.

The above rule is not limited in its application to bills of lading

The flat carrying jute having caught fire so that it had to be scuttled, under S 9 of the Carriers Act, it was held (in the absence of evidence to the contrary), that the loss was due to the negligence or criminal act of the carrying company or its agents or servants.

A policy of insurance in respect of the lost jute issued by plaintiff, Insurance Company, contained a stipulation, warranted no recourse against carriers'

Held that the stipulation in the policy of insurance did not amount to a relinquishment by the Insurance Company in respect of risks not exempted Claims in respect of losses which had arisen from the negligence of the carrying company its agents or servants were therefore not relinquished under the clause

The Insurance Company in the present case claiming against the carrying company by way of subrogation and not of assignment had no right to sue in their own name, and the suit could only be brought in the name of the Jute Company.

Held that substantially the present suit was by the Jute Company to recover damages from the carrying company and any matter that could be pleaded against the Jute Company would be an effective answer though in truth the purpose of the suit was to benefit the Insurance Company

Plaintiffs ought to have proved the amount of damages at the hearing but it would not in the circumstances be right to visit their default in this regard with the penalty of a dismissal of the suit. It is preliminary to a right to assert a claim to property, and is incidental to the right to recover property which may be lost to the caste by misuse or misappropriation.

A suit brought by plaintiffs on be-half of themselves and others as members of the Cutchi Memon Jamat, to have full and free inspection of the books of account kept by the defendants in their capacity as trustees of caste fund and properties, is maintainable in Civil Courts. It is the assertion of a pure legal right and it is no way affects the "internal autonomy of the caste" or "its social relations."

There is no analogy whatever between a Corporation as known to English Law and an Indian caste. The principles governing the rights of members of caste to inspection of accounts of caste properties must be governed by considerations very different from those governing the rights of members of Corporation seeking inspection of the documents of such Corporation.

Questions which go to the very root of a suit ought as a rule to be raised in the pleadings.

A defendant can be permitted to raise a question of jurisdiction, not specifically pleaded only if he does so at the earliest possible opportunity; he ought not, in any event, to be allowed to raise it after the plaintiff has closed his case.

Caste Disabilities Removal Act.

1—Guardian and Wards Act (No VIII of 1890), section 17- Mother—Application by—For appointment—Objection by grandfather—Charging mother with immorality—Out caste.

A Court in appointing a guardion of the minor is to be guided by what appears to be for the welfare of the minor and for that purpose regard must be had to the nearness of kin. A mother of an infant is on a higher footing than the paternal grandfather, as regards the nearness of kin. She is, therefore, a fit person to be the guardian for the welfare of the minor, and the fact that she was out-casted, need not be considered. (1 All 549 Fol.) Kaulesra v Jorai Kasaundhan. 2 A L J 663=A W N (1905), 205= 28 All 233.

2—Suit by Mahomedan, born as such, as reversioner in a Hindu family.

The provisions of the Act clearly mean that nobody will be prejudiced in his right of inheritance by a change in his religion or exclusion from caste. It is not necessary that he himself should have been a convert or excluded from caste and it is all the same whether he or his ancestor (father or grandfather) changed their religon or were excluded from caste The son of a Hindu who had turned Mahomedan, and who was himself a Mahomedan. was, therefore, held entitled to succeed as heir to his Hindu uncle, after the death of that uncle's widow. Bhagwant Singh v Kallu. 11 All 100=A W N 1888, 288.

3—Convert to Mahomedanism can authorise the adoption of his Hindu son—Guardianship, right of, preserved to a Hindu father who has renounced his religion.

The plaintiff (a rajput), whose natural father had become a convert to Mahomedanism and whose natural mother was dead, was given in adoption by his uncle, whom the Mahomedan father had authorised in that behalf. The lower appellate Court held that the adoption was invalid for the natural father could not then delegate authority, as he had, by becoming a Mahomedan, ceased to be governed by Hindu Law, and that therefore, he could not give, and consequently could not authorise the giving.

Caste Disabilities Removal Act-Concld.

Held, that the adoption was valid, for the Mahomedan father could authorise the giving in adoption of his son, as he was not civilly dead but was the guardian of his son under Act II of 1850.

Adoption may be regarded as a civil transaction as well as a religious ceremonial If civilly the father is competent to give he is equally competent to sanction the giving.

Semble—Where the parties Brahmins and the datta homa essential, then possibly the father after becoming a Mahomedan could not sanction his brother to be present at the giving during the datta homa. Shamsing v Santabai.

2.—Gaoki Hak-Quantity of rice—Recovery of caste—Question.—

A claim to recover a quantity of rice which should by right of "Gaoki Hak" have been received by plaintiffs at a festival in a Hindu Temple, but was received by defendants, is not a caste question as it does not involve "any interference with the autonomy of any caste" nor is it a suit for the vindication of a mere dignity as the claim is for property of however small a value. Venkaji Krisina v Janardan Govind

3—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

It was resolved by the members of a certain caste that the plaintiff, a priestess, should be dismissed from all the offices connected with the caste and that the same should be performed by the defendant and the plaintiff, thereupon, filed a suit to obtain an injunction restraining the defendant from carrying the said office and from receiving the fees and income thereof —

Held, that it was not competent to a Civil Court to question the decision of the caste in the matter

The following principle appears to be the sound one, viz would the taking cognizance of the matter in dispute be an interference with the autonomy of the caste? And applying the principle, it would be equally clear, whether the question turns upon the obligation of the members of the caste to accord to the holder of the office certain privileges and honours or to pay him fees in virtue of his office In either case it is one which, if a caste is to be considered in any sense a self-governing body, as is contemplated by the Regulation II of 1827, should be left to be decided and dealt with by the caste according to its customary mode of procedure Kala v Juganath

A plaintiff's cause of action is every fact which a plaintiff must prove to support his case. A cause of action arises when a legal right is infringed. 22 Q. B. D. 128: 16 All. 165. 170 foll. The circumstances under which the plaintiff's alleged right was infringed are essential ingredients which cannot be dissociated from their connection with the right claimed by the plaintiff. 8—Meaning of—Joint suit by reversioners—Place of suing.

When immoveable properties are situate in several districts, a suit regarding the whole can be brought in any one of the districts—it is legal on the part of reversioners to bring a joint suit for the possession of the properties on the death of the widow as the right, title and property of the plaintiffs, though divisible, were undivided. Even supposing that the term "cause of action" means the facts constituting the infringement of a right, and not the right itself, if the wrongful act by which several rights were infringed be the same a joint suit is not unsustainable. A suit for the possession of a house which could not, owing to the widow's existence be included in the previous declaratory suit by the reversioner to set aside her alienations, was held not barred under S. 43 of the old code (O II r. 2), (14 Cal 661 Fol:) Asa Singh v Indar Singh. 91 P R 1898.

An award was made by arbitrators in England directing Defendant to pay Plaintiffs a certain sum. The award was by an order of the 1st March 1902 of the High Court, Q. B. D., England, directed to be enforced in the same manner as a judgment. Defendant left England and left the sum unpaid. Plaintiffs instituted suit in the Original Side of the High Court of Calcutta to recover the said sum but at the time of the institution of the suit Defendant neither dwelt nor carried on business nor personally worked for gain within the limits of its original jurisdiction. Plaintiffs' solicitor, however, at an interview in Calcutta with Defendant had given an undertaking to Defendant not to sue him until he heard from Plaintiffs in cosideration of Defendant's undertaking to pay £500 immediately in part payment: Held—That, the Defendant's undertaking in consideration of Plaintiffs' attorney for-bearing to sue was not a 'cause of action' within the meaning of cl. 12 of the Charter, and the High Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit Obiter per Maclean, C. (30) Different causes of action in different suits.

42—C P C O 2 r 2 (1882 s. 43)—Cause of action—Account stated—Mortgage transaction.

The defendant traded in Zanzibar as the agent of one Khimji, who owned five shops within the German jurisdiction. To release from attachment these shops, the defendant obtained from the plaintiff a sum of Rs. 7,000 out of which he applied Rs. 5,869 in discharge of the attachment, and returned the balance to the plaintiff. As a security for the repayment of Rs. 5,869, the defendant became personally responsible for the amount, and as part of the same transaction, he got a mortgage in his own favour from Khimji of the five shops and in turn sub mortgaged them to the plaintiff. As a result of these transactions, the plaintiff debited Rs. 2,753 in the general account which was in the name of the defendant. The plaintiff then brought Suit No. 193 of 1899 against the defendant to recover the balance due on this general account; and a few days later he brought another Suit No. 196 of 1899 for the purpose of enforcing certain rights under the submortgage. The first suit was decided in the plaintiff's favour; but the second was thrown out on the ground that it was barred under S. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that the second suit was not barred by s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, since the two claims were not in respect of the same cause of action. The cause of action in the earlier suit was an adjusted account, in respect of the transaction arising out of the mortgage; and the mortgage constituted a cause of action in itself in the second.

An account stated respecting a debt constitutes a new and distinct cause of action, the consideration being the ascertaining of the previously uncertain state of the transaction between the parties, while a promise to pay is implied by the admission of the balance. Hansraj v. Even where the lands are situated in several different villages, provided the venue of the trial is the same, the right of the plaintiff to have his claim tried in one suit is the same as if the different holdings were all in the same village. No objection can be taken to the suit on the ground of misjoinder of parties under S. 18 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. In cases like these any difficulties arising from variety of defences can be cured by the successive trial of the issues separately affecting different defendants. (4) Vendee stranger at date of sale—Subsequent acquisition of share by vendee—Cause of action.

66.—In a suit for pre-emption the crucial date for a pre-emptor to succeed is the date of the institution of the suit and that if he is able at that time to fulfil the conditions necessary to entitle him to a decree, a decree ought to be made in his favour. Hence, where a suit for pre-emption was dismissed for deficiency of court fees in both the Courts below, which decree was subsequently reversed by the High Court and the case remanded, and the vendee in the meantime acquired the status of a co-sharer, held that the suit could not be dismissed, the pre-emptor having been entitled to a decree at the date of the institution of the suit. Held further that even if the date of a decree be looked to, that date must be when the decree ought to have been made in the plaintiff's favour and not a later date.

The village of Rupnagar in the Ferozepore district, the property of Government, was leased on certain conditions to four persons, of whom, owing to death and desertion, Hanwanta, son of Peman alone after a while represented the original lessees In 1882 the terms of the lease not having been fulfilled, one M was put in possession as farmer of half the village, the other half, or ten biswas remaining with H, for a further term of five years, conditional upon the unfulfilled terms of the original grant being carried out within that period. In June 1886, H, sold to one K. S. for Rs. 8 000 all his rights in a five-biswas share of the village, and the purchaser was put in possession of the land and began to cultivate it. In November 1886 the Deputy Commissioner passed an order disallowing the above alienation as having been made in contravention of the term of H's lease, and finally,on 29th April 1887,it was resolved that a ten-biswas share of the village should be granted in proprietary right to M., a five-biswas share to H ,and that the remaining five-biswas share which represented the share alienated to K. S should be resumed by Government Early in 1890, at which time K. S was dispossessed of his rights, lease of the five biswas share resumed by Government was granted to one R. R., and in 1891 the present plaintiff,son of K S. (deceased),filed a suit against H demanding either possession of a five-biswas share of the village under the terms of the deed of sale, or a refund of the purchase-money, Rs. 8000. The deed of sale contained no covenant for title by the vendor and Held (1) that the plaintiff's suit for possession of the five biswas share sold to K. S. must fail, because the share in question had been resumed by Government and assigned to a third person who was in possession thereof;

(2)that no material mistake of fact had been proved which would under Section 20 of the Contract Act be applicable, nor any breach of a contract, nor had contract become void within the meaning of Section 65 of the Act, and that the doctrine of caveat emptor was applicable to the case.—Kashmira Singh v Hanwanta 62 P R of 1893.

dedication to the public. It is one of the essential elements of a good declaration that it be made to the public, that it be irrevocable, and that the land be for ever dedicated for the designated public use. 8 C B N S. 848; 42 Calif 541, ref. to. An owner may appropriate land to public use and yet retain in himself all such rights in the soil as are compatible with the full exercise and enjoyment of the public use to which the property has been devoted. It is not essential to constitute a valid dedication that the legal title should pass from the owner ; nor is it inconsistent with an effectual dedication that the owner should continue to make any and all uses of the land which do not interefere with the uses for which it is dedicated, See 79 Bom 47 ; 9 Cal 75. But after a valid dedication has been made, if the use for which the property is dedicated becomes impossible of execution,or if the object of the use wholly fails, there is an abandonment in consequence of which the rights of the public therein fail and a reversion takes place as the dedication has spent its force when the use ceases. If land is dedicated for cremating or burial purposes, and there is subsequently an abandonment, the property reverts to the dedication or his heirs. 24 I A 177 dist. Chairman, Howrah Municipality v Khetra Krishna Mitter. 10 C W N 1044=4 C L J 343= 33 Cal 1290.

If an appeal lay from the decision of a Divisional Judge to the Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces, it will, under Act VII of 1905, after the 16th October 1905, lie to the High Court of Bengal.

Though under the provisions of Act II of 1904, no second appeal lies expressly from the decision of the Divisional Judge to the Judicial Commissioner, yet such an appeal lies under the provisions of section 584 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Under section 3, cl. (24) of the General Clauses Act the Court of the Judicial Commissioner comes within the expression "High Court" in section 584 of the Code of Civil Procedure. As the Court of a Divisional Judge was subordinate to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, and since the passing of Act VII of 1905 it is subordinate to the High Court, both before and since the passing of Act VII of 1905, second appeals lie from the decisions of the Divisional Judge, formerly to the Judicial Commissioner and now to the High Court of Bengal.

An appeal was preferred on the 21st December 1905 to the High Court from the decree of the Divisional Judge of Raipur, at a time when Act II of 1904 was in force.

Held, that the provisions of Act II of 1904 and of the Code of Civil Procedure would govern the case and a second appeal lies to the High Court under section 584 of the Civil Procedure Code. Balbhadra Nilmadhub v Mussammat Bhowani. 6 C L J 233.

2—S. 4 (3)—Suit for enforcement of begar of Small Cause nature—Second appeal—S, 102, C P C 1908—Wajib-ul-arz.

Held,—that a suit for arrears of begar due by a tenant, as such, on account of the use or occupation of land let to him, is not a suit of a nature of Small Cause and that therefore second appeal lies.

Where a wajib ul-arz, made under S, 79 Land Revenue Act, recognizes begar in the area to which it applies, and also specifies the terms and the persons by and from whom it may be levied. Such begar becomes a "village cess" within the meaning of S. 4 (3), of the Act.

A claim for such a cess when disputed, raises a question of title in land, where it is imposed as an incident of land tenure.

Every cess paid or delivered by a tenant, on account of the use or occupation of the land let to him, is certainly "rent" within the meaning of the terms of the Central Provinces Land Revenue and Tenancy Acts. 9 All 591 Appl, Ramchandra v Chindhoo, 6 N L R 117= 8 Ind Cas 276.

Held, also, that, in view of the provisions of Ss 74 and 132 read with S. 152 of the Land Revenue Act, a Civil Court is not competent to entertain a claim put forward by the proprietor of a land to hold it wholly or partially free from revenue as against the malguzar whether such claim be advanced by way of a suit or by way of defence to a suit to recover the Revenue.

Held, further, according to S 69 of the Contract, it is not necessary that there should be any contract or privity between the obligor and the obligee, nor need there be circumstances, from which a contract can be implied between the two. It is enough if there is an original liability to pay, and its discharge by a person interested to pay.

Held, where there has been a payment under compulsion of law by a person interested in the said payment, under circumstances which make it necessary that it should be paid to save the whole estate, in which is included the land of the person from whom the reimbursement is demanded, there is a right of reimbursement under S 69 of the Contract Act. 21—S 144—Village papers not called for—Right to declaration that one is not bound to furnish them—Patwari's remuneration not to be levied on land held free from payment of land revenue—

Where a person has not been called on to produce what are called village papers in the Land Revenue Act he has not any right to ask the Court for a declaration that he is not bound to furnish them He is not entitled to a decree declaring what the law is in order to meet a possible invasion of his rights Held, also that s 144 of the Act leaves out of contemplation the liability for payment of the Patwari's remuneration It seems to have been understood that that liability was imposed independently of the Act In fixing the amount of assessment at which the settlement of a mahal should be offered to the proprietors the Government could provide for the payment by the proprietors, of an amount sufficient for the salaries of the Patwaris but this could not be done in the case of land which was not liable to assessment Consequently the levy of Patwari's remuneration on land granted by Government free from payment of land Revenue is not legal Gopal Hurry Bhiday v Secretary of State for India 3 C P L R 100

1—Private Partition between co-sharers—creation of relation of landlord and tenant between co proprietors—When two co-sharers in a village by mutual agreement make a private partition of their respective shares and hold them in severalty, one of them can become the tenant of the other by holding land situated in the share of that other The provisions in the act relating to partition does not exclude the possibility of a valid partition of a similar kind made voluntarily by the parties themselves. If a partition can be made privately it shall put the parties to it in the same position as an imperfect partition under the act would place them, it follows that the relation of landlord and tenant can exist between the owner of one share and a co-proprietor holding land in that share. Thakur Hazarising v Jagatsing 7 C P L R 54.

2—Mortgage by tenant—Possession of mortgagee through Court Process—Mortgagee not a licensee.

The mere fact that the mortgagee of a tenant may have been compelled to get possession through the Civil Court cannot render him a licensee of the tenant. (3 C. P. L R 9. Diss.). Thamman Singh v Manjoo, 11 C P L R 22.

3.—Mortgage by absolute occupancy tenant —Amount of loan unrestricted—Necessity for consent of landlord.

Where an absolute occupancy tenant mortgages his holding in such a way that the amount to be advanced by way of loan was unrestricted, the transfer required the consent of the landlord and in the absence of such consent the transfer was void as against the landlord.

4—Grant of sub-lease by tenant—Effect of determination of tenancy on sub-lease.—

Where a sub-lease is granted by a tenant without the consent of his landlord the sub-tenancy comes to an end with the determination of the tenancy. But where a sub-lease is legally granted a voluntary surrender by the tenant does not operate to prejudice the interests of the sub-lease. 5 C P L R 120; 6 C P L R 74 and 109, 18 All 354, 23 W R 281, Ref. Diwan Maharajsha v Abheram Gujar. 11 C P L R 5.

5—Lease from absolute occupancy tenant—Lease deed not registered—Right of lessee to sue for possession.

In the absence of a contract to the contrary a tenancy from an absolute occupancy tenant would be presumed to be from year to year and the tenant would be entitled to resume possession on the expiry of the lease. Consequently a sub-tenant from such occupancy tenant could not sue for possession bearing his title on an unregistered lease. Hanmant Rao v Narain, 4 C P L R 173.

6—Sale of occupancy tenure without landlord's consent—Right of landlord to sue for possession from purchaser.

A sale of an occupancy tenure made without the consent of the landlord is void as against him, and the landlord is entitled to sue for the possession of the land sold by the occupancy tenant and occupied by a stranger. The latter cannot plead that he holds under the occupancy tenant who had sold him the tenure, for their interests are adverse to each other and the stranger cannot resist the landlord's suit for possession. Chandrabhan v Deochand. 4 C P L R 172.

An application for partition was dismissed by the Deputy Commissioner, Sambalpur. An appeal from that order was preferred, to the Commissioner who dismissed it. A second appeal was filed in the High Court. Held, that, under s. 136-H (1) of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act as impliedly amended by Bengal Act IV of 1903, the appeal from the Deputy Commissioner lay to the District Judge, but as it was wrongly preferred to the Commissioner, the appellant lost his remedy, and the second appeal was incompetent. Raghunath Singh v, Abdhut Singh, 9 Ind. 14.—Ss. 71, 138, 140—Liability of lambardar to pay revenue to Government—Legality of private arrangement among co-sharers to collect and pay revenue,

A malik-makbuza does not pay rent to the proprietors. His land is separately assessed with revenue in a Mahal and it is quite clear, reading ss, 71, 138 and 140 together, that save in the exceptional case of his being ordered under the provisions of the last of those sections to pay the revenue assessed on his holding direct into the Government treasury he must pay it through a lambardar or a sub-lambardar. A lambardar or a sublambardar cannot delegate the duty of either collecting or paying in the revenue to any other co-sharer. Consequently a private arrangement among co-sharers that each should collect the revenue payable by those malikmukbuzars whose land is situated within his own share is illegal.

An entry in the record of-rights relating to a holding would not be an " award, " it would be merely a statement as to a condition of facts which in the course of his inquiry under the provisions of s.72,the Settlement Officer had ascertained and the only legal effect of it would be that it would be a piece of evidence,not conclusive in itself, but carrying a presumption of correctness until the contrary was shown. The burden of proving the incorrectness of such an entry would lie very heavily on a person who disputed its correctness.

20.—S. 87—Awards of proprietary rights at the settlement, legal effect of the grant of.

The award of proprietary rights at the time of the settlement, did not have the effect of conferring, on the grantee, any rights new and not pre-existent;nor did it take away,from the grantee, rights obtained and held otherwise than through the award. The effect of the award was to make the estate heritable and alienable, but these new incidents of tenure were only to be enjoyed side by side with any restrictions imposed by the personal law of the holder. If, for instance, an estate was self-acquired in the hands of a man, it remained self-acquired:and if it was stridhan in the hands of a woman, it continued to be stridhan. So when any question arises as to the devolution of property or as to the power of alienation, it is necessary to go behind the grant and to see what the position of the grantee was prior to the award and to ascertain the nature of the pre-existing rights in the grantee. Nilkanth Rao Udhoji v. Sambhoo Mali, 2 N L R 1.

21—S. 87 — Award of proprietary rights on widow — Effect of award on rights otherwise acquired by her.—

S. 87 of the Act does not make it compulsory on the Court to hold that a widow on whom proprietary rights have been conferred possesses only a widow's estate. An award of proprietary rights does not take away from her right obtained otherwise than through the award and already possessed by her. Ram Charan v. Jagannath, 12 C P L R 143.

22—S. 87—Settlement with two sisters one of them a widow—Nature of estate conferred on widowed sister-Her right to mortgage her share.—

Where the proprietary right in an estate was conferred at a settlement upon two sisters one of them being a widow at the time, the rights conferred upon the widowed sister were those only which, under the Hindu Law, she would enjoy in land inherited by her from her husband and consequently she could not mortgage her share in the estate so as to prevail against her sister's son. Though in practice hereditory claims were recognized to a very great extent, the actual rights were not inherited, but were conferred at the settlement. Narain Sing v. Mt Rewa, 6 C P L R 154.

29.—Land Revenue Act-Section 136 G.-Partition of Landed property-Objection to partition —Claim for improvement—Title—Question of title.

An objection to a partition which takes the form of a claim for improvements is an objection of raising a qustion of title within the meaning of S. 136 G. of the Land Revenue Act. It is difficult to define the expression "question of title" as used in S. 136 G; it means and includes any objection which, unless and until such objection were settled, would debar a Deputy Commissioner from making the partition. 15 C P L R 153; 2 All 619, 23 All 271; 9 All 388; 18 All 210, 10 C P L R 37 & 40 ref to. Seth Birdhi Chand v Mt Kaini Bi. 17 C P L R 5.

30.—Section 136 G.—Valuation suit for partition-Jurisdiction of S. 36 G, explained,

The value for the purposes of jurisdiction of a suit for partition is not the value of the entire property but the value of the share in respect of which partition is sought. Under S. 136 G. if a non-applicant in a partition proceeding raises any question of title or proprietary right, two courses are open to the Revenue officer. He may either stay the proceeding and refer the parties to the Civil Court or he may as a revenue officer proceed to inquire into the merits of the objection. But if he elects to take the latter course he does not thereby convert himself into a civil court, and it is perfectly immaterial whether he has or has not been invested with powers under the Civil Courts Act. He is bound to observe the procedure laid down in the C P C for the trial of original suit (8 Cal 157; 17 Cal 680, 12 All 506, 20 Mad 289; 8 Bom 31; 22 Bom 315 ref to.)

The section does not refer to the wish of the co-sharers or give them an option in the matter of effecting partition. (10 C P L R 6 Diss:) Bisandas Marwari v. Bhagwant Atmaram, 12 C P L R 137.

32—Ss. 138 & 139—Lambardar—Right to collect remuneration summarily—right to recover by ordinary means money spent for management of village.

A public body like a Municipal Committee investsd with statutory powers must take care not to exceed or abuse their powers. They must rigidly keep within the limits of the authority committed to them. If they act beyond their powers,they have to make compensation to the person sustaining damage by reason of their unlawful proceedings.

An Act like a Municipal Act, which touches the private rights of individuals, must be most carefully construed "without unwarrantable severity on the one hand or unjustifiable lenity on the other."

Any action to be taken or order to be passed or notice to be issued in the exercise of powers conferred by the Central Provinces Municipal Act, 1903, must be taken, passed or issued, respectively by the Committee, by means of a resolution passed at a meeting convened and conducted under Ss. 15 to 19 inclusive. But, in cases of emergency, the President, or, in his absence or during the vacancy of his office, a Vice-President, may direct the execution of any work or the doing of any Act, which the Committee are empowered to execute or do, and the immediate execution or doing of which is, in his opinion, necessary for the service of safety of the public; under S.66 no power is given to a Committee absolutely to deprive owners of the legitimate use of their lands, but the Committee can only impose conditions to ensure the safety and sanitation of the building and suitability of its structural appearance relatively to neighbouring buildings, and also to conserve the health, safety or convenience of the public, or of persons dwelling in the vicinity. Under S. 67, a Committee cannot require any projection or structure over any public drain to be removed, if the projection or structure has been lawfully in existence at the date of the commencement of the Act, without making reasonable compensation for damage caused by such removal. But power of removal of projection without compensation is limited to cases of altogether new structures, and does not extend to structures taking exactly the place of pre-existing structures. Any projection, in the absence of ony rule declaring it a public or common nuisance under the former Act, and in the absence of any action by way of civil proceedings for its removal by the Committee, must be held to be lawfully in existence. Before a Committee can acquire a power to pull down a building erected or re-erected in violation of the provisions of S. 66,it must give,a notice to remove under sub-S.(5), and also a second notice under S. 153 (3) if the first notice is not complied with.

3.—Inam, grant of-Grant right to collect revenues from certain villages—Tank, ownership of, whether covered by grant—Prescriptive right to use water to the extent of irrigation—Water-cess, levy of—Enfranchisement of inam—Settlement by Inam Commissioner as to the appropriation by Government—Water-cess for tirva jasti, legality of—Cess paid under fear of distraint—Right of recovery—Assignment.

The grant by Government of an inam, whereby the inamdar is to collect the revenues of property, covered by the grant, does not, in the absence of express words to that effect, convey any absolute right to any tank therein.

The water rights, however, that pass by implication with such grant amount to undertaking by the grantor not to refuse to ryots, holding nanjai lands the quantity of water necessary to enable them to irrigate their lands and so to pay the revenue which they had paid to Government before the grant.

The Government is, however, entitled to levy water-cess on a supply of water larger than is proved to have been the customary distribution to the ryots.

Where, on the date of the enfranchisement of an inam, the Inam Commissioner fixed the basis of the income and undertook that Government would not take more than a fourth of the income derived from the various sources taken into account.

Held, that it amounted to an engagement between the Government and the inamdar whereby the former undertook to content itself with one-fourth of the faisal jasti and tirva jasti on the average area then chargeable with those payments and it was illegal to levy further charge for water on that area.

Where a cess not legally payable was collected by a threat of distress in case of default: Held, that the person paying was entitled to recover the amount thus paid even though the payment was made before actual seizure of the property and the threat administered fell short of coercion as used in the Indian Contract Act. 25 Mad 548 Ref; 17 Cal 341; 19 Mad 306 Fol. T. 4—Wazibul-arz—Clause empowering Malguzar to prevent tranfer or building in village abadi—Applicability to towns.

Where a wazibul-arz contains a clause empowering the Malguzar to prevent any one from transferring house property or building a new house in the village abadi the clause does not apply to towns, bazaars and marts, but applies only to village site, the land made available by the Malguzar in villages for the ryots to build their houses on and which he is bound to furnish. Debi-Parsad v Jawaharmal Nathamal. 5 C P L R 76.

7—Purchase of absolute occupancy rights by mortgagee in possession—Validity of purchase as against all but landlord.

The plaintiff was mortgagee in possession of a mouza for a number of years, while holding the village he purchased the absolute occupancy rights in certain fields. Subsequently he leased these fields to defendant for one year. Plaintiff now sued to recover possession from defendant whom he declared to be his sub-tenant. The mortgage had come to an end. The defendant denied that he was a sub-tenant and assented that he had obtained the fields from plaintiff as representing the malguzar. Held that the purchase of the occupancy tenure by the plaintiff was valid as against all others than the landlord and consequently the defendant could not call in question the plaintiff's rights as derived from his purchase.

8—Mortgage by tenant—Right of landlord to oust persons in possession by license from tenant.

The tenants have no power to mortgage their holding so as to bind the landlord without his consent, but all that the landlord is entitled to is a decree declaring that the mortgage executed by the tenant is void against him. He need not recognise the mortgagees or their sub-tenants as his tenants, but as long as the original tenancy subsists, he has no right to enter and oust persons who are on the land by license from the tenant.

9—Mortgage by occupancy tenant—Right of mortgagee as against landlord.

9A—Right to residence of non-cultivating tenant in village abadi.

It is only the tenant who cultivates the Malguzar's lands that has a right to a residence in the village abadi. The Malguzar is not bound by any customary law to allow the cultivators of villages belonging to another malguzar to reside in that abadi. Laxmanrao v Ganpatrao. 3 C P L R 123.

10-Possession of "sir" land by Malguzar's son with another—No payment of rent—Land not unoccupied within meaning of Act.

Where the Malguzar's son held a "sir" land along with another and no rent was entered as payable the Malguzar retained possession of the land. Under the circumstances the land was not unoccupied by the proprietor within the meaning of the Tenancy Act. Sobha v Bhondu Miya. 3 C P L R 139.

11--Malguzar letting his share on theka—Possession of land by tenant for more than 6 years—Termination of land as "sir" land.

Where a Malguzar let his share of the village on Theka and the land was held by a tenant for more than 6 years the land ceased to be sir-land and the tenant became an ordinary tenant and not a sub-tenant. Dhundiraj v Tukoo Gouli. 3 C P L R 146.

12-Right of tenant to effect mortgage by conditional sale.

Though the terms of a Wajib-ul-arz may not allow a mortgage by conditional sale, it has generally been held that such a mortgage can be made by a tenant. Dallu Patel v. Madho Patel. 3 C P L R 158.

Notes—Ref: 10 C P L R 42.

13-Cultivation of land by landlord with another—Partner not a tenant.

Where a landlord himself takes a part in the cultivation of his land, the person associated with him therein and who gets a share of the produce as his remuneration is not ipso facto a tenant within the meaning of the Act. Kishan Sukal v Jaiwant Rao Misar. 3 C P L R 180.

14—Transfer of tenant-right—Right of landlord to eject transferee.

By attempting to transfer his holding by mortgage a tenant does not lose his rights. The transfer is void as against the landlord and therefore the tenant-right remains. Thus when a mortgagee of the tenant is in possession he is in possession under a license from the tenant and the landlord cannot be allowed to turn him out. But if the tenant sells his holding outright the purchaser does not hold as licensee of the tenant, but holds against him and the landlord in consequence is entitled to oust the purchaser. Similarly if the mortgagee has ejected the tenant in execution of a decree obtained against him on the mortgage the mortgagee does not hold as licensee of the tenant and consequently the landlord is entitled to eject the mortgagee. Govinddass Bania v Madho Prasad. 3 C P L R 9.

15—Cultivation by absolute occupancy tenant in partnership with his relations—Acquisitions of occupancy rights of relations.

Where an absolute occupancy tenant cultivates his land in partnership with his relations the latter do not cultivate as tenants so as to acquire occupancy rights. In most cases a right of occupancy cannot be acquired in land sub-let by an absolute occupancy tenant. It is not possible to decide the question satisfactorily without knowing whether the occupancy tenant had acquired an occupancy right under Act X of 1859.
Mt Kashi v Ramchand. 4 C P L R 33.

16—Land held from Government in lieu of services as village servant.

Holder of land or holder from him cannot acquire occupaney right. Where land is held from Government revenue or rent free in lieu of services as a village servant the holder of the land is not a ryot and cannot acquire an occupancy right in the land. He is bound to quit the land on the termination of his service. Consequently no tenure can be created by or can arise under him, which will last beyond the term of his service. Therefore a person holding from such a person cannot acquire any occupancy right in the land.

17—Right of owner of house to pull down and re-build-Right of mulguzar to appropriate vacant site on house being pulled down.

The owner of a house in a village has a perfect right to pull it down and build it up again and a mulguzar cannot appropriate the site of a house when it has become vacant owing to the house being pulled down in order to the erection of a new one. Deorao Deshmukh v Tukaram. 4 C P L R 40.

18—Occupancy tenure—Mortgage without landlord's consent—Right of landlord to set aside mortgage.

A landlord is entitled to ask for a declaration that a mortgage of an occupancy tenure made without his consent, did not affect his rights and for the cancellation of the mortgage-deed.
Kashiram v Behari Dube. 4 C P L R 49.

19—Cultivation by tenant with another—No acquisition of occupancy rights by that other.

Where land is cultivated by a tenant with another the latter cannot by such cultivation acquire occupancy rights therein. It is the tenant, and not a person who may with his permission cultivate with him, that acquires occupancy rights. So where the father first held the land. and on his being ejected, the son held it the latter could only count, for the purpose of acquiring an occupancy tenure, the time during which he himself has held the land. Daya v Nand Ram, 4 C P L R 53.

23—Determination of tenancy—Right of sub-tenant to become tenant under Malguzar.

Where a tenancy is determined the sub-tenancy which is granted upon it is necessarily determined also and the sub-tenant cannot become a tenant under the Malguzar except under a contract of tenancy entered into directly with him. Bhopalsing v ThakurBorelsl 6 C P L R 74.

24—Transfer of tenancy to stranger—Suit by landlord against transferee and original tenant—Right of transferee to obtain possession.

Where there has been an out and out transfer by a tenant of his holding in a suit by the landlord against the transferee, a stranger, and the original tenant the landlord cannot get possession of the property, but he will be entitled to posression, if the tenant has not been a party to the suit. 27—Wajib-ul-arz—Right of owner of house to transfer and of purchaser to re-build.

In the absence of a provision in the Wazib-ul-arz to the contray the owner of a house in a place like Harda may transfer it and the purchaser may enlarge or re-build it. Debi Prasad Saligram, 5 C P L R 124.

Notes.—Ref: 8 C P L R 29.

28—Mortgage of occupancy tenancy before Act—Possession by mortgagee—Disappearance of tenant for long time and no succession to him—Right of owner to sue for possession.

Plaintiff a sharer in a mouza sued for possession of a field. The defendant claimed to hold possession as mortgagee of the occupancy tenant. The mortgage was created before the passing of the Tenancy Act and in favour of a person who at that time held the share in question from a widow, who had only a life interest and on whose death it passed to the plaintiff. The occupancy tenant had not been heard of for many years and was considered to have been dead. Held that as the occupancy tenant had disappeared and no one whom the law recognised as entitled to inherit from him had succeeded him the plaintiff as owner and landlord was entitled to take possession of the field. Kushabai v Rewaram. 5 C P L R 120.

31—Grant of sir land to Mukhtar—Grantee not an ordinary tenant—Possession by virtue of agency.

Plaintiff was engaged by the defendants as their Mukhtar and was given some sir land rent free for his services. The Mukhtarnama said that the land was interested to the plaintiff in lieu of salary and that as long as he was defendant's Mukhtar the defendants would not disturb his possession. Held that the relation of landlord and tenant was not created among the parties as contemplated by Act IX of 1883. Plaintiff was not an ordinary tenant within the meaning of the Act and he could not be ejected if he did not render service on the ground that he had not paid his rent. The contract was one for discharge of certain services and not for letting and hearing. Plaintiff's holding was by virtue of the agency. Lalla Lachman Singh v Hajiram 1 C P L R 182.

34—Tenancy for five years—Holding over by tenant during sixth year—Notice to quit before the end of sixth year—No proper determination of tenancy—Determination of land as sir.

An ordinary tenant shall, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, continue to be an ordinary tenant until the tenancy is terminated in due course of law. So where the tenant who had obtained a lease for five years, of a sir land continue to hold on during the sixth year and a notice to quit was given by the landlord before the end of the sixth year, there was no proper determination of the tenancy at the end of the fifth year and the tenant having occupied the land as an ordinary tenant for the sixth year, the land ceased to be sir. Kasai v. 56.—S. 41, cl. 2—Mortgage of absolute occupancy-holding for sum requiring notice under s. 41—Other properties also mortgaged—Absence of notice—Mortgage void—Courts not bound to apportion value and uphold mortgage.

When any other property, moveable or immoveable, is mortgaged along with an absolute occupancy holding, for a sum which required notice to the landlord under s. 41, cl. 2, Central Proviences Tenancy Act, without such notice, the mortgage will become void, and the Court cannot be asked to value the other properties to apportion the mortgage-debt between the occupancy holding and those properties in proportion to their respective values, and uphold the mortgage if the amount so ascertained would not have required notice to the landlord. S. 41, (5) of the Tenancy Act applies to the foreclosure of such a mortgage only as might be made without notice to the landlord.

So, where the right of an absolute occupancy tenant in his holding is sold or is foreclosed by order of a Civil Court, in execution of a decree other than a decree obtained by his landlord, held, the landlord will have a right of pre-emption, only if the mortgage, in respect of which a decree has been obtained against the tenant, has been effected without notice to the landlord but not where the landlord has actually interviewed 61A—Central Provinces Tenancy (Act IX of 1883), section 43—Central Provinces Act of 1898, Section 45 clause (3), s 47—Occupancy holding, transfer of part of.

When statutory rights and liabilities have been created and jurisdiction has been conferred upon a special Court for the investigation of matters, which may possibly be in controversy, such jurisdiction is exclusive and cannot concurrently be exercised by the ordinary Court.

When a transfer of occupancy holding was effected without the consent of the landlord at a time when the rent law in force was Act IX of 1883, as amended by Act XVII of 1889, the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for ejectment. But it is otherwise after the passing of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act of 1898.

The change made in the law in this respect in 1898 is not of procedure only; it affects substantive rights.

Section 43 of the Tenancy Act of 1883 refers to transfers of entire holdings and not of a portion only. So long as the original tenancy subsists the landlord has no right to re-enter and oust the persons, who are in the land by license from the tenant. Icharam Singh v Nilmony Bahida. 7 C L J 499=35 Cal 470=12 C W N 636.

62.—S. 45—Scope of the section—Applicability to leases not affecting proprietary rights.

S. 45 of the Tenancy Act applies only to leases or other transfers of proprietary rights, in sir fields. It does not apply to agricultural lease, which do not affect the proprietary rights. (1 N L R 32 Ref). Bhagirathi Bai v Anyaji Kunbi. 3 N L R 159.

Under the Rent Law of the Central Provinces as contained in Act IX of 1883 as amended by Act XVII of 1889 the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to deal with a suit for ejectment when a tenant having a non-transferable holding made an alienation and parted with the possession of a holding.

The right to institute a civil suit upon an alienation which took place in 1892 was not taken away by Act XI of 1898 the provisions of which, in this respect, are not retrospective. S. 43 of Act IX of 1883 refers to the transfer of an entire holding and not to a portion thereof.

76—S. 81—What constitutes ejectment of tenant—Limitation for suit to recover holding.-

To constitute an ejectment it is not necessary that a landlord should actually remove a tenant of a field. It is sufficient if the tenant is excluded from the possession so where on the death of a tenant the landlord and not his heir took possession of the holding was governed by the 2 years' limitation calculated from the date of the tenant's death. Kavlooki v Ganpat Rao. 1 C P L R 107.

Where prior to the settlement of a village one of the two undivided brothers, who were entitled to the village, died leaving a widow and the Settlement Officer awarded the widow a share in the village for her life-time, the effect of the award at the settlement was to break up the joint family property and to make the share awarded to the widow separate property. On the death of the widow the heir of her husband was entitled to the share awarded to her in preference to the heir of her husband's brother. Musst-Dhamo v Shamlal. 2 C P L R 99.

78—Ss. 87, 88—Award at settlement confers clear title—Bar to claim of others—Adverse possession—Limitation.—

An award at the settlement confers on the person to whom the award is made a clear title to the property and ss. 87 and 88 of the Act bar the claim of any other person thereto. At the time of the settlement on the admission of one of four brothers the rights of the other three brothers to an estate were affirmed. Thereupon these three brothers applied to the Collector for partition of the estate and notwithstanding the objection of the other brother partition was ordered to proceed but during the pendency of the proceedings, the objector died leaving a minor son. Then one of the three brothers managed the estate on behalf of the family and the partition proceedings were dropped. On the minor attaining majority he asserted an exclusive right to the estate and refused his uncles all share in the profits thereof. Thereupon the uncles sued to recover their shares. The defendant contended that in a family partition during his father's life-time the suit estate fell to the share of his father and that the suit had become barred by limitation. Held, as on the admission of the defendant's father proprietary rights were awarded to the plaintiffs it was quite immaterial whether there was or was not a partition before the settlement. The award of the settlement officer gave a clear title to the plaintiffs and ss. 87 and 88 of the Act barred any claim on the part of the defendant's father or of the defendant. Held, also that no time could be counted before the settlement as plaintiffs started with a clear title from that time. Further as the defendant's father died within twelve years from the date of settlement and as after his death the entire estate was managed by one of the plaintiffs there was not adverse possession for twelve years. Consequently the suit was not barred by limitation.

79—S. 92 — Decision of Tahsildar that a person is tenant—Resjudicata—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

The second clause of S. 92 of the Act is not exhaustive. A Tahsildar's decision, that a person is a tenant, is not res judicata so as to bar the trial of the issue, whether he is tenant or not in a Civil Court. In other words the fact that a Tahsildar has put a person into possession under S. 92, does not make that person a tenant if he is not a tenant. M. T. Durbasa v. Khalaksing, 4 N L R 63.

80—S. 94 (1)—" Ejected ", meaning of—S. 116, Transfer of Property Act.

In order that the special period of limitation prescribed by S. 94 (1) of the Tenancy Act may be applicable, the tenant must have been " ejected " from the land of which he seeks to recover possession.

Even a wrongful withholding of possession may be treated as an ejectment under S. 116, Transfer of Property Act, which may reasonably be regarded as prima facie applicable even in case not coming under the Act. Where a lessee holds over and the lessor assents to the tenant continuing in possession, the lease is, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, renewed. The lessor has thus an option of treating the lessee as still a tenant or as a trespasser. 5 N L R 97, 22 Bom 893 and 24 Bom 504 and 29 Bom 213 (216), Ref: Sheoram v. 81—S. 94—Ejectment, Limitation.

Where plaintiff, a tenant, sues to recover possession of land sold by his guardians to the defendant, the malguzar of the village, on the ground of fraud.

Held, that the sale of a tenant right by the tenant to a landlord possessing the whole proprietary right is in fact a surrender.

So, the landlord when taking possession under the sale took possession as landlord.

13—Holding under Malik makbuza—Decree declaring status as tenant passed before Act—Change of law after Act—No necessity for setting aside decree

A person who held under a malik malbu a did not obtain a permanent status as a tenant merely in consequence of having had his position as a tenant declared by a decree passed before the Act came into force The effect of such a decree was merely to declare the person a tenant under the law as it stood at the time when the decree was made After the passing of the Act all tenants under Malik makbu as except those who had obtained occupancy rights before the alteration in the law at once became by the mere operation of that alteration sub tenants. A malguzar is entitled to sue for possession of land held by an absolute occupancy tenant sold by him to defendant without notice to him (malguzar) and for a declaration that the sale is void. Ramdin v Malikram. 4 C P L R 181.

22—Mortgage by occupancy tenant with consent of Malguzar-Foreclosure before the death of tenant—Right of Malguzar to oust mortgagee in possession.

A Malguzar by consenting to a mortgage other than an usufructuary one consents by implication to foreclosure. If the mortgagor of an occupancy right died before foreclosure, the mortgagee's interest would cease altogether with that of the mortgagor. The case is widely different, however where foreclosure has taken place before the death of the mortgagor and while his right still subsisted. The right becomes transferred in such a case by the foreclosure just as it would be by a voluntary sale by the tenant with the consent of the Malguzar and the subsequent death of the tenant can no more affect the one transaction than the other. In such a case the Malguzar cannot, on the death of the tenant, sue to oust the mortgagee in possession under his foreclosure decree.

24.—S. 3 (11)—"Last preceding settlement" meaning of.

The words "last preceding settlement in s. 3 cl. (11) of the act have not a uniform meaning but are to be interpreted with reference to the context. Ganpat Gaontia v Halsai Raut. 11 C P L R 81.

25.—S 3 (11)–Six consecutive years, meaning of.

The six consecutive years referred to in Expl I of S. 3 (11) of the Act (1883) does not mean the six years immediately proceeding the coming into force of the amending act 1889. The six years may be referred to any period between the date of the settlement and the commencement of the amending Act. Salig Ram Sukal v Kanhaiya. 11 C P L R 13.

26.—S. 3, cl. (11) Expl. 1—Land originally sir in occupation of proprietor of another share—Loss of character of land as sir.

Land which was originally sir can lose its sir character under explanation 1 of cl. On the contrary land which had been cultivated by the proprietor for 12 consecutive years and which was on the above date in his occupation became sir land notwithstanding the fact that the sir-rights which had previously accrued might have been temporarily extinguished by subsequent inoccupation for six consecutive years

28.—S. 7—Notification of Chief Commissioner finding date for payment of rent—Applicability to rents payable in kind.

The courts in the Central Provinces would be bound to take judicial notice of the Chief Commissioner's notification issued in accordance with the provisions of s. 7 of the Tenancy Act. But the notification of the Chief Commissioner fixing the 1st. 31.—S.34—Sub-letting by tenant—No liability to ejectment.

Notes—Ref: 9 C P L R 86.

32—S.34—Temporary absence of tenant—Arrangement made for cultivation-Land not left uncultivated within the meaning of.

Where a tenant arranged for the cultivation of his holding during his temporary absence from the village and had no intention of surrendering his holding he cannot be said to have left it uncultivated within the meaning of s. 34. (1 C P L R 114, 4 C P L R 107, Ref.) Ramsaran v Padrao Chamar. 9 C P L R 86.

33.—S. 34—Dispossession by landlord of minor heir of occupancy tenant—Applicability of.

S. 34 cannot be applied to a case in which the landlord himself prevents the minor heir of an occupancy tenant or his guardian from cultivating his land, when he wishes to do so, (2 C P L R 6 Dist). Daolat v Chitoo. 9 C P L R 1.

34.—Ss. 34, 43. 61—Transfer of tenant right—Consent of landlord not obtained-Extinguishment of tenant right.

The tenant of an ordinary or of an occupancy tenure cannot make a valid transfer of his tenant right without the consent or the acquiescence of his landlord. The term transfer implies a passing from the hands of one person into those of another. When a tenant makes an ostensible transfer which has not the consent or the acquiescence of the landlord the transaction is a mere nullity and leaves the party in statu quo ante except for any remedy that the purchaser may have against the vendor. As the tenant-right cannot by such a transaction pass to the purchaser so it cannot pass from the vendor. Consequently a landlord has no right to possession of the holding as against the tenant merely on the ground that the latter has parted with his tenant right. The mere invalid transfer by a tenant of his right does not extinguish that right;

35.—Ss. 34, 38, 43 61—Avoidance of transfer by tenant—Right of tenant to be restored to possession.

Where a landlord elects to avoid the sale of a holding by his tenant and ejects the vendee the avoidance of transfer leaves the parties in statu quo ante and in the absence of any express or implied surrender on the part of the tenant either by agreement or by operation of law, the tenant is entitled to be restored to possession (7 C P L R 45, Fol: 24 Cal 212, Dist: 24 Cal 152, Ref.) Chote Lal v Kaluram. 11 C P L R 122.

36.—S. 35—Purchase of tenancy holding by lessee—Purchase enuring for benefit of lessee only during term of lease.

Where the lessee of a village purchases the tenancy holding during the currency of his thika the purchase enures only for the benefit of the proprietor and does not enure for the benefit of the lessee beyond the term of his lease. 37.—S. 38—Assignment by lambardar of his rights and interests—Lambardar no longer landlord.

Where a lambardar assigned away all his proprietary rights and interests he no longer continued to be a landlord within the meaning of the Act. Gopal v Bhojraj 11 C P L R 19.

38.—Ss. 38 and 43—Right of Hindu widow to dispose of occupancy holding inherited from her husband.

The words "shall devolve as if it were land" in ss. 38 and 43 of the Act imply that the devolution is to be regulated subject to the restriction in s. 43 as regards collateral heirs by the personal law of succession which governs the persons concerned. Consequently a widow inheriting an absolute occupancy holding from her husband does not obtain such an interest in it as to enable her to alienate it to the prejudice of her husband's next male heir.(2 C P L R 167,Appr.) Fakira v Hari. 6 C P L R 135.

39.—S. 38—Transfer of holding by tenant—Possession by landlord—Right of transferee to eject landlord.

Where a tenant left his holding uncultivated and the landlord entered upon possession, the landlord could not be ousted at the instance of a transferee from the tenant, where such transfer was void as against the landlord. 40.—S. 38—Sale by Collector of absolute occupancy holding in execution—Necessity for giving notice to Malguzar of intended sale-Validity of sale without such notice.

The Collector is not required to give the Malguzar notice of the intended sale of an absolute occupancy holding in execution of a decree and an omission to give the notice does not render the sale invalid (3 C P L R 1 Not Fol.) Laxmikant Rao v Kalloo Singh, 10 C P L R 76.

41.—S. 38—Transfer of holding by tenant without landlord's consent not void but voidable.

A transfer made by a tenant of his holding without the consent of the landlord is not absolutely void, but is voidable at the election of the landlord and does not amount to a surrender of the tenancy (1 C P L R 23 and 48 Appr; 7 C P L R, 45, Dist.) Ganpat Rao Rangrao v Keshav Rao Malguzar, 10 C P L R 37.

42.—S. 38 Purchase of absolute occupancy holding by landlord from tenant with knowledge that mortgagee from tenant has obtained possession under foreclosure decree—Right of landlord to recover possession from mortgagee.

Where a landlord knowing that the possession of an absolute occupancy holding has passed to a mortgagee of the tenant under a foreclosure decree chose to obtain a purchase of the holding from the tenant, he could not succeed in a suit for possession against the mortgagee, inasmuch as he did not avail himself of his right to claim pre-emption but chose to pay the entire price to the tenant. 43.—S, 38—Usufructuary mortgage by tenant without landlord's consent—Right of landlord to claim pre-emption.

Where a tenant mortgaged with possession his absolute occupancy holding without giving notice to or obtaining the consent of the malguzars the latter cannot sue for pre-emption. Madhosingh v Tikaram, 9 C P L R 91.

46.—S. 38 (2)—Mortgage of several holdings —Ascertaining value of mortgage for purposes of—

Where an absolute occupancy tenant mortgaged his holdings in two villages to one and the same person for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the mortgage within the meaning of s. 38 (2) the mortgage should be split up in proportion to the value of each of the holdings mortgaged. Beni Parshad v Dharamdas Kalar. 11 C P L R, 17.

47.—S. 38 (2, 4, 5)—Mortgage by absolute occupancy tenant–Consequences of landlord not purchasing holding.

So far as s. 38, cl. (5) of the Act as amended by Tenancy Act XVII of 1889 lays down that when the right of an absolute occupancy tenant is foreclosed the landlord shall have a right of pre-emption it clearly refers to the foreclosure of such a mortgage as might be made under cl. (2) without notice to the landlord. In the case of other mortgages the landlord has the option under cl.(4) of purchasing the holding and if he does not care to do so the mortgage holds good and the landlord cannot afterwards if it is foreclosed raise any objection. Gopalji Joshi v Holu. 5 C P L R 65, 48-49.—S. 38 sub-s. 7—Mortgage of absolute occupancy holding with notice to landlord–Possession of mortgagee under foreclosure decree—Right of landlord to sue for possession.

Where the tenant of an absolute occupancy holding mortgaged his holding without notice to the landlord, although the proportion which the sum for which the mortgage was made bore to the rent of the holding was such that without such notice the transaction was void as against the landlord under the provisions of sub s. 7 of s. 38 of the Act and the mortgagee was placed in possession under a foreclosure decree the landlord was entitled to recover possession from the mortgagee. Punjaji v Beharilal Golabchand 6 C P L R 131.

51.—S. 40—Rent a first charge—Right to realize rent by sale of holding.

What is meant by the rent being a first charge on the holding is simply that so long as any rent remains due on the holding the landlord has right to realize the rent due by the sale of the holding in preference to any other creditor and that that right is not affected by any sale or transfer of the holding. 52—S. 43—Mortgage of proprietary share and sir land—Sale of proprietary share for arrears of revenue—Mortgagor becoming occupancy tenant of sir land—Foreclosure of mortgage—Suit for ejectment by purchaser—Right of mortgagee to resist claim.

Where a proprietary share in a village together with certain sir land were mortgaged and the proprietary share was subsequently sold for arrears of revenue, the mortgagor becoming occupancy tenant of his sir land, the mortgagee, who later on foreclosed his mortgage and got possession of the land, could not resist the claim of the purchaser at the revenue sale to eject him. 54—S. 51—Status of tenants holding lands prior to Act came into force.

The operation of the amendment in the above section of the Act which was effected by s. 12, Act XVII of 1889 was intended to be retrospective and those who held as ordinary tenants when the amendment came into force became sub-tenants but those who had held their holdings for more than 12 years when the Act came into force acquired rights of occupancy and could not be ejected as sub-tenants. Sheoram Brahmin v. 55—S. 51, as amended by Act XVII of 1889—Ejectment suit by Malik Makbuza—passing of amendment during pendency of suit—Suit governed by amendment.

Where during the pendency of a suit by a Malik Makbuza to eject a person from his holding the amending Act XVII of 1889 was passed, the rights of the parties could not, according to the general principle applicable to such cases, be governed by the law as it existed when the action began, for the amending Act clearly showed an intention to vary the rights of parties with retrospective effect, the object of the amendment being prevention of creation of tenant right in Malik Makbuza lands. Raoji Kalai v. Eshwardas Marwari. 7 C P L R 10.

56—Ss. 57 to 60—Necessity for agreement being made by tenant in Court—No recognition of private agreement.

The intention of the Legislature is to give the benefit of the protection afforded by s. 60 of the Act only where the agreement has been made by the tenant in Court either by the presentation of written statement under sub-s. 1 of s. 57 or by a statement made in Court and recorded by the Court under sub s. 1 of s. 58, except in the case of an ejectment decree which has become void by default of the landlord under sub-s. 2 of s. 59. A private agreement is not recognised at all. Raghunath Row v Mt Chandni, 7 C P L R 113.

58.—Interest absolutely within discretion of Court.

S. 70 of the Act leaves the question of the rate of interest that may be allowed to the plaintiff in a suit for arrears of rent absolutely in the discretion of the Court. Amritrao Meghe v. Baliram, 8 C P L R 9.

59—S. 71—Suit for rent against defendant as sub-tenant—Defence of direct tenancy from landlord—Appealability of decision adverse to defendant.

Where the plaintiff sued the defendant as his sub-tenant for rent and the defendant pleaded that he was the tenant of the holding in question directly under the Malguzar an appeal lay from a decision adverse to the defendant, as the matter related to conflicting claims to the land, notwithstanding widow, she is only a collateral relative of her brother, who was the last full heir. Mt Salita v. 60—S. 71—Transfer of holding by tenant without landlord's consent—Remedy open to landlord.

Where a tenant transferred his holding without the landlord's consent under s. 71 of the Act of 1898 the landlord could apply to the Revenue Divisional officer for possession but could not sue in the Civil Court for declaration of title and possession. 14 Cal 644, Dist; 13 C P L R 143, Ref. Dayaram Patel Lodhi v. 61.—Section 81— Agricultural Tenancies—Ordinary tenant—Limitation.

The C P. Tenancy Act applies to every sort of agricultural Tenancy in the Central Provinces. Agricultural tenants seem to be exhaustively divided into 5 classes by S, 4 of the Act, the last clause that of ordinary tenants comprising all tenants who are not included in some one of the other classes specified in the section. The mere fact that by a special contract a tenant is freed from some of the conditions which but for such a contract would regulate his tenancy does not prevent him from being an ordinary tenant. Thus a tenant holding under a perpetual lease at a fixed rent is an ordinary tenant and if ejected by his landlord, he must sue within two years as provided in section 81 of the C. P. 3.—Personal remedy and real remedy.

A landlord has in case of arrears of rent a personal remedy, against the tenant, based on contract, and a real remedy against the holding. A suit for the personal remedy can only be maintained against the tenant or some representative personally liable to pay the arrears. A suit for the real remedy follows the land, and lies against whomsoever, having any interest in such land irrespective of any representation of the defaulting tenant. The real remedy is enforceable by a suit for sale under S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The personal remedy is governed by Art 110 of the Limitation Act, and the real remedy by Article 132.

A suit against persons, to whom the tenancy is transferred by a private sale binding on the landlord, being a suit to enforce the real remedy is governed by Art. 132 of the Limitation Act. 4.—Ss. 2 and 41—Holding, nature of—Partition of holding, effect of—"devolves," effect of.—

A holding, under S. 2 (3), Tenancy Act, 1898, is, by its very definition, a parcel of land held under one lease or set of conditions and is indivisible and cannot be affected by action to which the tenants alone are parties. Even if it were ancestral property in the lands of a father, and his son should acquire rights in it by birth, the son could not enforce a partition so as to bind the landlords to recognise each share as a separate holding.

By virtute of S 41 (1) Tenancy Act, the right of an absolute occupancy tenant "devolves as if it were land" and the use of the word "devolves" appears by necessary implication to exlude, for example, the taking by survivorship which obtains among Hindus in respect of joint ancestral property. (1 W R 10 and 8 Cal 118 relied on; 4 C P L R 57 and 13 C P L R 137 Fol. 11 C P L R 144, ref to). Pancham Singh v Nankoo Singh. 3 N L R 182.

The entry in the settlement record is not conclusive; it is only a matter of presumption.

The holding of a survey number in section 2 (10) Explanation II of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act has reference to the holding when the proceedings in a Civil Court are initiated, and it cannot avail a person that in a subsequent settlement he was recorded as a tenant.

8—Ss. 38 and 41 (3) (b)—Meaning of the word 'permit' in s. 41 (3) (b).

The legislature, by enacting and re-enacting S. 38 of the Tenancy Act, 1883, intended to cut down, not the landlord's, but the absolute occupancy tenant's rights. The word 'permit' in s. 41 (3) (b) should be interpreted as merely equivalent to 'suffer'. Where an absolute occupancy tenant intends to transfer any right in his holding by sale and gives to his landlord a written notice of his intention, the landlord does not, by reason of his inaction for one month after receiving the notice, forfeit the right to recover an amount equal to the rent of the holding for one year. Central Pro. Tenancy Act XI of 1898-Contd.

13—S. 41 (7)—Absolute occupancy tenant, transfer by.

Where an absolute occupancy tenant had made a transfer of his holding, transfer can be avoided, under S. 41 (7), of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, 1898, only by the whole proprietary body acting together, or by an agent who is authorized to act on their behalf and whole authority should not have been revoked in regard to the particular transfer in dispute. A transferee cannot be disturbed, under S. 51 (7), if even one of many persons composing the body of landlords refuses to join in avoiding the transfer and a suit to avoid the transfer was, under the circumstances, dismissed.

14—S. 46 Powers of Registrars—Validity of transfer—Unregistered deed.

The effect of S. 46 of the Tenancy Act is to abrogate the powers of a Registrar or Sub Registrar to register certain documents. In other words where registration is essential to the validity of a transfer, the transfer is no longer possible. If the Registrar is deceived by false recitals in a bond, the document registered under such deception is not effective. 16 C P L R 135, 17 C P L R 49 ; 14 Cal 449 ; 18 Cal 556 ; 29 Cal 654 Ref. to. Daji Vithal v Moreshwar Venkatesh. 1 N L R 112.

15—S. 46—Succession to occupancy holding.

The law governing succession to the occupancy holding of a Hindu is the Hindu Law subject to the exceptions created by Statute Law. S. 46 of the Act lays down such an exception, and its provisions are absolute and are not merely enforceable at the option of the landlord.

16—Ss. 59 and 60.

Although the tenant of a malik makbuza is styled a sub-tenant in S. 59 of the Tenancy Act, he is a sub-tenant with a difference. He is a sub-tenant, in that he does not possess the privileges of an ordinary tenant, but his landlord is not a lessee, but the owner of the land. A malik makbuza has free liberty to transfer his right and the sale of his rights is in no way analogous to an alienation by a tenant and does not necessarily determine the sub-tenancy. The purchaser can eject the tenant of malik makbuza only in circumstances which the original malik makbuza could have ejected him. 6 C P L R 92; 93, 11 C P L R 5 ; 12 C P L R 158 Ref :

18—S. 70 (now 80 of 1898) Special Contract to pay interest.

19—S. 81 (b)—Suit for rent—Claim of third party set up—Second appeal.

Where in a suit for rent the defendant pleads that the rent of the land is payable to a third person and such third person is not made a party to the suit, no second appeal lies from a decision passed in the suit, inasmuch as no question relating to a title to land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto is determined by the judgment therein. 20—S 85—Recorded tenant, decree for arrears of rent obtained against, ejectment in execution of—Forfeiture of the entire holdings.

The lands in dispute formed the occupancy holdings of one J, who died leaving two sons, the plaintiff K and another G. The fields were recorded in the name of G alone and in execution of a decree for arrears of rent obtained against him by the malguzar, the defendant in this case, G was ejected from the holdings. Thereupon, the present suit was instituted on behalf of the other minor son K by his mother as next friend, on the ground that he succeeded to the holdings jointly with G on the death of his father, that he was not a party to the suit for arrears of rent and was not therefore bound by the order of ejectment. Held, it was clear that, had the holding in the present case been sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent obtained against G, the title of the purchaser could not have been questioned by the plaintiff K. (10 Cal 996, Ref ; 25 Cal 396, 26 Cal 677, 14 Bom 597, Fol ; 4 C W N 608, Dist.), and on principle, no distinction could be made between a case of sale and one of ejectment The decree was a decree against G as a manager representing the owners of the tenant rights, and the subsequent ejectment G was constructively also an ejectment of the plaintiff K. Kisan Kunb v Raghunath Kalar. 2 N L R 101.

1—"Otherwise fit for appeal"—Certificate.

In considering under what section of the Civil Pro. The law has changed subsequent to the decision of the cases of Ram Taruck Hazra v. Dilwar Ali and Janki Das v. Ram Golam Sahu.

Semble:—

The mere fact that a greater sum is claimed as due in the certificate, than what is really due, does not make the certificate and notice bad and does not prevent the running of time against the debtor provided that the notice was duly served. VIII of 1827, Sec 9—'Determined"—"Finally determined"—Right of appeal—Illegal order—Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 622—Extraordinary jurisdiction.

Sec. 9 of Regulation VIII of 1827 empowers the District Court to make an order directing the administrators appointed under the Regulation to make over the property, when "it has been determined" between the rival claimants who is the heir of the deceased, but to give full effect to the object of the Regulation, the word "determined" must be under-stood "finally determined."

Where the Judge considered that he was bound to make an order directing administrators appointed under Regulation VIII of 1827 to make over the property of the deceased to one of the rival claimants who was judicially declared to be the heir of the deceased.

Held, that so long as the party, against whom the decision in the matter of the rival claims was given, had a right of appeal, the order of the Judge was one which he could not make under the Regulation, and that in exercising his jurisdiction under the Regulation he had exercised it illegally and that being so, the High Court had power under Sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code to interfere in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction. Vishvambhar Pandit v Vasudev Pandit. Regulation VIII of 1827 looks simply to the locality of the assets as the ground of the Court's jurisdiction to grant a certificate of administration, and does not, like Act XXVII of 1860, look to the person whose estate is to be administered. Where there are assets within a district, and certain specified circumstances exist, a certificate may be granted. The appointment of an administration excludes all other representatives so long as it endures. The authority of an administrator under S. 9 is the same as under S. 7. Under S. 3 of Act XXVII of 1860 certificate can be granted only for the estate of a British subject either resident within the District where the certificate is sought, or else having no fixed place of residence. (2) Act XIX of 1841.

11.—Summary procedure—Act XXVII of 1860.

A (a Hindu) died intestate in December 1865 leaving his widow in possession of his property, moveable and immoveable. The descent of A's property was admittedly governed by the law of the Mitakshara. On the 19th January 1866, A's nephew presented a petition to the Zillah Court, under Act XIX of 1841, denying the title of the widow. Upon this alone the Judge directed the widow to come in and show cause, which she did on the 2nd February following. A daughter of A on the 19th March presented a petition in opposition to the nephew's claim for possession The nephew filed a reply. In the meantime, the widow applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, which was opposed by both nephew and daughter. The nephew also filed a cross-petition under Act XXVII of 1860. All these petitions came on by consent together for adjudication on a state of facts admitted by all parties through their pleaders, who also, by consent between themselves, submitted their view of the question of law to be decided on the Acts of 1841 and 1860. The questions so submitted were—(1) Did it appear on the evidence that there was a separation between A and its nephew according to the Mitakshara doctrine ? (2) If the evidence per se established a legal separation, was such separation negatived by certain admissions of A ? The Judge refused the application of the widow under Act XXVII of 1860, and granted possession to the nephew under Act XIX of 1841. The nephew was a man of substance, and able to bring a regular suit, and there was no evidence of possession by force or fraud on the part of the widow, the only question being her right according to the Mitakshara Law. Held that the Judge was in error in proceeding summarily under Act XIX of 1841 on the declaration of the applicant alone and without other enquiry, but that this defect was cured by the widow's appearing. That the Judge ought not to have tried the cases under Act XIX of 1941 and Act XXVII of 1860 together and on the same issues; but the Judge

17—Application of Act—Act XXVII of 1860, s. 2—Presidency Town—Natives—Refusal to pay—Want of fraudulent or vexatious motive in withholding debt.—

Act XXVII of 1860, which provides that no debtor of a deceased person shall be compelled to pay his debt to any person claiming to be entitled to the effects of such deceased person, except on the production of a certificate to claim debts or of probate or of letters of administration unless the Court shall be of opinion that payment was withheld from fraudulent or vexatious motives and not from any reasonable doubt as to the party entitled, is applicable to Hindus within Presidency Towns. Where Hindu died a intestate and his debtor refused to pay debt to his widow as she did not produce letters of administration and the widow sued to recover the debt without taking out a certificate or letters of administration, and it was found that there was no reasonable doubt that the widow was entitled to the debt, but that the debtor refused to pay neither from any fraudulent nor vexatious motive, but to avoid the danger of having to pay money again. Held that the suit must be dismissed.

19—Act XXVII of 1860, s 2—Bond given to secure debt due to estate of deceased Hindu—Suit by heir—Waiver of right to protection implied.

R, being a debtor to the estate of a deceased Hindu, executed a bond promising to pay the debt to V, the divided brother of the deceased, as his heir. A suit having been filed against V by the widow of the deceased, who claimed his estate, R offered to pay the debt to V on production of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, but not otherwise. Held that, as R had executed a bond promising to pay the debt to V, he could not rely on the protection afforded by Act XXVII of 1860.

20—Omission to pay debt from vexatious motive to one holding a certificate of Administration.

The deceased had left a son and widow who with the concurrence of the deceased had taken out a certificate of administration of his estate. The son alone sued for the recovery of debts due to the estate. Held that s 2 of act XXVII of 1860 prohibited A from suing alone, for although he was beneficially interested to recover the debt yet there was no fraudulent or vexatious withholding of the debt. Per Garth C. J—A debt cannot be said to be 'vexatiously withheld' within the meaning of that section merely because the debtor omits to pay it. Chunder Coomar Roy v Gocool Chunder Bhuttacharjee. 6 Cal 370.

3 RIGHT TO SUE OR EXECUTE DECREE WITHOUT CERTIFICATE.

(1) Representative of deceased creditor, Suit by.

36—Act XXVII of 1860 — Court Fees Act, 1870, sch. 1, cl. 12 —

A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is not necessary to give to a person, claiming to be the representative of a deceased creditor, the right to institute a suit to recover a debt due to the estate of the deceased, or the right to present an application for execution of a decree obtained by the deceased. But such certificate, or a probate, or letters of administration, must be produced by the person proceeding as representative before a decree or order can be passed, or process of execution issued for payment of the debt due, unless the Court should think that payment is withheld from fraudulent or vaxatious motives, and not from any reasonable doubt as to the party entitled The effect of the provision in the note to art. 12, sch. 1 of the Court Fees Act (No. VII of 1870), on the consideration of a certificate duly granted, which has become liable to cancellation under that provision, but has not been cancelled, considered. Until cancellation, the certificate remains in full force as proof of the representative right to sue or obtain execution, whatever be the amount of the debt. Govindappah v. Kindappah Sastrulu. 66—Succession Certificate Act VII of 1889—Undivided Hindu family—Death of one of two undivided brothers—Debt due to family—Suit by surviving brother and manager—Arbitration—Award—Filing award—Certificate under Act VII of 1889 not necessary.

Ramchandra and Narayan were undivided brothers; Narayan was the elder, but Ramchandra was the manager of the family property. Narayan died leaving a widow and three sons,and after his death Ramchandra sued the defendant to recover certain debts due to the family.

The parties referred the dispute to three arbitrators appointed by them without the intervention of the Court and applied to the Court to have the arbitrators' award filed.

A question having arisen whether the award could be filed without a succession certificate under Act VII of 1889.

Held. that there was nothing in Act VII of 1889 to prevent the award being filed without a certificate. Ramchandra Hari v Bapu P J 1891. p 113; 16 Bom 240

67—Un divided brothers—Decree obtained by one of two undivided brothers—Right of surviving brother to execute decree—Certificate of heirship.

A decree was obtained by one of two undivided brothers. He died, and the surviving brother applied for execution of the decree. Held that, if the debt was in its nature a family debt,the right to execute the decree would have devolved on him by survivorship, and not as the heir of his deceased brother, and in that case no certificate of heirship under s. 4 of Act VII of 1889 would be necessary; but if, on the contrary, the debt was part of the separate property of the deceased, the applicant could only execute the decree as Executors of the will of a native of Cutch obtained a probate from Bhuj Court, got a true copy of it signed and sealed by the Political Agent of Cutch, paid stamp fees required under Court Fees Act 1870, and filed a suit to recover a debt in a South Malbar British Court which was dismissed as the probate was not as required by s. 4 of Act VII of 1889. Held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to a decree but the Lower Courts did wrong in dismissing it. They should have allowed time for the plaintiffs to take out probate or letters of Administration or to produce such a certificate as is required by Act VII of 1889. Manasing v Amad Kunhi. 17 Mad 14.

In a suit for the recovery of money on a promissory note alleged to have been executed by the defendant to a mercantile firm of two partners, it appeared that one of the partners was dead and that it was brought by his representatives and the other partner. The representatives had not obtaind letters of administration or a certificate of succession. The plaintiffs were the surviving partners and the undivided sons of the deceased partner. Held that a surviving partner can sue alone for the recovery of a partnership debt and in that case no certificate was necessary. Held, further, that such a suit was maintainable if brought by a surviving partner jointly with the heir of the deceased partner in which case a certificate of heirship will be necessary, unless it appears on the face of the documents sued on that the debt is a coparcenary debt. Vidyanatha Ayyar v Chinnasami Naik 17 Mad 108.

74.—Succession Certificate Act VII of 1889—Landlord and tenant-Suit for rent.

A certain firm mortgaged with possession its immoveable property to two other firms trading jointly, who let out the property to the mortgagor firm. Afterwards some of the partners of the mortgagee firms having died, the surviving partners and the sons of the deceased brought a suit against the mortgagor firm to recover rent which accrued due after the deaths of the deceased partners. The Judge held that the plaintiffs could not proceed with the suit without a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act VII of 1889.

Held, reversing the order, that as the rent sued upon became due after the deaths of the deceased partners, it formed no part of their estates at the time of their respective deaths, and no certificate was, therefore, necessary under the Succession Certificate Act VII of 1889.

Accordingly, neither Act XXVII of 1860, s. 2 nor Act VII of 1889, s. 4, was applicable to her claim, and the fact of her not having obtained a certificate of heirship to her husband's estate did not disentitle her to a decree.

93.—(Act XXVII of 1860.)

Held that the effect of a certificate, under Act XXVII of 1860, is to entitle the person so obtaining the certificate to the right of collecting debts and to give full receipts to the debtors of the deceased. Such right is purely personal and cannot be subjected to the law of inheritance. Bansi v Tika. 7 W N 248.

94.—Held that a certificate granted under Act XX of 1841 did not establish the right of inheritance of the party to whom it was granted, but simply empowered to collect debts due to the estate of the deceased. (3) Right to Certificate.

96.—Heir Act XXVII of 1860.

As a general rule, the heir is the person who should have a certificate to collect the debts and manage the estate of a deceased person under Act XXVII of 1860. If he as heir is entitled to the whole surplus of the estate, the fact of his having been hostile to the deceased is immaterial. When there are several heirs and no disputes amongst them, he who is entitled to the largest share may, in the absence of other disqualifying circumstances and in the discretion of the Court, be entrusted with the duty. Abdool Ali v Abidunnissa Khatoon. W R 1864 Mis 41.

101.—Persons to whom certificate should be granted.

The certificate under this Act, does not determine any question of heirship, but merely protects debtors of a deceased person from liability for payments made to a certificate holder. If it be found that such certificate-holder was not the rightful heir, the question of heirship may be tried in a regular suit, notwithstanding the grant of a certificate.

The certificate to collect debts should nevertheless ordinarily be granted to the person entitled to the inheritance. Musammat Jokna v. Musammat Bhugwanee. 3 N W 320.

102.—Selection where there are several claimants—Act XXVII of 1860.

If there are several applicants for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, the heir of the person or persons having the largest interest in the estate are entitled to the certificate, in preference to others whose interests are less considerable. If the court thinks any small interest not sufficiently protected, it may call upon the party taking the certificate to give security to the extent requisite for the protection of such interest.

The person entitled to a certificate enabling him to collect the debts due to the estate of a deceased ascetic or devotee must be the disciple, or spiritual brother or preceptor of the deceased; and such person should not be deprived of his right, even though mentally incapable of succeeding to the office of the deceased. Gureeb Doss v Mungul Doss. 14 W R 383.

123—Mohunt, Representative of—Certificate of administration Act XXVII of 1850.

The person entitled to represent a deceased Mohunt for the purpose of collecting his personal debts, is the spiritual son and not the spiritual brother of the deceased, and such spiritual son is entitled to a certificate of administration under Act XXVII of 1860. 21 W R 340, distinguished. Dhukharam Bharti v Luchmun Bharti. 4 Cal 954=4 C L R 49.

124—Illegitimate sons.

There being evidence in this case of the deceased having assigned his property to his illegitimate sons and acknowledged them as his sons, a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to administer to his estate was granted to them in preference to the childless widows of his brother and nephew. Prodhan Ram v Jeria Kooer, 17 W R 189, 125—Adopted son——Act XXVII of 1860—Title under adoption.

An adoption de facto must be supposed valid until it is set aside, and a party so adopted is entitled to object to other parties receiving a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 in respect of the property he takes under the adoption. In granting such a certificate, a Judge must look to fitness as well as to propinquity. Nunkoo Singh v Purm Dhun Singh. 12 W R 356.

126—Adopted son's right to certificate—Adoption after the death of the adoptive father.

A son validly adopted after the death of the adoptive father does not require & cannot obtain a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, to collect debts due to the property of his adoptive father which accrued due while the property was under the management of the adoptive mother. Immediately on the valid adoption, the estate vests in the adopted son ; and debts due to it, if they accrued due after the death of the adoptive father, are debts recoverable by the adopted son in his own right and not as representative of the adoptive father Narain Mal v Kooer Narain Mytee. 5 Cal 251.

127—Grandmother—Act XXVII of 1860—Act XL of 1858.

Where the grandmother of minors applied for certificates under Act XL of 1858 and XXVII of 1860, the father consenting and approving, it was held that there was nothing in the law to prevent the certificates being granted if the applicant was competent and willing to take them. Oomro Doolhaen v Aga Meer. 12 W R 119.

128—Mother-in-law—Act XXVII of 1860.

The circumstances of a deceased party having on the day of his death informed his debtor that he had given the whole of the moneys due to him to his mother-in-law was held to be a sufficient indication (whether the gift was valid or not) that she was the proper person to receive the money due to the deceased and the certificate under Act XXVII of 1860. In cases under Act XXVII of 1860, Judges should always certify whether the certificate has been actually granted. Zeemutoonissa Rhanum v Khutoo Begum 12 W R 239.

129—Mother—Husband.

A mother is not entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to collect debts due to her deceased daughter in preference to the husband of the deceased. Such certificate, however, will not authorize the husband's interference with the mother's possession of the landed property which she claims as her own. Mohun Soondur Koonwar v Ramanoogro Narain. 3 W R Mis 3.

132—Widow—Act XXVII of 1860, s 3—Act XL of 1858, s. 3.—A as widow of B and guardian under a will of his minor son, obtained a certificate under s. 3 of Act XL of 1858. C, another widow of B, subsequently applied for a certificate under s. 3 of Act XXVII of 1860. The Judge summarily rejected C's application on the ground that the grant of a certificate to her would lead to confusion. Held, on appeal that the Judge ought to have issued notices and proceeded under s 3 of Act XXVII of 1860. Raisunnissa Begum. 2 B L R A C 129 : 10 W R 62.

133—Widow—Certificate as guardian after grant of certificate of administration.

Two certificates of administration cannot run together. So a widow who fails to appear and contest the grant of a certificate to another party, made prior to her own application cannot claim one for herself afterwards, but she may be allowed a certificate to act as guardian of her minor (adopted) son. Sham Manna v Ramdyal Goohoo. 1 W R Mis: 3.

The allegation of objectors who claim the property of a deceased person under a tukseemnamah transferring the property from the widow to them should be enquired into; and if it is proved to be genuine, the objectors are entitled to a certificate, instead of the widow, as legal heir of the deceased. Deb Pershad v Monga Koonwar. 4 W R Mis 19

137.—Widow—Certificate of husband's property.

The petitioner, a Hindu widow, applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 of her deceased husband's estate, and stated in her petition that her husband possessed, at the time of his death, self-acquired property, besides the property he had inherited from his brother The opposing parties set up a will of the deceased's father, under which a certain share of the testator's estate was given to the petitioner's husband, and in the event of his death without children to his mother, and after her death to his brother. Held that it was not necessary for the purpose of the application to decide on the validity or otherwise of the will, as the widow was entitled to a certificate in respect of her husband's property; and further that the will, which purported, in certain events, to give to the testator's widow that share of the property which he bequeathed to his son (the petitioner's husband), could not affect her claim to the certificate in respect of her husband's self-acquired property. Khoodoomoney Dabee v. Goluckmoney Dabee 1 Ind Jur O S 36.

138.—Widow—Failure of objector to prove title.—

Where a Judge, holding that the special title put forward by an objector had not been proved, decided that the widow of the deceased was best entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, the decision was held to be correct, inasmuch as the Judge was not deciding upon the general right and title of the parties to the property, but under a special law for the collection of debts and for the protection of debtors. Protap Narain Doss v. Before their application was heard, L's widow repudiated the joint application, and prayed for the grant of a certificate to her alone. The District Judge, however, ordered a joint certificate to be issued to the two widows. On appeal from this order by L's widow,—Held that, under Act XXVII of 1860, a joint certificate could not be granted. S having predeceased R, his interest in the family property and sacra reverted to R and L, and after L's death the estates vested in L's widow, who had, therefore, a better claim to be entrusted with getting in the debts. The matter came on for hearing but was adjourned on his application, he being ordered to pay the costs. He failed to pay the costs, and the certificate was issued to the widow. Held that s. 158 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable to the case in the absence of a specific order making the payment of costs a condition precedent to the hearing of the evidence of the party in default. Virabhadrappa Chetti v Chinnamma, 21 Mad 403.

170—Succession Certificate Act VII of 1889, Sec. I, cl. (4).

Kalidas Fakirchand and Karsandas Amirchand applied to the District Court for a certificate of administration under Sec. 6 of Act VII of 1889 to enable them to collect the debts due to one Punja Jagjivan deceased. They alleged that Punja had made a will appointing them trustees to collect his debts. Bai Mahali also applied for a certificate on the ground that she was Punja's heir. She disputed the genuineness of the alleged will. The District Judge rejected both the applications on the ground that the validity of the will could not be settled in a summary proceeding. On appeal the High Court remanded the matter for rehearing, holding that the District Judge had jurisdiction to decide upon the genuineness of the will. At the re-hearing Bai Mahali withdrew her application but the Judge held that as Kalidas and Karsandas claimed a certificate as executors of the will and not as heirs they should take out probate of the will. He, therefore, refused their application on appeal to the High Court.

Held, that the duty of the District Judge in carrying out the remand order of the High Court, was confined exclusively to determining whether the applicant or the heir was entitled to the certificate and that he could not refuse the certificate simply because the applicant might have asked for probate, as the case did not fall under clause (4) of Sec 1 of Act VII of 1889, Kalidas Fakirchand v Bai Mahali,. (4) Suit by son of deceased usufructuary mortgagee for amount due on mortgage—Certificate of heirship not necessary:

179 B—'Debt'—Suit by son of deceased usufructuary mortgagee for amount due on mortgage—Certificate of heirship not necessary:—

A, a usufructuary mortgagee, died leaving B, an adopted son, and two widows. The widows assigned the mortgage without consideration. The mortgagor sold the equity of redemption to a buyer who paid off the mortgage to the widow's assignee. The adopted son then sued all these persons to recover the amount due under the mortgage, or for possession of the lands till the mortgage amount should be paid. He did not produce a certificate of heirship. The Munsif decreed the amount sued for the same to be recovered by sale of the mortgaged property on default in payment. Held, that he was entitled to recover against the mortgaged property. 7: EFFECT OF CERTIFICATE.

(1) Indemnity of debtors paying debts.

180.—The effect of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is that it is conclusive of the representative title against all debtors to the deceased, and affords full indemnity to all debtors paying their debts to the persons to whom the certificate has been granted. Bhugobutty Kooer v Bholanth Thakoor. 8 W R; 317.

181.—Certificate for collection of debts—Effect of certificate against debtors—Cause of action—Act XXVII of 1860, s. 4.

A judgment debtor sued for a declaration that the son of the deceased decree-holder, to whom a certificate had been granted under Act XXVII of 1860 in respect of the debts due to his father's estate, was not competent to apply for execution of the decree, as, being illegitimate, he was not the legal representative of the deceased decree-holder. Held, that the suit was not maintainable, the certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 being, under s.4 of the Act, conclusive of the defendant's representative character, and a full indemnity to all persons paying their debts to him. Gaura v Gayadin. 4 All 355=2 W N 66.

(2) Right of co-heir against holder of certificate.

182.—Misappropriation of property of deceased.

A co-heir is entitled to follow property of the deceased into the hands of any person who has misappropriated it, and such right is not taken away by the certificate of administration granted under Act XXVII of 1860. Nga Tha Ya v. Mi Khan Mhaw. 5 B L R 371: 13 W R 443.

The certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 does not determine any question of heirship, but merely protects debtors of a deceased person from liability for payments made to a certificate holder. If it be found that such certificate-holder was not the rightful heir, the question of heirship may be tried in a regular suit, notwithstanding the grant of a certificate. Jokna v Bhugwanee. 3 N W; 320.

Notes:—Ref 14 Mad 277,

187.—Act XX of 1841.

Held, that a certificate granted under Act XX of 1841 did not establish the right of inheritance of the party to whom it was granted, but simply empowered him to collect debts due to the estate of the deceased. The title of plaintiff or her father could not, under the circumstances, be questioned by a co-sharer after its public acknowledgment and practical effect given to that acknowledgment during a long period of years. Skinner v Skinner. 2 Agra, 128

188.—Right to receive certificate-Act XXVII of 1860.

In a proceeding to obtain a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, for the collection of debts payable to the representatives of deceased persons the Court determines merely that the applicant is entitled to receive a certificate, and not his title as heir or legal representative of the deceased. The rights as between each other of several persons claiming to be interested in the property of the deceased, are not for consideration and determination in such a proceeding. Beychan Sahoo v Ganesh Sahoo. 2 N W 439.

189—Act XXVII of 1860—Right of succession.

A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 gives no title to the property in succession to the deceased, neither does it authorize the holder to sue for and collect debts which have accrued due at the death of the deceased to persons who have subsequently become owners of his property. Gouree Byjnath Pershad v. Lochun Kooer. 22 W R., 102.

190—Act XXVII of 1860.

Certificates under Act XXVII of 1860 can only be granted to persons claiming to be representatives of deceased persons to enable them to recover debts and receive interest or dividends; but such certificates include only the debtors of the estate and the procedure given by the Act was not intended to apply to the decision of any right to succeed to the estate of a deceased person. Rau Narasinga. 2 Mad., H C R 164.

(6) Decision under Act XXVII of 1860, Effect of.

194—Subsequent regular suit.

When the question of granting a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is dealt with by the Court with all the available evidence before it just as in a regular suit, and the matter of the certificate is decided upon after full deliberation, the position of the parties becomes very different from what it is at the conclusion of a really summary proceeding. Technically, there may still be right to bring a regular suit, but the regular suit in such a case is a re-hearing, and the Court is bound to pay due respect to the judgment already arrived at. Greedharee Singh v. (7) Power to negotiate Government securities.

195—Act XXVII of 1860, ss, 8 and 21.

196—Succession Act, s. 187.

The grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 on the title afforded by a will, which gives the grantee the estate in respect of which the debts accrued, does not establish a right as executor or legatee within the meaning of the words of s. 187 of the Succession Act. Kristo Chunder Mookerjee v. Chundee Pershad Banerjee. 23 W R., 252.

197—Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), ss. 17 and 20—Certificate of heirship—Grant of certificate by Political Agent—Irregularities in making grant—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

A District Judge cannot treat a certificate of heirship granted by the Political Agent in a Native State as invalid because the applicant had not given to him the requisite information as to the other members of the family, and no notices had been issued to them. These irregularities of procedure may be a reason for the Political Agent to cancel the grant, but they do not enable the District Court to treat it as a nullity. A certificate of heirship stamped with the proper stamp, and granted by the Political Agent of a Native State, must be recognized by the Civil Courts in British India "as having the same effect in British India as a certificate granted under this Act" as provided by s. 17 of Act VII of 1889, and under s. 20 precludes the granting of a certificate by a Civil Court. Annapurnabai v. (3) Refusal to recall certificate.

200.—Act XXVII of 1860.

Held that the lower Appellate Court properly exercised its discretion in refusing to recall a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, because there was an heir in a nearer degree to the deceased than the person to whom the certificate was granted; the object of that Act being to give facilities to debtors and not to assist parties in establishing a disputed right or title.

206.-Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 18, cls. (b) and (c)—Certificate granted under mistake, the applicant concealing circumstance which he should have disclosed-District Judge, Jurisdiction of.

P died in 1889, leaving behind him his daughter, B. P, it was alleged, had made a will appointing certain persons his executors. The executors applied for a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1869) to recover a debt due to the deceased's estate from one N. B opposed this application and claimed the certificate for herself by a separate application. The District Judge rejected B's application, and issued a certificate to the executors on 14th September 1892 In the meantime, one M obtained a decree against B as legal representative of P, and in execution bought P's right, title, and interest in the debt due from N. On 12th September 1892, M applied for certificate, under Act VII of 1889, to recover his debt. The District Judge rejected this application. M appealed to the High Court. To this appeal the executors were made parties at their own request. The High Court reversed the District Judge's order, and remanded the case for disposal on the merits. Upon the remand the executors did not appear before the District Judge to contest M's application, and the District Judge granted him a certificate. Thereupon he applied for revocation of the certificate previously granted to the executors, and the executors in their turn applied for a revocation of the certificate granted to him. The District Judge revoked M's certificate on the ground that he had fraudulently concealed from the Court the previous grant of a certificate to the executors.

Against this order M appealed to the High Court contending, inter alia, that the executors, not having resisted his application for a certificate after the case had been remanded by the High Court, were estopped, on the principle of res judicata, from applying for a revocation of the certificate granted to him.

Held, that the executors were not estopped. The executors having applied to be made parties to the appeal-proceedings, were bound to appear in the Court below, and their failure to do so disabled them from pleading objections, such as the collusive character of the decree and Mahali's want of title, but it did not operate as res judicata, especially when there was reason to suspect fraud on the part of Manchharam. The order obtained by him could not have the effect of res judicata, unless the executors being called on to dispute it, had failed to do so.

A party to a proceeding is never disabled from showing that a judgment or order has been obtained by the adverse party by fraud.

Held also, that the District Judge had a right, under Sec. 18, clause (b) or (c), of Act VII of 1889, to revoke the certificate he had granted under a mistake of fact to M. Manchharam v Kalidas. P J 1894, p. 370; 19 Bom 821.

Before applying the presumption of marriage arising from cohabitation with habit and repute, it is necessary to make sure that the conditions necessary for its existence do exist. First of all, there must be some body of neighours, many or few, or some sort of public, large or small, before repute can arise. Secondly, the habit and repute, which alone is effective, is habit and repute of that particular status which, in the country in question, is lawful marriage. The difference between English and Oriental customs about the relations of the sexes makes such caution especially necessary. Among most English people, open co-habitation without marriage is so uncommon that the fact of co-habitation in many classes of society of itself sets up, as a matter of fact, a repute of marriage. But in countries where customs are different it is necessary to be more discriminating, more especially owing to the laxity with which the word "wife" is used by witnesses in regard to connections not reprobated by opinion, but not constituting marriage. Ma Wun Di v Ma Kin. 18 M L J 3; 5 A L J 63; 7 C L J 112; 12 C W N 220; 35 Cal 232; 35 I A 41 P C.

1—Removal of case from Small Cause Court-Letters Patent, cl. 13—Inability of Small Cause Court to issue commission.—

The Bombay Court of Small Causes is subject to the superintendence of the High Court within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent of the High Court. and the latter has, therefore, power for purposes of justice, to remove a case from the Small Couse Court and itself to try and determine such case. The inability of the Small Cause Court to issue a commission to examine for the defence witnesses residing outside its jurisdiction, though not in general, may, under peculiar circumstances, be a good ground for granting an order to remove a case from the Small Cause Court into the High Court. 4—Police Act XIII of 1856, s. III —Conviction on merits—Error in decision on merits—Affidavits, Use of.—

S. III of the Police Act (XIII of 1856) did not give jurisdiction to the High Court, when a case was brought before it on certiorari, to enquire whether the Magistrate had come to a correct conclusion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. The object of that section was to limit the objections to a conviction to some substantial meritorious ground, such as want of jurisdiction or the like, and to prevent a conviction from being quashed on a mere error of form or of procedure. But the section did not give the High Court any right to interfere on the ground that the Magistrate had come to a wrong conclusion on the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused person. Though affidavits may be used to show a want of jurisdiction in a Magistrate, even though such affidavits contradict for this purpose the finding of the Magistrate, they cannot be used as affording materials for reviewing the Magistrate's decision on the merits.

Held, that if the biswadars were not liable to cesses claimed those holding under them could not be liable to plaintiff's claim; and that the liability of the defendants, whether they be lessees or mortgagees under the biswadars, must depend, firstly, on the liability of the biswadars themselves; and, scondly, on the terms of the lease or mortgage under which they are found to be in possession. Dhunee Ram v Moorlee Dhur 2 Agra 325.

The plaintiff's ancestors as the ruling Chiefs of Patdi, granted to defendants' ancestors, the village of Kamijala as "Jawak grass". When in 1869 the Act III of 1869 was passed, which empowered Government to levy from all lands the local fund cess, it was decided that as Kamijala was one of the villages of the Patdi State, the cess upon it was fixed on the old Kamal rate. Since that time down to 1884 the revenue officers levied the cess in the first place from the Patdi Chief, who in his turn levied it from the defendants. In 1884 the Local Boards Act was passed, and then disputes arose as to whether assistance was to be given to the plaintiff in recovering the local fund cess from the defendants; this resulted in the decision of the Bombay Government, that the defendant and not the plaintiff must be held to be superior holders responsible to Government for the local fund cess. This decision was communicated to plaintiff on the 24th April 1888, and was afterwards upheld by the Secretary of State. Plaintiff, thereupon, filed the suit for a declaration that defendants were the superior holders, and had no right to pay the local fund cess direct to Government and that he was entitled to pay the same to Government and recover it from the defendants and for recovery of the cess which he paid from 1888 to 1895.

Held, (1) that the plaintiff was not an "occupant" either generally or under the Bombay Land Revenue Code, for he was not in occupation of the land, and the term under the Bombay Land Revenue Code is applicable to unalienated land; nor was plaintiff "superior holder"

(2) That plaintiff was not entitled to recover the cess already paid by him from 1888 to 1895, for since 1885 Government had ruled that plaintiff was not primarily responsible for the cess and that though he was interested in the village, the defendants being always anxious to pay the same ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act did not apply and that under the circumstances the notice given by the Mamlatdar to the plaintiff to pay the cess was not sufficient to bring the case within the operation of s 69 of the Indian Contract Act. Gordhanlal v Surajmalji 4 Bom L R 299=26 Bom 504.

Beng. Act IX of 1860 contemplates payment of cesses by persons beneficially interested in the lands on which the cesses are levied. The words 'owner and holder' are not restricted to any one person and it is not necessary that the owner should be in possession. The plaintiff a patnidar had paid certain cesses in respect of certain debutter lakhiraj land and sued the defendant to recover the amount of such cesses.

The defendant admitted the proprietorship of the estate in which the lands were situated but denied his liability for the cesses. Held that the defendant was not liable to pay the amount of the cesses but the person liable was the idol through its shebait or some person receiving the rents and profits of the lands or some one in actual possession of the land. Gopal Chunder Sircar v. They were not recoverable from the tenant although they have paid for a period of unknown length and according to a long standing practice, not having been, if payable at the time of Permanent Settlement, consolidated with the rent, as they should have been if then payable, under sec 54 of Regulation VIII of 1793. Not having been so consolidated, they could not be recovered under s. 61. If not payable at the time of the Parmanent Settlement, they came under the term of new abwabs and in that case were illegal under s. 55. Talukdari Singh v Chulhan Mahtan. 17 Cal 131=16 I A 152.

According to 11 Cal 175—Where the holder of mokurari tenure agreed to pay a certain sum as rent and also certain other items called tehwari and salami, it was held that they were not illegal cesses because they were not uncertain and arbitrary in their character but were specific sums which the tenant agreed to pay to his landlord, and the payment of which formed part of the consideration on which the tenancy was created,

A Patnidar was sued for arrears of chowkidari tax His defence was that being an illegal tax it could not be legally recovered Held—the payment of the tax being one of the terms of the patni settlement itself entered into by parties competent to contract and for a valuable consideration and as the amount which the patni is agreed to pay as chowkidari tax was paid quite as much on account of the occupation of the property as that which was expressly called the rent, and was part of the ground rent as much as the latter, it was not an abwab and was therefore recoverable 4 Cal 576 followed 17 Cal 726 distinguished 15 cal 828 referred to

2.—Held, on appeal to the Privy Council, as follows —Semble—That the general and abstract doctrine laid down by the High Court at Bombay that it is beyoned the power of the British Crown without the consent of the Imperial Parliament, to make a cession of territory within the jurisdiction of any of the British Courts in India, in time of peace, to a foreign power, is erroneous. Where an objection is taken to the territorial jurisdiction of a British Court, on the ground that the territory over which the jurisdiction of the Court extended has been ceded to a foreign power, such a cession must be regularly proved, and cannot be established by uncertain inferences from equivocal acts. An agreement on the part of the Government of India purporting to transfer certain villages, forming part of a Regulation province within the Bombay Presidency, and subject to ordinary British jurisdiction, to the extraordinary jurisdiction of the Political Agency of a Native State, does not constitute a cession of territory. A rearrangement of jurisdiction within British territory in India, by the exclusion of a certain district from the Regulations and Codes there in force, and from the jurisdiction of all the High Courts, with a view to the establishment therein of a native jurisdiction under British supervision and control, cannot be carried out except by legislation, under the provisions of the Imperial Statutes 3 & 4 Will IV, c 85, s. 43; 24 & 25 Vic; c. 67, s 22, and 24 & 25 Vic c. 104, s 9 The Governor General in Council being precluded by the Act 24 & 25 Vic; c 67, s. 22, from legislating directly as to the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of its territory in India, or as to the allegiance of British subjects, cannot, by any legislative Act (e, g; by "The Evidence Act of 1872," s. 113) purporting to make a notification in the Government Gazette conclusive evidence of a cession of territory, exclude judicial enquiry as to the nature and lawfulness of that cession. S. 53 of the Trusts Act, 1882, strikes at transactions entered into by a trustee for his own profit after he has accepted the trust and while he is performing the duties of the office. But it does not render void a mortgage in favour of a person created before he becomes trustee of the property by the deed of trust itself as a condition of the trust imposed by the settlor—Where there is a subsisting charge on certain property paid off by the person in possession, it is equitable that when the plaintiff reclaims the estate, credit should be given to that person for the payment of the mortgage which the plaintiff would have had to meet L R 2, 1 A. 7 (1893) P, J 30 and (1894) P. jurisdiction of the Court—Decision of the foreign Court otherwise than on the merits of the case—Effect on its enforcement in a Court in British India.—

Appellant obtained a decree against the respondent, in a suit instituted by him in a Court in Ceylon, on a pro note. The suit having been instituted under the summary procedure provided by Chapter LIII of the Ceylon Ordinance II of 1889 (analogous to section 532 of Act XIV of 1882), defendant appeared by an attorney and applied for leave to defend the suit. Leave was granted to him on condition of his furnishing security. The respondent did not furnish security, and did not appear at the trial, when judgment was passed against him during his absence. The respondent having left Ceylon and settled in British India, appellant brought the present suit against him in a British Indian Court. The respondent pleaded want of jurisdiction, as (1) under the rules of private International Law, the judgment of a foreign Court passed in absentem Could not be enforced in a Britsh Indian Court, (2) the respondant did not appear at the trial and there was no decision on the merits.

Held,(1)that though Ceylon and British India owed allegiance to the same Sovereign,the enforceability of the judgments of the Courts of either country on those of the other was guided by the Rule of Private International Law, viz, that the judgment of foreign Court passed against the defendant in absentem cannot be enforced against him in a Court in British India.

(2) That neither by section 23 of the Charter of 1833. nor by S. 9 of Ordinance No II of 1889 (Ceylon Legislative Enactments, Vol II, p. 276), are the Ceylon Courts empowered by the British Parliament to adjudicate in a matter, in which the cause of action arose within their jurisdiction so as to bind by their decree a defendant who is a resident of British India and a subject of the British Crown, although he never resided in Ceylon at the time of the action or submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the Ceylon Court. Such jurisdiction, having regard to the principles of International Law, would only be recognised in British India, if it was conferred by the supreme Legislature, by express and clear words.

(3) That a decree based on a contract imposing personal obligation upon an absent foreigner is not countenanced by the comity of nations, only because the defendant entered into the contract in the territory of the forum which passed the decree.

(4) That the defendant, though he wae exparte at the trial, must be deemed to have voluntarily submitted to the jurisdiction of the Ceylon Court, as he applied for leave to defend the action,

(5) The words "appear to defend" in s.704 of the Ceylon Ordinance II of 1889 are the equivalent of " appear and defend " and clearly refer to appearance for the purpose of defending the action in accordance with the leave granted, and do not imply that appearance for the purpose of obtaining leave is not to be deemed appearance in the action at all.

(6) It is not even necessary that the submission must be by an act done in the course of the action itself, for it can be constituted by a contract to that effect, entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant previously to the action.

(7) a judgment of a foreign Court, which does not decide upon the merits of the dispute, for instance, if a suit is dismissed as being barred by the law for limitation of suits prevailing in that Court, cannot be pleaded as a bar to a suit instituted in the Court of the plaintiff's domicile on the same cause of action. (1) Assignment of debutter land in consideration of defendant ejecting by suit, at his own cost the Brahmins, etc.

1--A Hindu widow, together with the next heir, joined in assigning to the defendant a debutter estate, in consideration of the defendant conducting, at his owu cost, proceedings for the ejection of Brahmins and Banias then in occupation as poojaries to conduct the worship of the idols ; and upon the condition that he should thereafter conduct such worship, and out of the proceeds and offerings retain three-fourths for his own purposes and for hospitality, and pay the remaining fourth for the maintenance of the widow and the heir. Held that the assignment was valid, the purpose for which the lands were dedicated being provided for ; and that although the transaction amounted to champerty, that was no ground for treating it as invalid. An assignment between Hindus of property the subject-matter of litigation, on conditions which constitute champerty, is not on that ground invalid.

(6-7) Maintenance.

6-7—Application of law of champerty—Duty of Court—Specific performance of lease savouring of champerty.—

The law of England as to the offences of maintenance and champerty does not apply to natives of India. In dealing with objections to their contracts, on the ground of maintenance and champerty, the Court must look to the general principles regarding public policy and the administration of justice upon which that law at present rests To constitute "maintenance", improper litigation must have been stirred up with a bad motive for purposes contrary to public policy and justice. "Champerty" is a species of "maintenance" and of the same character, but with the additional feature of a condition or bargain providing for a participation in the subject-matter of the litigation. Specific performance decreed of a lease, though the lease formed part of an arrangement whereby, as a consideration for the lease, the plaintiff was to lend the defendant money to enable him (inter alia) to commence proceedings against the then tenant of the subject-matter of the intended lease. Pitchakutti Chetti v Kamala Nayakkan, 1 Mad H C 153.

should have proved that the piece of land was his sole property, K N and M H should erect a building on it at their joint expense,and that the rents and profits of such building should be enjoyed by K N and M H jointly during the lifetime of M H, after whose death the property, with the building, was to be the sole and absolute property of K N. Held, that the above agreement (when considered in connection with its surrounding circumstances) did not savour of maintenance or champerty, nor was it void as being against public policy. The question as to how far the English law relating to maintenance and champerty is applicable to Hindus in the presidency towns considered. Quære Whether that law was ever applicable to cases where pecuniary assistance is afforded to defendants? Damodhar Madhavji v. (9) Invalidity of contract on ground of maintenance.

9—Agreement against public policy.—

A commissariat officer named M had a butler named L, who was employed to put forward with the money of M, or his own, various large contracts. Two accounts were opened in several houses of agency in the names of M and L. To secure himself,M caused L to execute a will leaving his whole estate to M. Testator and legatee perished together in the Persia steam-ship in 1864. The Administrator General of Madras administered to L's estate.but the personal representatives of M contested the right of the Administrator General to pay over the fund to those of L. The result was that L s representatives were recommended by their attorney, C, to apply to one J (the present plaintiff), who was also a client of C's, for the necessary funds. J consented to advance money for the purpose of the suit, and on the 28th July 1869 a so-called deed of mortgage, drawn up by C, was executed between the present defendants as mortgagors and the plaintiff, J, as mortgagee, whereby, in consideration of an advance of the sum of Rs. 5,000 (the receipt of Rs. 1,800 of which was by the instrument acknowledged) to be made by J to such attorney as he should select, before the 31st of December 1869, the defendants mortgaged everything which they might be entitled to recover by suit, the mortgage to be defeasible on payment of 50 per cent. of what they might recover by suit, and a further 50 per cent. upon all to which they might be entitled as the persons entitled to L's estate. They also covenanted to repay the money lent with interest. The present defendants succeeded in their suit against the Administrator General, and this suit was brought by J to recover a commission of 50 per cent. on the sum recovered, and the sums advanced, with interest. Defendants denied that plaintiff had fulfilled his part of the agreement, and alleged that in consequence of his neglecting to supply funds they had been compelled to borrow of a third party. They also pleaded that the agreement was void for champerty and maintenance. Held that by the law of England, which prevailed in the present suit, this contract was clearly void, being contrary to the plain provision of the common and statute law against maintenance, and that it was also void as being contrary to public policy. The Court further found that the plaintiff had failed to fulfil his part of the contract, but allowed him to recover the sum really advanced by him viz, Rs. 2200, with interest. Mulla Jaffarji Tyeb Ali v. plaintiff's refusal to pay her any portion of the family estate, to allow her a monthly sum for maintenance, and to manage and conduct for her a suit which she proposed to institute to establish her right to a portion of the joint estate, and H S consented to do so upon certain terms, which were embodied in a deed by which K D assigned to H S all her right, share, and interest as widow of G C C in the joint estate and in the accumulations thereof, and in the separate estate of G C C, and all benefit to be derived from the intended suit, on trust, first, to repay all the costs of the suit; secondly, to retain, by way of remuneration for managing the suit, one half of what might be recovered therein; and, thirdly, to hold the residue as security for payment, with interest at 12 per cent., of the sums advanced by H S: the surplus, after satisfying all such sums, to be paid to K D. Then K D, with the aid and under the management of H S, brought a suit against the plaintiff and other members of the joint family of G C C for a declaration of her rights under the will of his father, R C, and for the administration of G C C's share of the joint estate. The result of this suit was that K D was (among other things) declared entitled as a Hindu widow to Rs 1,01,302-14-10 in respect of the accumulations of the joint property, between the dates of R C's and G C C's deaths. The plaintiff paid the Rs 1,01,302-14-10 into Court, under an order made in the suit. K D subsequently obtained an order, under which she took this sum out of Court, notwithstanding that the plaintiff applied for an injunction to restrain her taking it out. Upon her obtaining that order, the plaintiff, as immediate reversionary heir of G C C, instituted the present suit against K D and H S, to restrain K D from taking Rs 1,01,302-14-10 out of Court, and to compel her to bring back any portion thereof which she might have already received; and for a declaration that the assignment to H S created no valid charge thereon. Held (following the decision in the case of 4 B L R O C 1, that the assignment to H S was not binding on the reversionary heirs of G C C, except as regards the charge on one moiety for expenses incurred and advances made by H S whether by way of maintenance or otherwise, with interest thereon at 12 per cent. Biswanath Chunder v Khantamani Dasi. 3 B L R 76.

16 —Conditional transfer-Maintenance.

N, claiming to be entitled to certain real and personal property as heir of one J, brought a suit under Act XIX of 1841 to obtain possession thereof, and, in order to provide funds to carry on the litigation, executed an ikrarnama, whereby he purported to relinquish and convey to one K a moiety of his right, title, and interest in the property, in consideration of the sum of Rs 50, K agreeing to take all proper steps and to defray all expenses necessary for the recovery of the property, which was valued in the ikrarnama at Rs 75,000. K accordingly carried on the suit and incurred costs to the extent of Rs 1,700, but the suit was ultimately dismissed. The property was afterwards taken possession of by the Court of Wards on behalf of one S, who claimed under an alleged adoption by one A, the person last in possession. Thereafter K sold his interest under the ikrarnama, which he valued at Rs 2,18,000, to the plaintiff for the sum of Rs 1,700. In a suit brought against the Court of Wards as representing S for the recovery of a moiety of the property or its value, in which N refused to join as plaintiff and was made a defendant,—Held that the suit was not maintainable; the conveyance by N to K did not operate as a present transfer of the property, but only as an agreement to transfer it on conditions which were never fulfilled, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover as against S, who was no party to the deed. Held, also, that the transaction was void as being contrary to public policy, and one to which effect ought not to be given by the Court. Tara Soondaree Chowdhrain v Collector of Mymensingh. 13 B L R 495: 20 W R 446.

(17) Bond executed by Hindu widows.

18.—Maintenance—Fraud—Undue influence and threats.

The three childless widow of a zamindar instituted a suit against the rightful heir to their husband's estate in which they unsuccessfully disputed his legitimacy. Previously thereto they had obtained advances of money from the present plaintiff, and executed in his favour an agreement and a bond, whereby they secured to him the payment of large sums in case they recovered their husband's estate, and virtually gave to him the entire control of their suit. Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit, which compromise, however, was never acted upon, partly owing, it was alleged, to the subsequent conduct of the heir. At the date of the compromise, the heir, who had just attained his majority, and was without proper counsel or assistance, and acted under threats from the plaintiff, a powerful and wealthy banker, that he would carry on the litigation against him per fas aut nefas, was induced, contrary to his own judgment and sense of right and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff, to execute a bond in his favour, whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due from the widows; the plaintiff on his part agreeing that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows, but meanwhile that he would retain the securities which he held from them In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the last-mentioned bond,—Held that the bond was wholly invalid and fraudulent as against the defendant, and that, as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond, it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due from the widows. Quære—Whether the plaintiff could have recovered from the widows, if they had been successfull against the heir, the large sums of money secured by their bond and agreement. The law of champerty and maintenance is not the same in India as in England. The English statute with regard to champerty is not applicable in the mofussil in India. The India Courts in every transaction must decide upon the fact whether it is merely the acquisition of an interest in the subject of litigation bona fide entered into. or whether it is an unfair or illegitimate transaction got up for the purpose merely of spoil, or of litigation, disturbing the peace of families, and carried on from a corrupt or other improper motive. Chedambara Chetty v Renja Krishna Muthu Vira Puchanja Naiker.

(18) Agreement against public policy.

19—Maintenance—Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—Practice-Security for costs by a person not a party to the suit.-

In a deed, dated 17th July 1867, it was recited that A was entitled to certain property then in possession of D and E and that A, and B her husband. "having no funds to adopt or to commence legal proceedings" for the recovery of the property, had applied to C to assist them in commencing and conducting the necessary suits, and to make all the requisite disbursements connected therewith until their final termination, and that C had agreed to do so; and also as A and B had "no means whatever" to pay to them or the survivor Rs 150 a month until the final termination of the litigation. Then followed the appointment by A and B of C to be their attorney to institute and prosecute all necessary suits to sign all papers and documents, to receive all moneys and take possession of all lands, etc., to which A and B might become entitled under any decree or order that might be made, and to appoint attorneys and vakils. C then covenanted to institute and prosecute the necessary suits, and to make the necessary advances and payments and to pay Rs. 150 a month to A and B. Then it was agreed that out of the moneys or proceeds of lands, etc., recovered, C should, in the first place, retain and reimburse himself all advances and payments made by him with interest thereon at 12 percent.; in the second place, retain to himself, by way of remuneration for his trouble and risk, one third of the nett proceeds of the litigation, and in the third place, make over the remaining two thirds to A and B. A and B covenanted not to intermeddle with C in prosecuting the litigation, that they would render him all possible assistance and that the power-of-attorney given by them to C should be irrevocable so long as he prosecuted the litigation and paid the monthly allowance of Rs. 150. It was provided, however, that if B wished to devote all his time thereto, he might have the management of the litigation, but under the control of C; and that A and B might revoke the power-of-attorney on repayment to C of all money advanced by him with interest at 12 per cent, and the sum of Rs. 2,000 by way of liquidated damages. A power was also reserved to A and B to compromise, but only with the consent of C, unless the sum to be received on the compromise should exceed the total amount of C's advances with interest at 12 per cent. In pursuance of this agreement a suit was instituted in the name of A and B against D and E to recover possession of the property. This suit was by the High Court decreed in the plaintiff's favour, but was on appeal dismissed by the Privy Council with costs. While the suit was in the Court of first instance, D and E applied to have C added as a party. This application was refused, and D and E did not appeal from that refusal. Pending the litigation, A and B brought a suit against D and E for wasilat, and obtained a decree. On the 21st September A and B executed a memorandum of agreement, whereby C purchased all their rights in the two suits brought by them against D and E. D and E now brought a suit against C, alleging that they had suffered loss and damage by the litigation instituted by A and B; that C was guilty of champerty and maintenance: that the litigation was commenced and continued maliciously by C in the names of persons who had no legal or equitable right, and without reasonable or probable cause; that the agreement of 17th July 1867 was illegal and contrary to public policy; that the litigation was carried on by C at his own expense and for his own benefit; and that C was the real mover in the proceedings, and illegally used ths procedure of the Court to the damage and injury of the plaintiffs. Held, in the Court below and on appeal, that there was reasonable and probable cause for the institution of the wasilat suit brought by A and B against D and E. Held, by MACPHERSON, J., that the agreement of July 1867 was illegal and against public policy, as also were the subsequent institution and maintaining of the suit against D and E by C; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from C the loss they had sustained by reason of the suits which he (substantially only for his own benefit) had maintained against them. Held, on appeal (reversing the decision of the Court below) that the suit was not maintainable. The English statutes with regard to champerty and maintenance do not apply to India. In England, champerty and maintenance were offences punishable by the Common Law; and the ground on which an action is allowed in England,—viz, that C had been guilty of an offence by which the plaintiff had suffered damage,—does not exist in India. The only ground on which agreements which savor of champerty or maintenance are held to be void in this country is, that they are contrary to public policy. Assuming that the agreement of July 1867 was a valid one, and that C did thereby acquire an interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and supplied the means of carrying it on, such acts did not entitle the plaintiffs to maintain the present suit, or to recover against C the costs of the former suit. C ought to have been made a co-plaintiff with A and B in the former suit or he ought to have been called upon to give security for the costs of that suit. Chunderkant Mookerjee v. Ramcoomar Koondoo

19 A—Assignment-Rights of third party to impeach.

There may be a valid transfer of property for the purpose of financing a suit, upon the terms that the property or the proceeds realised from the litigation shall be divided between the transferor and transferee, irrespective of the fact whether or not there was any agreement for the payment of consideration "win or lose." The duty of the Court in such a case is to determine whether or not the agreement is a fair agreement to supply funds and does not purport to have been made so as to be inequitable or for improper objects, as for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring others by encouraging unrighteous suits. (4 I. A. 23=2 Cal. 233, Fol.). In ordinary cases it is a rule that, where an assignee sues on his assignment and proves it, an adverse party cannot take the objection that there was no consideration, but the rule does not apply where the transferor being a party to the litigation pleads that the assignment was fictitious and without consideration. 12 Bom 686, Fol: Baldeo Sahai v Harbans.

8 A L J 652.

20.—Held by the Privy Council—that the English laws of champerty and maintenance are not in force in India. Such contracts are held invalid in India on the ground of public policy. Such agreements are not necessarily opposed to public policy but at times may further the ends of justice by enabling a poor person to get his rights determined in a court of law such agreements should not be enforced when they are extortionate, unconscionable or are entered into for improper objects e.g gambling in litigations or injuring others by encouraging unrighteous suits.

In India a champertous agreement is not a punishable offence. No action will be for improperly putting the law in motion inthe name of a third person unless it is alleged and proved that it has been done maliciously and without reasonable and proper cause. In the absence of this proof an action will not lie against a person who is alleged to have been a mover in that suit, but who was not a party to the record since such a state of things creates no privity from which a promise can be implied on which an action on contract can be maintained, nor does it constitute a legal wrong. Ramcoomer Coondoo v Chunder Kanto Mookerjee. 2 Cal 233= 4 I A 423.

public policy, or, merely on this ground, void. But in agreements of this kind the questions are (a) whether the agreement is extortionate and unconscionable so as to be inequitable against the borrower; or (b) whether the agreement has been made not with the bona fide object of assisting a claim believed to be just and of obtaining reasonable compensation therefor, but for improper objects, as for the purpose of gambling in litigation, or of injuring others, so as to be, for these reasons, contrary to public policy. In either of these cases, effect is not to be given to the agreement. Here, upon the facts, the above case (b) did not arise, and this agreement was not contrary to public policy. But this agreement fell within case (a), and the judgment of the High Court was affirmed, that the agreement was so extortionate and unconscionable, in regard to the excess of the reward, that it was inequitable, and, therefore, not enforceable against the defendant, 3 Cal 233, 4 I A 23, referred to and followed.

In 1869, P, the liquidator of the N F Co, compromised for Rs. 15,000 the claims of the company against the fourth defendant, M K, which amounted to Rs.1, 61,500. P was induced to agree to this compromise in consequence, of representations made to him by the friends of M K to the effect that M K had no available assets, and could not meet his liabilities. In 1878 the first plaintiff, G J alleging that the said compromise had been fraudulently effected, and that the defendant, M K, at the time of the compromise, had been and was still possessed of ample property to pay off his liabilities, induced the liquidator of the company to assign to him the company's claim against M K, and brought this suit, praying that the compromise with P might be declared not binding, and that M K might be ordered to pay the plaintiff, as asignee of the N F Co., the sum of Rs. 1,61,500 with interest. Held that the assignment to the plaintiff, G J, of the claims of the N F Co. against M K was effected with a view to litigation, and that under the circumstances, the suit was not maintainable. Goculdas Jagmohands v Lakhmidas Khimji 3 Bom 402.

25.—Absolute sale.

A sued V and S to establish his right to attach a certain house in execution of a decree obtained by him in a previous suit. In their written statement the defendants alleged that A had obtained the decree in question by fraud. Shortly before the present suit V had mortgaged the house to H for Rs 33,000. About three weeks after the suit had been filed, H advanced a further sum of Rs. 5,000 to V on the same security, and on the same day, 12th December 1881, entered into an agreement with V by which H agreed to buy the house for Rs.45000, the sale to be completed immediately after the decision of the present suit. The agreement provided that V should defend the suit but if the result of the suit should be to establish the plaintiff's right to seize the house in execution, then that H should be at liberty to cancel the contract of sale. Held that the agreement of 12th December amounted to an absolute sale by V to H of the equity of redemption of the house in question, and that it was not champertous.

(23) Law of prevailing in this Country.

29—Contingent contract—Present transfer of an actionable claim—Compromise by promisor.

A decree was passed against the present appellant. He had no funds wherewith to appeal to Privy Council and so he contracted with the present respondent to supply him the funds in lieu of having a ten-annas share in the then disputed property in the event of the appellant's success in the Privy Council. The appellant subsequently compromised the original suit with the successful party whereby he got 1,100 bighas of land instead of the property which was valued at Rs. 85,000. No appeal was ever preferred to the Privy Council. The present respondent sued the present appellant to recover from him a share of ten annas in the 1,100 bighas of land. Held, that in this country in Courts where the English Law does not prevail, champerty is not per se illegal, but that every such arrangement must stand or fall according to the peculiar nature of its conditions. Contingent contracts to do or not to do anything if an uncertain future event happens, cannot be enforced by law, unless and until that event has happened. In the present instance the uncertain future event was the passing of a decree in the appellant's favour by Her Majesty's Privy Council. No such decree had been passed, and the contract contingent on its passing cannot be enforced. The agreement cannot be accepted as an actual deed of present transfer, but is merely an agreement to transfer at a future date.

The English Law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India.

A fair agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit, in consideration of having a share in the property if recovered, ought not to be regarded per se as opposed to public policy, but when the agreement is found to be extortionate and unconscionable, so as to be inequitable, or to be made not with the bona fide object of assisting a claim believed to be just and of obtaining a reasonable recompense therefor, but for improper objects, as for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring or oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits so as to be contrary to public policy, effect ought not to be given to it.

But the question whether the transaction is an unfair and unconscionable bargain for an inadequate price, is entirely a question between the assignor and the assignee

Where, in such an agreement, there was a covenant to the effect that it will not be competent to the assignor to enter into any compromise with the defendant, in respect of the subject-matter of any suit instituted for the recovery of properties, and that, if he entered into any such compromise, the transferee would be entitled to prosecute the suit: Held, that a covenant of this nature for the protection of the purchaser is valid in law.

The Court must not proceed upon suspicion only, and must not make any presumption against apparent ownership.

In the case of Dasnami Gossains or Sanyasis the custom is this. When a person intends to enter the sect, some ordinary ceremonies are performed, such as the shaving of the head, bathing of the body, wearing of new clothes and taking of a new name. He then becomes a Gossain in a state of probation. After he has remained so for a year or two and made himself familiar with the usages of the order, the ceremony of Biraja Home is celebrated by whispering the Mul Mantra into his ears, and it is only after the performance of Biraja Home that he attains the status of a perfect and completed Chela. During the period of probation it is open to the Chela to renounce the life of the monastery and to return to his family, but after the performance of the Biraja Home, reversion to secular life is an impossibility.

The Biraja Home ceremony is not performed till the probationer attains the age of discretion, so as to be able to realize for himself the full significance of the final act of renunciation of the world.

(24) Maintenance and Champerty-Agreement to carry on litigation not per se opposed to public policy—Contd.

It is unlikely that the Biraja Home ceremony should be reserved for performance on only one day in the year. It is more likely that it should be allowed to be performed on specially auspicious days.

The performance of Biraja Home ceremony is essential to entitle a Chela to claim by inheritance the estate of his Guru; a mere nomination by the Guru is not sufficient.

The rule of succession by nomination by the Guru or by election by the mohunts of the order, is not of universal application.

There is no fixed rule which regulates the relation between the superior and subordinate Maths, for even if a Math is subordinate to another, it must be governed by its own rules of management.

In order to establish the custom of lapse, it is necessary to prove not merely that, in some instances, the property had passed to the spiritual head of the monastery, but also that this took place in the presence of a Chela who would, otherwise, be competent to take by inheritance. 31. Maintenance—Gambling in litigation - Agreement opposed to public policy—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 23.

The judgment of the Privy Council in L R 4 I A, 23 ; 2 Cal, 233, shows that while that specific English law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India, and where fair agreements to supply funds to carry on litigation in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered should not be regarded as per se opposed to public policy, yet such agreements should be carefully watched, and if extortionate and unconscionable, or made not with the bona fide object of assisting, for a reasonable recompense, a claim believed to be just, but for the purpose of gambling in litigation, or of injuring or oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits, should be held contrary to public policy, and not enforced. For the purposes of meeting the expenses of an appeal to the High Court, the appellant, on the advice of his legal adviser, executed a bond for Rs 25,000 in consideration of the obligee agreeing to defray such expenses. The obligor agreed to pay the Rs. 25,000 within one year from his recovering possession of the property in suit ; and, at the request of the obligor's pleader, the obligee advanced Rs. 3,700, which was applied to the expenses of the appeal. The High Court dismissed the appeal ; and in a deed executed by the obligor in favour of the obligee and others for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a further appeal to the Privy Council, he admitted his liability under the former bond. The Privy Council decreed his appeal, and he obtained possession of the property in suit, but declined to pay the Rs 25,000, upon which the obligee sued upon the bond. It was found that, apart from the moneys borrowed by the obligor from time to time, he was without even the means of subsistence; that he executed the bond with his eyes open and perfectly understood his position and the effect of both the instruments executed by him ; that no fraud or improper pressure appeared to have been applied to him ; that his legal advisers had acted honestly and to the best of their ability in his interests; that there was nothing to show that, having regard to the risks of the litigation, he could have obtained the assistance necessary for the prosecution of his appeal on better terms than those contained in the bond ; that without such assistance he could not have appealed to the High Court ; and that the obligee gave him such assistance upon his application. Held, also, that the obligee could not, under the circumstances, have considered both that the obligor's claim was a just one and reasonably likely to succeed, and that the Rs 25,000 was a reasonable recompense in the event of success for the advance of Rs. 3,700 ; and the bond was therefore a gambling in litigation, which it would be contrary to public policy to enforce. The Court gave the plaintiff a decree for the Rs. 3,700 actually advanced, with simple interest at 20 per cent. per annum from the date of the bond to the date of the decree, with costs in proportion, and interest at 6 per cent. per annum on the Rs. 3,700 inter-

An Agreement, by which a person, advancing money for conduct of a litigation, is promised the return of his money without interest and a share in the property, is not opposed to public policy; nor is it of the nature of a wager but ought to be treated as a conditional promise or guarantee 23 W R 148; 1 B L R 509; 1 I A 241; 20 I A 112; 20 Cal 843, Ref. Niamat Ali v Ilahi Bakhsh. 8 Ind Cas 500

33.—Champertous transaction, inadequacy of price.

Plaintiff paid defendant Rs 30, who with that money recovered his land from third person in a suit. In consideration of this, defendant sold to the plaintiff, a portion of the land, worth Rs. 200. For some time plaintiff got only the produce of the land and not the possession of it, Plaintiff brought a suit to recover this land. The District Court held that the transaction was champertous and dismissed the suit. Held, that inadequacy of the price was not sufficient to make the transaction a champertous one. Gurusami v Subbaraya. 12 Mad 118.

34—Purchase for an inadequate consideration—Speculative suit not necessarily champertous.

It was not a case in which an improper interest had been acquired in the 36—A contract disclosing conditions falling within the definition of champerty, as laid down in 8 Moore's Indian Appeals, page 186, is illegal and no action can be maintained upon it in a Court of law. "It must be something against good policy and justice, something tending to promote unnecessary litigation, something that in a legal sense is immoral and to the constitution of which a bad motive in the same sense is necessary."

A contract by which a party in consideration of supplying funds to enable another to prosecute a bona fide claim was to participate in the fruits of the suit, is not void. Gholam Mahomad v Walidad. P R 70 of 1870.

that the plaintiff had supplied Rs 80 only where as the value of the ¼th share was over Rs. 300. In a suit for specific performance of the agreement.—Held that, (a) the agreement not being registered could not affect land of the value of over Rs. 300 ; and (b) specific performance should not be decreed as the plaintiff would thereby reap a grossly unfair advantage. Jhandu Khan v Barkhurdar. 150 P R 1889.

Held, that transaction was an unconscionable bargain and liable to be set aside.

Held further that if plaintiff, who had the successful conduct of the prior litigation, made the bargain with the knowledge that the claim was false, the transaction would be champertous and that if he believed the claim of the defendants to be good, the sale was unconscionable.

Vijayaraghava v Pranal Anne. 1 M L J 340.

held, that the transaction ought to be relieved against, as unfair advantage was taken of the pressing difficulties and necessitous circumstances of the vendors to force upon them a bargain which was hard and unconscionable. Assuming that plaintiff (vendee) honestly believed that the vendor had a good and honest claim, the offer to secure his advances upon the whole estate was more than ample, and if he did not believe the claim to be a good one, the advance was of a champertous character and for the mere purpose of speculative litigation Vijayaraghavh v Pranal anne, 1 M L J 340.

(31) Champertous agreement between legal practitioner and client—Grossly improper conduct in discharge of professional duty.

40A—Legal Practitioners Act, 1879,—Sections 13, 14

One A M., a certificated mukhtar, entered into an agreement with certain clients wherein it was stipulated that A. M. should undertake all the expenses up to final appeal connected with a civil case, to be instituted on behalf of his clients in consideration of receiving half the net proceeds of the litigation. The lower Courts holding that A. M. had thereby been guilty of " grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty, " within the meaning of Section 13 of the Legal Practitioners Act. 1879, suspended him from practice under Section 14 of the Act.

The matter having been referred by the Divisional Judge to the Chief Court, Held, that the mere existence of the relation of pleader and client is sufficient for the instant condemnation, as opposed to public policy, of any agreement for the supply of funds for litigation in consideration of a delivery of a share in the property, in suit on recovery and that a legal practitioner entering into such an illegal agreement is, for the same reasons as establish the contract to be opposed to public policy, guilty of "grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duties." Muhammad, Mukhtar. 111 P. When a Vakil takes an active interest in a case during its pendency in the lower Court and there is an understanding that he will be engaged as vakil when the case comes up to the High Court it cannot be said no relationship of pleader and client existed between himself and the client before the actual execution and acceptance of the Vakalatnama. Advocate a Vakil, a Pleader and Mukhtear. 4 C L J 262.

(33) Purchase of property to which adverse claims exist legality of—Purchase merely for litigation illegal.

41.—T P Act S. 130.

Plaintiffs alleged that one T with the authority of her late husband, adopted S, the first defendant in the suit that they purchased from S, the plaint villages, which S, had inherited from his adoptive father, and that they were resisted by other defendants in obtaining possession of the villages.

The defendants, other than S, pleaded that the plaint sale-deed was a champertous transaction, that no consideration passed for it and that the agreement itself was void, its object being to disturb the peace of the defendant's family and to promote gambling in litigation. Preliminary issues were framed as to whether the sale-deed represented a real and bona fide transaction and whether the transaction evidenced by the sale-deed was of a champertous nature and as such, opposed to public policy. On the evidence, the District Judge found that the purchase was speculative, that no consideration passed to S, and that the transaction was entered into mainly with a veiw to harass the defendants and, in the view that the entire transaction was a speculation in litigation rather than a bona fide purchase of an actionable claim, he dismissed the suit. Held, on appeal, reversing the decision—even if the recital in the sale-deed as to the consideration is a false recital and the transaction is one of a highly speculative character, it does not necessarily follow that the agreement would be an offence against the law of champerty or that its objects could be regared as immoral or opposed to public policy.

The question in such cases is whether the real object of the transaction has been to acquire an interest in property of purchaser or merely to speculate in litigation on the account either of the vendor and purchaser jointly or of the purchaser alone. It is not unlawful to purchase an interest in property though adverse claims exist which make litigation necessary for realizing the interest, but it is unlawful to purchase an interest merely for the purpose of litigation. In other words, the sale of an interest to which a right to sue is incident. is good; but the sale of a mere right to sue is bad for champerty. The object of the law is not so much to prevent the purchase or assignment of a matter then in litigation for the purpose of maintaining the action. 8 M 1 A 170, 14 Bom 72; 18 Mad 4, 22 Mad 310; 27 All 271 Ref. Deoran Gopalji Kunbi v Sadashed. 2 N L R 17.

A mere untrue recital in a deed (viz; that consideration has been paid) will not render the transaction evidenced by the deed as champertous or contrary to public policy. Where, upon the death of a daughter the estate which she inherited from her father became vested in the next collateral heir of the father, but the daughter's husband continued to hold the estate and the next collateral, who was in needy circumstance and was unable to recover possession without external assistance entered into an arrangement by which he sold half the estate to the respondent for consideration and there was nothing extortionate or unreasonable in the terms of the bargain but the sale deed recited that a part 43.—General prayer for relief in plaint-What relief ought to be granted—Incomplete cause of action—Plea of waste by reversion failing whether he should be allowed to pay off alienee for legal necessity-What expenses chargeable on estate and what payable out of widow's income.

A Hindu widow alienated certain properties which she had inherited from person, it was alleged, without legal necessity. On her death the reversioners who were refused possession by the alienees executed a deed of conveyance in favour of one B, by which they purported to sell their rights in the property, which was worth 3 lakhs of rupees to B for Rs. 52,000 of which however only Rs 600 were paid down, it being provided that the balance was to be paid in proportion to B's success in recovering the alienated properties by suit or otherwise. Upon this agreement B brought a suit to recover possession of the properties alleging that the alternations were not for legal necessity.

Held, that although the English rule against champerty and maintenance does not prevail in this country in its entirety yet the present agreement was void as being an unconscionable and speculative agreement and one opposed to public policy as promoting gambling in litigation, (2 Cal 233; 8 M I A 187 Ref.) Debi Doyal Sahoo v Thakurai Bhan Partap Singh.

44.—Reversionary heir—Agreements opposed to public policy—Contract for sale.

Where, after the death of a Hindu widow, the reversioner, who was out of possession, entered into an agreement with the plaintiff, under which the latter was to provide the entire expenses of the litigation and in return therefor the former undertook, on obtaining possession of the property in question, to make over one-half of the same to the plaintiff. Held that the agreement was not void either on the ground that it was opposed to public policy or that it was of the nature of a wagering transaction

Held, futher, that the agreement did not amount to a sale and did not confer on the plaintiff any interest in the property capable of being enforced by a suit against the parties in possession who were not themselves bound by the terms of the agreement. 20 Cal 843 Ref: 8 O C 155, 11 O C 301 Dist. Inder Singh v Kesri Singh.

(1) Unpaid vendors—Distinction between vendor's lien under English Law and a charge under the Transfer of Property Act s. 55.

1—Chancery Court's practice—Purchase in consideration of a covenant—Purchase in consideration of sum of money.

A mortgagee or chargee, who is in possession of an estate as such and gives up possession to a person entitled to it subject to his charge upon payment of what is then due to him, is not precluded from afterwards asserting his right against the estate when further instalments, or further payments, become due to him.

The charge which the vendor obtains under the Transfer of Property Act is different in its origin and nature from the vendor's lien given by Courts of Equity to an unpaid vendor. The latter is a creation of the Courts of Equity and can be modified to the circumstances of the case by the Court of Equity. As regards the former the law of India knows nothing of the distinction between legal and equitable property in the sense in which that is understood when equity is administered by the Court of Chancery in England, and the Transfer of Property Act gives a statutory charge upon the estate to an unpaid vendor unless it be excluded by contract. Such a charge stands in quite a different position from a vendor's lien. The Court has to find something, either express contract, or at least something from which it is a necessary implication that such a contract exists, in order to exclude the charge given by the statute. The charge is not excluded by a mere personal contract to defer payment of a portion of the purchase money, or to take the purchase-money by instalments, nor it is excluded by any contract, covenant, or agreement with respect to the purchase money which is not inconsistent with the continuance of the charge.

(1) Unpaid vendor—Distinction between vendor's lien under English Law and a charge under the Transfer of Property Act S. 55—Concld.

A conveyance or sale in consideration of a covenant to pay a sum of money in the future is different from a sale in consideration of money which the purchaser covenants to pay. The distinction between the two may seem fine one, but it is a real distinction. The former does not give rise to a charge while the latter does.

(5) Maintenance of Hindu widow — Whether charge upon the estate.

5—Hindu law—Mitakshara School—Transfer of estate with intention to defeat right—Fraudulent intention—Purchaser with notice, position of.

When immoveable property from the profits of which a Hindu widow was entitled to receive her maintenance was sold and the sale-deed recited that the amount of maintenance would continue to be paid to the widow by the vendor and that the property sold would not be subject to any charge for it. Held,—That this mere recital was not enough for holding that the conveyance was executed with the intention of defeating the right of the maintenance-holder within the meaning of sec. 39 of the Transfer of Property Act. It was necessary to enquire whether at the time of the sale, there was sufficient property left in the hands of the vendor out of which the amount of maintenance could be realised, and if there was not, whether the vendee was aware of the fact. The intention to defeat the right of the maintenance-holder against which provision is made in sec. 39 of the Transfer of Property Act, involves the idea of a fraudulent intention. 22 All 326 (1900), approved. The question was as to whether the words "pay... the amount from their properties" created a charge. Held, that the words "properties" referred to the properties mentioned in the schedules to the deed, and consequently there was no indefiniteness. The words were sufficiently apt to create a charge. Obiter.—Even if the language were general (and not specific as in this case) it does not follow that a charge is not created by reason of the fact that the language is general, since a distinction should be drawn between wideness of language and indefiniteness of language. cree setting aside the sale and granting them possession conditional on payment of Rs 754. No period was fixed for payment and the decree was not executed. The plaintiffs brought the present suit in May 1907 to recover possession from the purchaser who admittedly obtained possession in 1887.

Held, that the conditional decree did not create a mortgage or " judicial hypothec " on the land in suit; and,

That the suit is barred by limitation, being governed either by (b) Art. 144 or 142 (c) Limitation Act 1877.

The contention that possession against a minor does not become adverse until he attains majority is hopeless and unsupported by authorities.

S. 7 Limitation Act, 1877, does not apply to this case, as the cause of action arose in 1887, and the suit was brought in 1907 long after three years from the time when the youngest son attained majority, which was in the year 1901. 10 P R 1888, 30 P W R 1909, Dist: 5 All 493, Ref: 141 P R 1892, Ref: 8 A W N 152; 8 A W N 256 and 7 M L T 131, Ref: Shamier v. 14—Compromise in settlement Court not equivalent to a mortgage—Limitation Act (1877) Sch. II, Art. 144—Recovery of the whole share.

On the basis of a compromise, a decree was passed, in favour of the ancestors of the plaintiff and his co-sharers, by the Settlement Courts, to the effect that they would be entitled to the possession of their share in the property, if they paid their share of the family debts, and if they failed to do so, the defendants would be entitled to take possession of the whole of their shares. It was also added in the compromise, that if, afterwards, the plaintiff and his co-sharers paid the whole of the debt due from them, they would be entitled to recover possession of their shares. The defendants paid the entire amount and took possession of the whole share of the plaintiff and his co-sharers. The plaintiff now sought to redeem his own share, as well as that of his co-sharers, on the payment of the amount due from him and his co-sharers on account of their share. The defendants pleaded that the suit to redeem was not maintainable and was also barred by limitation, as they had been in possession for more than twelve years. They also pleaded that the plaintiff could not recover more than his own share.

Held, that the above compromise did not create the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee between the parties to it, and no suit for redemption could lie, but the suit of the plaintiffs should not be dismissed, merely because the plaintiff had stated in his plaint that the above compromise had created such a relationship The suit was actually for recovery of the property on payment of a certain charge and should have been decreed as such. The actual facts were clear from the pleadings, and the defendants were not in any way prejudiced by such a view of the case.

Held, further, that the suit being really one for possession of the property on payment of a charge it was governed by Art. 144 of the second schedule of the Limitation Act, and as the defendants had not succeeded in showing that they had been in adverse possession for more than 12 years before the date, on which the present suit was instituted, it was not barred by limitation.

Held, also, that the plaintiff could recover not only his own share, but also those of his other co sharers, on payment of the amount due from him, as well as from those other co-sharers. Karim Baksh Khan v. Mehdi Hasan Khan, 10 O C 17.

When a decree, either preliminary or final, is once passed, the Judge passing it has no power to vary or alter it on an application made to him based merely on a notice of motion. A Lohana testator by his will gave a bequest of Rs. 7,500 for distribution of tramdees (brass pots) to the members of his caste and Saraswat Brahmins in Bombay; and he made another bequest to present tras (a kind of copper pot) and sugar candy among the members of his caste and Sarasvat Brahmins in 1440 villages in Cutch. The advocate General, as the relation of the plaintiffs, sued to have it declared that it was not practicable to carry out those bequests, and to ask the Court to apply them cypres to some other and more useful charity. Held, that the bequests in question were valid public charitable bequests, and were capable of being carried out. In cases of charitable bequests, the Court has no right to set aside the wishes of the testator and substitute another charity in the place of one directed to be established by him, simply because the one might not be so useful as some other that the Court might substitute. The Advocate General of Bombay v Fardoonji Ardeshir Cursetji Fardoonji. 13 Bom L R 332.

4.—Plaintiff's suit brought to recover money paid under the following circumstances, dismissed: Money was made over to the Deputy Commissioner on behalf of certain indigent persons whose parents or other relatives had been killed in an accident at the plaintiff's premises. At the removal of the corpses, the Deputy Commissioner in the presence of a large crowd expressed to the plaintiff, to the defective state of whose building the accident was partly attributable, that the sufferers were in very indigent circumstances and that looking to the plaintiff's means it was proper that he should come to the relief of their families. He at once expressed his readiness so to do. Some of the principal citizens of Amritsar who were then standing round were asked what they thought would be a proper sum for him to give. They then said Rupees 500 for the relations of each person. The Deputy Commissioner, however, expressed his opinion that Rupees 250 would be a more appropriate amount and accordingly the sum of Rupees 3,000 with Rupees 250 for the police and the medical attendant, was made over to one of the subordinates of the Deputy Commissioner, who had left the place. The Deputy Commissioner immediately after the money had come to his office, commenced a system of relief out of the money. In this way he had disposed of Rupees 300, when he received a telegram requesting him to stop the disbursement, and he shortly afterwards received a letter from the plaintiff's agent requesting the return of the money. He, however, disbursed the rest of the money, whereupon plaintiff sued.

1—Consent of Advocate General—Suit relating to charity—Amendment of plaint—Substitution of another plaintiff with the consent of the Advocate General.

A suit under S. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code was in the first instance brought by one person with the consent of the Advocate General. This was objected to, and it led to an amendment of the plaint by the addition of the second plaintiff, with the certificate of the Advocate General which ran:-"I give my consent to the amendment of the plaint of this suit as proposed."

Held, that the suit as brought is defective in a material particular; for S. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code nowhere speaks of the consent of the Advocate General to an amendment of the plaint, and it would be unduly forcing the words of the Code to hold that by virtue of the second consent given by the Advocate General it can be said of this suit that it was instituted by two persons having an interest in the trust and having obtained the consent in writing of the Advocate General. Darves v Jainudin. 8 Bom L R 751=30 Bom 603.

Charter of incorporation.

1—Mosque, Mahomedan-Suit to set aside scheme—Rights of congregation—Crown if necessary party—Prerogative.

In 1852——53, some Mahomedan merchants of Mauritius purchased certain properties purporting to act on behalf of the place and founded a mosque. Thereafter from time to time adjoining properties were bought and added to the mosque by Mahomedan merchants purporting to act in the same way on behalf of the whole Mahomedan community In 1877 and on subsequent dates several purchases of properties were made by Cutchee merchants purporting to act on behalf of the Cutchee Mahomedan alone, but this practice was not consistently followed in later times, and though the Cutchees, being the richest members of the congregation, contributed individually in proportion to their means, considerable contributions were also made in the aggregate by the Hallaye and Soortee Mahomedans The administration of the affairs of the mosque was left mainly, if not entirely, in the hands of Cutchee Mahomedan because they were leading merchants but not because they belonged to that particular class of Mahomedans. In 1893 Cutchees executed deeds forming themselves into a society (which they subsequently had incorporated) consisting of Cutchee Mahomedan alone and excluding the other classes for all future time from membership of the society and the management of the mosque, for which purpose they appointed a committee or management out of their own body with extensive powers of selling and letting properties other than the mosque and its accessories. All the properties they declared to have vested exclusively in the society:—Held —That a portion of the congregation had no right by forming a new association to transfer all the property to the new association and exclude the rest of the congregation from membership and from participation in the management of the affairs of the mosque. The charter of incorporation obtained by the defendants did not legalise their position, as the only association which could claim to be legalised was the congregation on whose behalf the mosque had been founded. That the rule laid down in the French Civil Code (which is in force in Mauritius) that a religious community does not constitute a "Civil person" and cannot without being authorised by the State hold property has not always been carried out to its logical conclusions and the court will grant relief to aggrieved members of an unauthorised religious community against their fellow members. That having regard to the existing law of Mauritius the court in setting aside the deeds and the scheme of management set up by the defendants could not proceed to frame a new scheme of management such as would be entirely free from legal objections. In the absence of any reason to fear that the restoration of the statu quo ante would lead to mal-administration this should be left to the congregation to settle amicably, and give effect to, by obtaining a charter of incorporation. That in a suit by some of the aggrieved Hallayas and Soortees to set aside the deeds set up by the defendants the Crown was not a necessary party as the law of Mauritius does not require that the Crown should be impleaded and the prerogatives of the Crown would not be affected by the decision in the suit. That in any case the objection that the Crown had not been made a party ought to have been taken to the lower Court. Quære—Whether a congregation formed for the purposes of prayer and religious worship requires the sanction of the Government, and that without such sanction it becomes an illegal association, in the sense of being criminal within the meaning of Arts. 219 and 213 of the Ordinance 6 of 1838 ?

By the terms of a charter-party a vessel was to take in a full cargo at Bombay, and therewith proceed to a " safe port in the Mediterranean (Spanish Ports excluded), as ordered on signing bills of lading,or so near thereunto as she may safely get, and deliver the same to the said charterers or their assignees always afloat. The master refused to sign the bills of lading or sail for Cette. The vessel's draught of water when loaded was such that she could not have entered or lain afloat in Cette harbour without discharging a portion of her cargo. The cost of lightening the vessel by lighters outside the harbour would, under the charter-party, fall on the charterers, and they were willing to incur the expenses necessary for that purpose. Held that it was no breach of the charter-party by the master to refuse to sail to Cette, or to sign bills of lading for that port. Graham & Co. v Mervanji Nusservanji. 5 Bom 539

1880 F. M. & Co., as agents for master and owner let the steam-ship Hutton to E, for a term of not less than three and not more than four months for the sum of Rs. 15,000 per month, payable in advance. By subsequent agreement the term was extended to 30th March 1881, and the charterer was to pay at the rate of Rs. 18,000 a month for the extended time. On 27th February 1881, the ship being about to proceed on her last voyage to Calcutta and thence to Bombay, E, finding himself unable to pay more then Rs. 6,000 out of the sum of Rs. 18,000, which was then due as hire for the month ending 9th March 1881, requested the plaintiff to pay F, M& Co. on his behalf the remaining Rs. 12,000.The plaintiffs did so in consideration of an agreement, whereby E assigned to them all the freight payable to E and all benefits under the said charter-party in respect of the then intended voyage of the Hutton It was also agreed between the plaintiffs and E that the said ship should be consigned to the plaintiffs at Calcutta and also to them at Bombay, and that the plaintiffs should receive all the freight, passagemoney, etc.. to be recovered for the said voyage, the plaintiffs charging two per cent, commission on the gross value of the freight shipped in Calcutta and two per cent. on the amount of freight collected by them in Bombay, and interest on the said sum of Rs. 12,000 at the rate of nine per cent. per annum. Due notice of this agreement was given to F, M & Co. On the 11th March, E, being unable to pay the Rs. 6,000, requested the plaintiff to pay that sum to F, M & Co. on his behalf, which the plaintiffs did,—E agreeing that the said payment should be on the same terms as those on which the Rs. 12,000 had been paid. The ship, having proceeded to Calcutta, returned with cargo to Bombay, where she arrived on 2nd April 1881. F, M & Co ,as agents for master and owner, refused to allow the plaintiffs to collect the freight payable in Bombay, and collected it themselves. The plaintiffs brought his suit, in the first instance, against the owner and the master of the Hutton (first and second defendants), praying for an account of the moneys received by the defendants or their agents in respect of the freight, and for payment of the balance found due after deducting the sums properly payable to the defendants for hire of the ship and and for Rs.400 damages sustained by the plaintiffs by reason of the wrongful act of the defendants, whereby the plaintiffs had been deprived of the two per cent. commission. The plaintiffs alleged that the balance due to them would be about Rs. 9,500. The first defendant did not appear. The second defendant (the master) contended that he was not liable;that F, M & Co. had been especially appointed as agents of the owner; that they were not his (the master's) agents; and that they had no authority to sign the charter-party for him. He admitted that the sum of Rs.12,000 had been paid to F, M & Co. by the plaintiffs as agents for the owner; but as to the Rs. 6,000, he denied that it had been paid to F, M & Co. on his account or on account of the owner. He further alleged that there was a large sum due by E in respect of hire of the ship and other proper claims against him under the charter-party, and that the defendants were, therefore, justified in refusing the demands of the plaintiffs as assignees of E until the whole of their claims against E were liquidated. He alleged that F, M & Co. had received the freight of the ship, amounting to Rs. 20,426, and he claimed a lien on this sum in respect of the sum of Rs. 19,282 due for hire and other charges on the said ship, and Rs. 605 for money paid for short delivery of goods. The plaintiffs subsequently made F. M & Co. defendants to the suit. In their written statement, F, M & Co. stated that they had signed the chater-party as agents only and not as principals, and they contended that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against the first defendant and the second defendant, but must elect to proceed separately against either, and, further, that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against themselves (F, M & Co.) and the second defendant, but should elect to proceed separately against either. They admitted the receipt of the Rs. 12,000 as agents for the first defendant, and not as agents of the second defendant. As to the Rs. 6,000, they alleged that it had been paid to them, not on account of the Hutton, but in respect of claims which they had against E in connection with the Clan Gordon, another ship which had been chartered by E. They admitted the receipt of the freight of the Hutton, amounting to Rs. 20,426, but claimed a lien on this sum in respect of hire and other proper charges due under the charter-party. Held that the second defendant (the master) was not liable on the charter-party. He had given no authority to

(2) Principal and Agent—Contd.

F, M & Co. to sign it as his agents; and his conduct in acting under the charter-party, being referable to his character of, and duty as, master, did not amount to ratification. But inasmuch as he claimed to deduct from the freight received in Bombay sums which were paid either by him or to F, M & Co. for him, he was so far a proper party to the suit. Held, also that, under s 230 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), F, M & Co. were not liable as principals on the charter-party as they appeared on the face of the charter-party to have signed merely as agents. But they were liable, under s. 235 of the Contract Act, for having untruly represented themselves to be the authorized agents of the master to enter on his behalf into the contract therein contained. Their liability was limited to the amount which could have been recovered from the master if he had really been their principal. No difference was made in their liability by the fact that the owner was also liable. As to the Rs. 6,000.—Held on the evidence that the plaintiffs at the time of the payment had specifically appropriated this sum to the hire then due for the Hutton. Held, further, that the charter-party was one of the class known as " locatio navis et operarum magistri ", that under such a charter-party the master would as between owner and charterer, sign bills of lading as agent of the charterer; that as between the owner and the charterer the latter was liable to defray the damages for non-performance of the contracts contained in the bills of lading, including damages for short delivery of cargo; and that, such being the liability of E as charterer, the plaintiffs as his assignees were bound by all the equities affecting him, so that the defendants might set off as against the plaintiffs whatever the owner of the Hutton might have set off against E if he had been the plaintiff. The second defendant (the master) alleged that he had paid in Bombay certain sums of money to consignees as damages for short delivery of cargo,and he claimed credit for such payments as against the plaintiffs. Held that he had no power to bind E by making such payments on his behalf in Bombay, where both E and the plaintiffs were resident, without the consent either of E or of the plaintiffs. In order to establish these charges against E and his assignees (the plaintiffs), it was necessary for the defendants to prove either that they were in fact due, in which case the master would be justified in paying them under s. 69 of the Contract Act, or that their correctness had been admitted by E or his agents. The defendants having failed to produce the required proof, the claim of the second defendant was disallowed.

3.—Misdescription of tonnage of ship—Misrepresentation in contract—Contract Act (XI of 1872), ss. 10, 13, 14, 18, 19—Condition precedent.

The defendants in Bombay chartered a ship from the plaintiffs, which was described in the charter-party as of the measurement of about 2,700-2,800 tons nett register. The ship had never been in Bombay, and was wholly unknown to the defendants. Evidence was given that in the negotiations for the charter-party the plaintiffs stated to the defendants that the ship was certainly not more than 2,800 tonnage register. She, however, turned out to be of the registered tonnage of 3,045 tons, and the defendants refused to accept her in fulfilment of the charter-party. Held by Parsons, J; that the defendants were entitled to treat the contract as void by reason of the erroneous statement of the plaintiffs with regard to the size of the ship. (Contract Act, IX of 1872, ss. 10, 13, 14, 18, 19,). Held on appeal Sargent, C. J; and Farran, J, (1) that the representation in the charter-party as to the tonnage of the vessel was intended to be a substantive part of the contract between the parties; (2) that the statement in the contract was a condition precedent of which the defendants were entitled to avail themselves whether or not they would have suffered loss had they accepted the ship, (3) that the facts justified the defendants in repudiating the contract.

4.—Optional clause—Choice of ports to load cargo—Election of port.

The plaintiff chartered the defendants' ship to proceed from Bombay to Jedda and thence carry a cargo of pilgrims to Calcutta. The charter party contained the following clause:—" Owners to have the option of requiring the charterer to ship salt at Ras Rawaya or at Aden to fill up the lower holds of the steamer, at a lump sum of Rs. 12,000 payable before delivery at the port of discharge.Rs.2000 to be deposited by the charterer on account of the above freight,out which Rs,500 to be paid here (Bombay) 48 hours before sailing. and Rs.500 before departure of the steamer from Jedda". Before the ship left Bombay the plaintiff was called upon to pay and paid the Rs.1,500 advance freight. On the ship's arrival at Jedda, the plaintiff was required by the defendants' agent to name the port where he intended to load the salt, and pay the Rs. 500 named in the charter-party, The plaintiff, in reply, named Aden and paid the Rs.500, which the defedants' agent acknowledged as received "for filling up salt to go to Aden." This was on the 22nd July. The captain, however, believing that the plaintiff would not find salt at Aden for Calcutta, refused to sail to Aden to load the salt, unless the expense of going there and returning to Jedda for the pilgrims was guarenteed by the plaintiff, which the plaintiff refused to do. Subsequently, on the 30th July, the captain, on the instructions of the defendants, informed the plaintiff that the choice of the port to load salt was with the defendants, and that they named Ras Rawaya as the port where the plaintiff was required to load his salt, and refused to go to Aden. The plaintiff refused to go to Ras Rawaya. There was, to the defendants' knowledge, no salt at Ras Rawaya. There was plenty of salt at Aden, though none offering for Calcutta, owing to the prices ruling at the latter port. The captain refusing to load the pilgrims unless the balance of the Rs 12000 salt freight was paid in advance, the plaintiff paid it, and brought this suit to recover the whole of the said sum Held that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed (i) because by the true construction of the contract the choice of the port must be taken to be with the plaintiff, who had to do all that was necessary to provide the salt, the option given by the contract to the owners being as to whether they should require salt to be loaded or not; and (ii) because, if the election of the port was with the defendants, they, through their agent at Jedda, conclusively determined their election in favour of Aden at latest on the 22nd July when they accepted the Rs 500 "for filling up salt to go to Aden." Abdul Rahman Allarakhia v Hasanbhoy Visram. 16 Bom; 501.

5.—Mistake in date—Mistake mutual or unilateral—Rectification or rescission of contract.

The plaintiffs required a steamer to sail from Jedda "fifteen days after the Haj," in order to convey pilgrims returning to Bombay. They chartered a steamer from the defendants in June 1891 for that purpose. The defendants chartered their steamers by English dates. The date inserted in the charter-party was "the 10th August 1892 (fifteen days after the Haj)". "The 10th August 1892" was given or accepted by the plaintiffs in the belief that it corresponded with the fifteenth day after the Haj. The defendants had no belief on the subject, and contracted, only with respect to the English date. The 19th July 1892, and not the 10th August 1892, in fact corresponded with the fifteenth day after the Haj. On finding out the mistake in March 1892, the plaintiff brought this suit for rectification of the charter-party by the insertion of the correct date, the 19th July 1892, instead of the erroneous date, the 10th August 1892. Meanwhile the defendants had let all their steamers, and could not give the plaintiff one for the 19th July 1892. Held that the agreement was one for the 10th August 1892, and that, as that date was a matter materially inducing the agreement, there could be no rectification, but only cancellation, even if both parties were under a mistake. Held, further, that the mistake was not mutual, but on the plaintiffs' part only; and, therefore, there could be no rectification. A plaintiff seeking rectification must show that there was an actual concluded contract antecedent to the instrument sought to be rectified, and that such contract is inaccurately represented in the instrument.. Abdul Rahman Allarkhia v Bombay and Persia Steam Nevigation Company. 16 Bom; 561.

6—Charter-party—Contract between shipper and freight brokers, effect of—Notice of a charter party not sufficient to bind the intending shipper to its terms.

Where there is no contract or privity between a shipper of goods and the captain of a ship chartered by frieght-brokers who have given shipping orders to the shipper, the captain has no right to compel the shipper to ship his cargo, under the charter-party but is bound either to return the goods already shipped, if demanded back by the shipper, or to carry them under the terms of the shipping orders. A shipper who knows of all the clauses in the charter-party must not be taken, by sending his goods on board, to have contracted with the owners and to be bound by all the terms of the chater-party if sub-charter who contracted with him fails to perform his contract. Where a chartered ship is held out publicly as a general ship and a person ships goods on board of her, he is not bound by any of the terms of the charter-party but that where he knows of a charter-party he is prima facie bound by its terms, though to what extent depends upon circumstances. Mere notice of a charter-party is not sufficient to bind the intending shipper to all its terms. In order to bind the shipper there must either be express or implied contract or else circumstances and contract on the part of the shipper which operate as an estoppel against him. Where clean mate's receipts are given to a shipper of goods, he has a right to demand bills of lading subject to the charter-party. "Completion of Shipment" means the complete shipment of the entire cargo according to the charter-party Chhabildas v. Ralli, 1 Bom L R 319=23 Bom 551.

7.—Contract of—Ship-owner's lien—Charterer and sub-charterer—Bill of lading issued to sub-charterer by captain—Captain authorized by owner of ship to sign bill of lading-Sub-charterer whether bound by charter party-"Without prejudice to the charter," meaning of—Notice by shipper of charter party, effect of.

Where the captain of a chartered ship was, by the terms of the charter-party, authorized to sign bills of lading on behalf of the ship-owners, a bill of lading issued by the captain to a sub-charterer entitled the latter to have the goods delivered to him on the terms of the bill of lading, irrespective of the charter-party, although he had notice of it. (1 Cal and Fin 1832; 9 Bing 574, 1883. L R 1 C P 689,1866; L R 15 Q B D 1884 Fol). A stipulation in the charter party that the bills of lading were to be signed by the captain "without prejudice to the charter" only meant that the rights of the shipowners and the charterers against each other under the charter-party were to be preserved. Third parties to whom the bills of lading were issued would not thereby be made liable to the conditions stipulated in the charter-party. L R 1894, 1 Q B 612 Ref. Notice by a shipper of the charter party has not the effect of incorporating into the bill of lading any terms which are inconsistent with it and which the captain was not bound to embody in the bill of lading. If the charter-party shows that the captain exceeded his authority in signing the bill of lading, and the shipper knew this, he cannot enforce the terms of the bill of lading uncontrolled by the charter-party. If the shipper knew that there was a charter-party, and had the opportunity of reading it, and did not trouble himself about it, he might be treated as knowing the contents. Turner v Haji Goolam Muhammad Arjam. 1 A L J 553 P C=31 I A 222=28 Bom 573=6 Bom L R 743=9 C W N 1.

(3) Parties to suit.

8.—If a master of a ship signs a charter party in his own name as a contracting party, and at the same time discloses the name of his principal, he can sue upon the charter party, but if a master signs a charter party for the owner as a contracting party, he cannot sue upon it. The owner of a ship residing in England can be sued in a Civil Court in Burma for a breach of the charter party, provided the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is instituted. The plaintiffs entered into a contract of charter-party with the defendants, whereby it was agreed between them and the defendants, acting for the owners, "that the steamer Atholl, now on her passage to Calcutta, being tight, staunch, and strong, etc. shall receive on board from the charterers a complete cargo of merchandise, to consist of 700 tons dead weight, and being so laden shall therewith proceed to London with liberty to call for any legal purpose at any intermediate port or ports; freight to be paid on the above cargo on right delivery of the same at and after the rate of £ 4-2-6 per ton; charterers to have the option of cancelling the charter-party, if the steamer has not arrived in Calcutta on 16th April 1871." The defendants signed the charter-party, as "agents of steamer Atholl." The steamer was not, at the time the charter-party was entered into, on her way to Calcutta, being then in the port of London, and she did not start

Rates of freight having declined since the middle of March, at which time it was alleged, the steamer ought to have arrived, the plaintiffs sued the defendants for damages. Held, the defendants were liable. The statement in the charter-party that the steamer was on her passege to Calcutta was a condition precenent. Schiller v. Finlay. 8 B L R 544.

(5) Freight.

10—Bill of lading—Liability of master where quantity signed for is more than cargo shipped.

The plaintiff chartered a ship, of which he was master, to one C H C, of Calcutta, under a charter-party, by which it was agreed that the ship (which was then at Melbourne) should proceed to certain ports and there load a cargo for Calcutta, "the cargo to be delivered to the charterer at Calcutta, on being paid freight at and after the rate of the lump sum of £ 1,150 for the full reach of the ship, the said freight to be paid on the unloading and right delivery of the cargo as customary, less any advances that may have been made." On the arrival of the ship at Calcutta, C H C requested the plaintiffs to deliver the cargo to the defendants as his agents which the plaintiff agreed to do on having payment of the freight guaranteed by the defendants. The defendants were bona fide holders of the bills of lading which had been signed by the plaintiffs in respect of the cargo. They sent to the agents of the plaintiff in Calcutta the following letter: "As it will be necessary for us for the protection of our interests to get delivery of the cargo, and as we do not care about further trouble in the matter, we agree to guarantee payment of the balance of freight due on the charter party, less any claims for short delivery," etc. On unloading there was found to be a deficiency in quantity between the goods mentioned in the bills of lading and those actually shipped and delivered. Held that, notwithstanding this, the plaintiff was entitled to the whole of the freight specified in the charter-party, and was justified in keeping the cargo until the freight was paid.

(6) Right to retain cargo for amount of bill for freight dishonoured.

11—M chartered a ship to load a cargo at Cardiff and proceed therewith to Madras, the freight to be paid in London on unloading and right delivery of the cargo; one third by M's acceptance at three months from the sailing of the ship (the same to be returned if the cargo were not duly delivered), and the remainder by like bill at three months from the date of delivery in London of the certificate of right delivery of the cargo. The charter-party provided for payment of a commission on the contract, ship lost or not lost, that the £ 150 should be advanced in cash at the port of discharge on account of the freight against the captain's draft on M. The cargo was loaded accordingly, a bill of lading was given for the same, and the ship sailed from Cardiff on the 8th October 1863, M having consigned the cargo to A & Co who carried on business at Madras. On the same day the owners drew a bill on M at three months for £ 261-1*s*. 10*d*, being one third of the freight. On the 10th October 1863. the general agents in London of A & Co. advanced to M, on A & Co.'s account and out of their funds, £ 700, received as security for such advance the bill of lading blank, and endorsed and forwarded the bill to A & Co. On the 29th October 1863, M accepted the bill for £ 261 1*s*. 10*d*., and in the following December he suspended payment, and the bill was protested. On the 14th January 1864, the ship arrived at Madras, and thereupon A & Co, as holders of the bill of lading, applied for the delivery of the cargo. and offered to advance the £ 150 in cash pursuant to the charter-party, but the captain claimed to retain the cargo for the value of the dishonoured bill and the balance of freight due. Held that the terms of the contract were at variance with the right of lien so claimed, and that it was not suspended by the bill, nor revived by the freighters' insolvency.

(7) Nomination of ship's Agents by freighters—Concld.

A charter-party made between the defendants (the owners of the Seaforth) and H & Co. (the freighters) provided that the owners should employ at the ports of discharge the consignee nominated by the freighters to transact the ship business there inwards and outwards on the customary terms. not exceeding 2½ per cent. on amount of freight payable inwards, and 5 per cent. outwards. H & Co. nominated the plaintiffs to transact the ship's business in Bombay (a port of discharge) with the knowledge and consent of the master of the Seaforth, and the plaintiffs accepted and acted under such nomination. The defendants refused to pay the plaintiffs commission on the outward freight of the Seaforth on the ground that, under the circumstances under which such freight was procured, the plaintiffs were not under the charter-party entitled to receive commission on it. Held that the plaintiffs were sufficiently within the consideration of the charter-party to maintain a suit for the breach of such clauses of it as were inserted for their benefit. (2) Village Chowkidars Act, Chaukidari Act.

1.—Possession, suit for-Zemindar and putnidar—Resumption by Government and subsequent settlement with zemindar-Frame of suit.

Certain lands included in a putni pottah, having been chaukidari chakran lands, were resumed by Government and subsequently settled with the zemindar. The putnidar sued for possession of these lands.

Held, the suit was one for possession and not for specific performance of a contract and was maintainable, even if all the parties to the contract were not made parties to the suit.

Kumar Bunwari Mukunda Deb v. Bidhu Sundar Thakur. 7 C L J 439=35 Cal 346=12 C W N 459.

2.—Resumption, title—Chowkidar, power to appoint.

Certain chowkidari chakran lands were resumed by the Government and transferred to the holder of the zemindari within which they were situated. Long anterior to this, the whole of the zemindari excluding certain lands in the khas possession of the zemindar had been granted in putni. The putnidar claimed to be entitled to the resumed land. The zemindar and the lessee from him resisted the claim on the ground that as under the putni lease right was reserved to the zemindar to appoint chowkidars upon a vacancy arising in the office, the zemindar was entitled to the lands upon resumption.

Held, that the fact that the zemindar was entitled to make an appointment to the office of chowkidar, did not create in him an interest in the lands held by the chowkidars, which, upon resumption and transfer to the zemindar, would pass to the putnidar from whose lease they had not been excepted. Grish Chandra Roy v Hem Chandra Roy. 5 C L J 28.

3.—Resumption and transfer to zemindar—Putnidar's right to claim settlement for zemindar—Suit, virtually for specific performance—Conditions which zemindar may impose-Equitable defence-Liability of Putnidar to pay amount of assessment by Collector and part of the profits.

A suit by a putnidar against his zemindar for recovery of resumed chowkidari chakran bought on the ground that under the terms of the putni the putnidar became entitled to the chowkidari chakran lands as soon as they were transferred by the Government to the zemindar, is virtually a suit for specific performance of contract.

The zemindar would be equitably entitled to refuse settlement asked by the putnidar unless the putnidar agreed to the conditions as to payment of the assessment made by the Collector and a proportionate share in the profits such as the zemindar would in the circumstances be entitled to impose on him.

Semble:—It is not correct to hold that the putnidar is not bound to pay to zemindar more than the assessment made by the Collector (5 C L J 33=11 C W N 201 (1906); 4 C W N 814 (1900), Ref.) Rajendra Nath Mukherjee v Hira Lal Mukherjee. 14 C W N 995= 7 Ind Cas 554.

4.—Chowkidari chakran lands, resumption of, settlement with zemindar, sale for non-payment of Government revenue.

When chowkidari chakran lands, after resumption and transfer to the zemindars, have been sold for non payment of the Government assessment, the zemindar as also the putnidar are entitled to share in the surplus sale proceeds, provided the chakran lands are included within the putni grant. The determination of this question does not depend upon the decision of the question of the right of the putnidar to hold the chakran land upon payment of additional rent.

5.—Patni, construction–Zemindar—Patnidar—Lands held by Chowkidar, revert to whom on resumption.

In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the Zemindar who appoints and dismisses Chowkidari land is in enjoyment of their services since the creatain of the patni lease is entitled to the lands held by the Chowkidars after the resumption of such lands by the Government. 6.–S. 50–Resumption and transfer–Act VI (B C) of 1870, Ss. 48, 51, 61 and 64–Limitation Act, (XV of 1877) Sch. II Art. 14–Presumption of fact—Evidence Act (I of 1872) s. 114—Burden of Proof—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.

Per Mitra and Woodroffe JJ:—When the plaintiff sues for the recovery of possession of land on the allegation that the land is Chaukidari Chakran land and lies within his zemindari and the Collector has transferred the same to him, he is bound in the first instance to prove so much of his case as has been denied or has not been admitted by the defendant. It being found that the land was not Chaukidari Chakran land and did not lie within the zemindari of the plaintiff, any transfer made by the Collector in his favour under s. 50 of the Act, is not authorised by the Statute and does not confer any title on him. An order passed without jurisdiction need not be set aside and Art. 14 of the Limitation Act, Sch. II does not apply to such a case. An order of the Collector under s. 50 is of the nature of a vesting order and is not an order contemplated by the Limitation Act Sch. II, Art 14 and does not require to be set aside, specially at the instance of one who was not a party to it. Such a party has no cause of action until his possession has been interfered with. Article 14 cannot be invoked against a defendant defending his possession unless the law makes the order final by reason of its not being contested within the specified time. The mere fact that the Collector has made the transfer does not raise any presumption that the land was Chaukidari Chakran land and that the Collector acted within the Statute. Section 114 of the Evidence Act has no application to such a case. Per Pargiter, J, Contra.—Under s. 114 of the Evidence Act there is a presumption that the resumption was made legally, and by s. 61 of the Chaukidari Act the resumption is final. The objection that the order of the Collector was illegal as the Collector had come to a wrong decision regarding the estate in which the land lay, is not valid as it is a question merely of an error in the decision of the Collector and not a question of jurisdiction. The defendant had his remedy by a suit to set aside the order of the Collector. Under Art 14 and S. 28 of the Limitation Act, the defendant's title has ceased to extend and he cannot set it up in defence. The Civil Court has no jurisdiction to go into the question of the resumption and the transfer. The burden of proof lay on the defendant to show tha the transfer which was admittedly made by the Collector under the Act and which must be presumed to have been made rightly, was illegal.

The effect of the resumption by Government of chaukidari chakran lands is to detach them from the parent estate. When such lands are thereafter settled with the zemindars he hold them on a different right altogether. A sale, therefore, of the parent estate for arrears of land revenue, does not pass any title to such lands.

Held, on the evidence that according to the custom of the dasnami sanyasis, every aspirant for entrance into the order has to pass through a period of probation which may extend to months or even years and during which period it is open to the chela to revert to his natural family. It is not till the perfomance at the final ceremony of the Biraja Home, that the aspirant is irrevocably attached to the sect and completely severed from his family. It is, therefore, essential to entitle a chela to claim by inheritable the estate of his guru that the Biraja Home should have been duly performed.

It is not usual to wisper the mulmantras into the ears of the novice at the time of the first initiation when it is still uncertain whether he will or will not return to the enjoyments of worldly life, though some mantras may be recited on such an occasion.

Quære.—Whether the Biraja Home ceremony can be performed when the chela is under sixteen years of age : but unquestionably the rule is that the chela must have reached years of discernment so as to be able to realise for himself the full significance of the final act of the renunciation of the world.

The chela of a Mohunt cannot claim to be the latter's heir under the rule which allows a "virtuous pupil" to succeed to a "Yati."

The ordinary rule is that among the sanyasis generally no chela has right as such to succeed to the property of his deceased guru ; he must be nominated by his guru, such nomination being generally confirmed by the Mohunts of the order or in default of such appointment he must be elected by the Mohunts and principal persons of the sect in the neighbourhood.

But this is not a universal rule, and in some cases, according to custom, the principal chela succeeds as of right, even without such appointment of former election ; but apparently an election or recognition by members of the sect is necessary.

Where one muth is the offshoot of another, there is no fixed rule which regulates the relation between the two, and it cannot be said that the subordinate muth necessarily follows the customs of the parent one.

In order to establish a custom that on the death of the Mohunt his properties lapse to the muth and devolve on the spiritual head thereof, it is necessary to show, not only that in some instances the properties had so passed to the spiritual head, but also that this had taken place in the presence of a chela who would otherwise have been competent to take by inheritance. 1.—Chinaman marrying a foreign woman of different religion and claiming to administer her estate after her death.

When a Chinese marries a woman in a foreign country and that woman is capable of possessing and does possess property, there may be a customary law governing the succession to such property. If she is a Buddhist and she dies leaving no children, her husband would be an heir and presumably entitled to administer Where plaintiff, a Chinaman, and follower of Confucius, who had two Chinese wives whom he had married in succession, on coming to Rangoon, went through a ceremony of marriage with one Ma Bi, a Burmese (Zerbadi)woman, and a Buddhist or a Mahomedan who lived with him and was recognised by the Community as a wife and on Ma Bi's death, plaintiff applied for letters of administration to her estate and defendants failed to establish any rights as caveators, held, after consideration of the legality of the marriage, and of the rights which it gave to plaintiff in Ma Bi's estate after her death, that, in the circumstances, the plaintiff's claim was just and reasonable, and orderd accordingly. 3.—Inheritance among Chins—Joint family property—Customs—Acquiescence—Division of property.

Plaintiff respondent claimed certain property as having been wrongfully taken away from her by her husband Shwe Gan's brother, Nga Shan. On looking at the evidence, it was conclusively proved that the property so taken was Nga Shan's own. Originally all the property was the joint family property of the two brothers and their nephew Nga Shwe. After the death Shwe Gan, his widow the plaintiff-respondent, went on living in common with Nga Shan, and after a year or so, when she desired to quit the household, a division was made between her and her brother-in-law by Chin elders, both parties touching the pipe or tube for sucking Kaung from Kaung pot in token of acquiescence, as usual in such matters among the Chin people; and Nga Shan removed from the house taking his portion of the goods with him. The first appellate Court refused to be satisfied with this positive evidence of assent merely because the division was of recent date, and the plaintiff had brought the suit. Held that the plaintiff-respondent had accepted the division of property and could not now challenge or go back upon what had been done. Maung Hmon v. A kuri was started by plaintiff's predecessor in 1893. It was to consist of 14 tickets of Rs. 500 each and it was to continue for 13 years. Defendant, one of the subscribers, won a prize at the sixth drawing. A portion of the prize-money was paid to him by the plaintiff and the balance was reserved with the latter for payment of future subscriptions. It was found that defendant offered the security and that plaintiff defaulted to pay the balance reserved with him. It was also a condition that, in default's payment of any one instalment, all future instalments would become due at once. Plaintiff credited the unpaid prize-money towards subsequent instalments, and sued defendant for the last two instalments. Defendant pleaded that he was not liable to pay the future instalments, as plaintiff did not give him the balance of his prize-money, and that, as he made default in payment of the instalment due for 1900, all the

Held, (1) that, apart from the special agreement, a default in payment of the prize-money did not relieve the defendant from liability to pay future subscriptions;

(2) that, as it was found that plaintiff had waived the benefit of the stipulation for payment of all overdue instalments, in default of any one instalment, the suit was not barred by limitation. (3 Mad 61; 12 Mad 192, 18 Mad 257 at p. 261; 13 C W N 1010 at p. 1010; 4 Ind Cas 17 Ref.)

2—Meaning of 'holder' and 'heir', capacity to mortgage.

The words 'holder' and 'his heir' in the Chota Nagpor Encumbered Estate Act mean the holder of the property at the time of the determination of the debts and liabilities under s. 8 of the act and his heir. The word 'heir' is applicable to the person who is the holder's heir at the time of the determination of the debts and liabilities and to no other heir, nor to the heir's heir. Koka Mohton v Manki Jagar Nath Sahi. 27 Cal 462: 4 C W N 158.

The expression 'such debts and liabilities' in section 3 Act VI of 1876 means debts and liabilities other than those in favour of Government and includes every other debts or liabilities.

An appeal in a suit to enforce an agreement outstanding, when the estate is taken over by Government, is, therefore, barred,

When a suit is compromised by the proprietor of an estate taken charge of by the Government under Act VI of 1876, such proprietor is not sui juris and not competent to enter into an agreement to grant a lease of any portion of his estate, at a time when the estate might be released by Government, and such an agreement cannot therefore be enforced, even if it had been embodied in the decree drawn up by the Court in terms of the compromise. Such agreement, moreover, is bad as infringing the law against perpetuities, as the estate might not have been released within the period limited by that law. 4—S. (3) (c)—Contract by person subsequently declared to be owner of encumbered estate—Subsequent withdrawal of encumbrance—Revival of validity—Barring of pending suits-'Debts and liabilities,' meaning of:—

A contract entered into by a person who is subsequently declared to be the heir of a deceased person whose estate had been at the time of the contract taken charge of under the Encumbered Estates Act, is void as such person had no competency to contract.

Even though at the time of the execution of the contract he had not been declared to be the heir, yet as soon as he was found to be the heir, he became heir from the time of the devolution of the estate which was admitted prior to the execution of the contract, and such contract became void for want of capacity to contract. On the release of the estate from the operation of the Act the validity of the contract could not be revived as it was absolutely void.

While the suit was pending the etate was taken charge of for the second time, and the suit therefore barred. It does not matter if the particular liability has not been mentioned in the application under the Act, as 'debts and liabilities' in S. 3 mean 'all debts and liabilities of the holder of the estate taken charge of' other than debts or liabilities incurred by Government. Therefore Sec 3 bars all suits after the vesting order. S.7 operates to create a bar in respect of estate dealt with in s. 1, Ch 4 of the Deo Estate Act. The result of Ss, 3 and 7 is that suits to enforce such debts or liabilities other than those due to Government, are if pending at the time of the vesting order are barred. 7—Secs. 7, 10. 17—Manager's power to grant perpetual lease—Prudent management—Execution of mokarari lease—Liabitity—Notice—Deputy Commissioner's order, final—Manager without notice satisfying a debt or liability, if valid—Proprietor, if to be party in granting perpetual lease—Perpetuities, rule against—Personal covenant-Laying out of money by the lessee, a part performance-Specific performance, suit for-Benefit or burden of a covenant running with land test—Time, running of, against covenantee or assigns—Demand and refusal—Enquiry by Deputy Commissioner—Examination of witness—Completed conveyance, suit to set aside—Benefit of lease—Equity.—

Per curiam: Though S. 17 of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876 as amended by Act V of 1884) is apparently wide in its terms and though it probably confers on the manager a somewhat large measure of discretion for the management of the estate, it does not enable him to do any act which is demonstrably injurious to the interest of the estate. The execution of a lease in perpetuity without a bonus, and not for the purposes of reclamation of any waste land or other purposes of a similar kind cannot be justified as an act done in the course of prudent management of the estate.

Assuming that the right of the lessee under the covenant to call upon the lessor to execute a mokarari lease imports on the part of the proprietor a liability within the meaning of that term in section 7 of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act, the notice of that claim is unnecessary, because the manager, when he assumed management of the estate which was at the time under ijara must be deemed to have had under the law constructive notice of the lessee's right to claim under the covenant in the ijara lease the morkarari lease of any land within the leasehold for certain purposes.

Per Doss J.:—The order of the Deputy Commissioner granting mokarari lease and which was upheld by the Commissioner is, under section 10 of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act' final and the matter cannot be re-opened by a suit.

The debt or liability which is barred under section 7 of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act is not extinguished, but that so long as the estate continues under the operation of the Act, the remedy only is barred, the right subsisting. If the manager without any notice as required by section 7, satisfied a debt or liability. the proprietor cannot after the restoration of the estate to him, bring a suit to recover back the money so paid. or annul any deed executed by the manager in fulfilment of that liability merely on the ground of absence of notice.

Per curiam:—Under the Act VI of 1876 the manager had power to devise any part of the property for a period, not exceeding twenty years, without the consent of the proprietor. but under the amending Act V of 1884 he is now entitled to sell or demise in perpetuity without the consent of the proprietor.

Per Doss J.—A lease in perpetutity granted by a manager which is otherwise valid is not the less binding on the proprietor because he was no party to it or that it was granted without his consent

The rule against perpetuities applies only to future interests in land, which may, by any possibility, be capable of vesting beyond the legal limit of perpetuity.

The laying out of considerable sums of money by the lessees in the erection of permanent structures on the land for those very purposes that are mentioned in the covenant and hence referrible to the covenant and to the covenant alone, and all this done to the knowledge of the lessor who resided close by, must be regarded as part performance, and indeed a substantial part performance of the covenant for a perpetual lease such as would entitle the covenantee to claim specific performance of the covenant on the ground that it would be inequitable and fraudulent for the covenantor to refuse to perfrom the covenant.

Per Richardson J:

There is a difference between a suit for specific performance and a suit to set aside a completed conveyance

Where there is no common mistake of fact and not common mistake of law of the kind equivalent to a mistake of fact which goes to the root of the executed contract, the Court will not be justified in saying that it is inequitable that the defendants should not be allowed to retain the benefit of the lease.

Per Doss J:

A mere personal convenant is not open to objection on the ground of remoteness or as tending to create a perpetuity.

One very important test whether the benefit or burden of a covenant in any perticular case runs with the land or not is whether such covenant or contract in its inception bends the land. If it does, it is then capable of passing with the land to subsequent assignees, if it does not, it is incapable of passing by mere assignment of the land. Another test laid down by the House of Lords in the case of Dyson v. Forester is whether the covenant affects the nature, quality and value of the land. The ijara lease with a covenant for a mokarai is more valuable than it would be without such convent.

Time cannot run against the conventees or their assigns unless there is demand on their part and refusal on the part of the convenantor or his assigns.

It is not necessary for the Deputy Commissioner in conducting his enquiry before granting the mokarari to examine witnesses on oath or record their depositions. It would be enough if he makes a full and complete investigation in the matter. H Mathewson v Sri Sri Ram Kanai Singha Deb. 9 C L J 523.

2.—Sec 34 Registration omission to apply —Forfeiture—Alienation—Resumable tenure.

When a tenure has been created by a deed which makes it resumable upon the failure of the heirs of the grantee, the interest created is not inalienable and the tenure is resumable only upon the contingency specified and not on the ground of forfeiture by reason of alienation.

Omission to register the name of the successor or heir of the original grantee under section 34 of Act I of 1879 B C does not work a forfeiture of the tenure.

Under Sec 34 of Act 1 of 1879 B C two conditions must be satisfied before an application for registration can be made, viz. the applicant must be in possession and must be a transferee by succession or inheritance. Where, therefore, the successor of the original grantee had transferred his interest before Act 1 of 1879 B C came into force and gave him possession of the property, an application under Sec. 34 could not be made either by the transferor or the transferee.

When, under such circumstances, an order was made putting the zamindar, in possession of the tenure, such order is not binding upon the transferee who is not a party thereto. Section 3 of the Civil Pro, Code does not bar a suit in the Civil Court by the transferee for declaration that his title has not been affected by such order under S. 34 of the Act 1 of 1879 B C and for recovery of possession. A suit to recover a permanent tenure by the auction-purchaser from tenant in which the landlord defendant denies the title of the plaintiff on the ground that on the death of the previous tenant the land reverted to him does not come under section 37 of the Chota Nagpore Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act and is triable by the Civil Court. To such a suit Art. 142 and not Art 138 of Schedule 11 of the Limitation Act is applicable.

In computing the period of limitation, the time during which a suit remained pending in a Court not having jurisdiction to entertain it is excluded, under section 14 of the Limitation Act. When, therefore, such an order was set aside by the Divisional Commissioner, the latter must be taken to have acted without jurisdiction.

The consent of the parties to a litigation cannot confer on a Court jurisdiction which it does not possess. The agreement of parties cannot authorise a superior Court to revise a judgment of an inferior Court in any other mode of proceeding than that which the law prescribes.

An order made without jurisdiction is absolutely null and void. Such an order may be shown to be a nullity in any proceeding where reliance is placed upon it, although no formal and direct proceeding has been taken to have vacated or reversed. (21 Howard 85; 15 O H 414 Ref:)

1—Sections 44 A, 62, 77—Striking off—Fresh suit within six months, if barred.—

The plaintiff, in March 1906, sued for the 1959 to 1961 Sambat, and alleged that some rent for 1962 had been deposited by the defendants. Issues were framed, and the 18th May 1906 was fixed for hearing. On that day, the Deputy Collector recorded the order: " Plaintiff absent; struck off, section 62 C. N. T. A." The plaintiff's application for restoration was rejected on the same day. In June 1906, without waiting for the expiration of the period of six months mentioned in section 44A of the Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Act, the plaintiff instituted fresh suits for the recovery of arrears of rent for 1960, 1961 and 1962.

Held, (Per Caspersz J.)—That as no issue was tried and determined on the 18th May 1906 the orders striking off the suits were passed under the first clause of section 77 read with section 62. Consequently, the only remedy open to the plaintiff was to proceed by way of fresh suits, and if those suits were maintainable he could properly include in his claim all arrears of rent then accrued due.

Section 62 of the Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Act is not controlled by section 44A.

Section 44A restricts the Court's jurisdiction rather than the plaintiff's right of suit; the latter exists though it is in abeyance for six months. The section must be construed strictly, that is, in favour of the plaintiff

The plain meaning of section 44A is that when a landlord has instituted a suit for the recovery of any rent, he shall not institute another suit for the recovery of any rent subsequently accrued due until after six months from the date of the institution of the first suit.

The words "any rent" in section 44A must be liberally interpreted to refer to any rent covered by the previous suit and any rent covered by the second suit, and ex nature rei, the subject matter of the respective suits must be different.

The words " struck off " mean that the suit has and never had, any existence; they imply that the suit is withdrawn as in section 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Per Coxe J.—The Legislature in framing s. 62 intended only to refer to the latest date on which a suit is instituted.

The suits were barred by section 44A.

The effect of striking off a suit under s. 62 was not to restore the parties to their original positions, as if such a suit had never been instituted. The second suit was a new suit and not a continuation of the first suit.

Section 44A is to be construed against the landlord. Karma Uraon v Baraik Debi Doyal Singh, 9 C L J 9=13 C W N 287 =36 Cal 115=1 Ind Cas 447.

City of Bombay Improvement Act.

1—Acquisition of land with buildings thereon —Amount of compensation—Principles upon which the amount to be fixed—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), S 561—Cross-objections.

Section 48 (II) of the City of Bombay Improvement Act, does not provide for leave to appeal being granted to any individual, but for a certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal that is the whole case and not any particular part of it. The consequence of the grant of this certificate is that there shall be an appeal to the High Court from the award, or any part of the award and this must mean that there shall be a right of appeal, or to use the language of the Civil Procedure Code, that an appeal will lie to the High Court. And the respondent is entitled to object to the award in the manner provided by S. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code.

In calculating the amount of compensation to be awarded upon acquisition of lands, with buildings thereon, by the City of Bombay Improvement Trust, the rental should be the basis of calculation, so that after arriving at the net rental, that what has to be ascertained is the rate of return, investors in this class of property expect; for that serves to determine the number of years purchase it is proper to allow, after giving due weight to any special conditions that may affect the property advantageously or otherwise.

As to the contention that the property was at the date of the declaration capable of fetching a higher rental which was apparent from the fact that the rents of their property had been steadily rising for 16 years previous to 1899:

Held, that, though for the purpose of this inquiry it was legitimate to have regard to the passed history of the rental, it could not be taken for granted that enhancement would continue possible for ever, and still less that there was such a certainty of this as to make it a basis for fixing a higher purchase price.

As to the contention, that in arriving at the valuation the Tribunal of Appeal following the Collector, had deducted 4 per cent in respect of water-tax, whereas the water supply to the premises was measured by meter and the average payment for water was Rs. 16 per annum.

Held, that the Tribunal was right in deducting 4 per cent, for water-tax from the rental.

City of Bombay Improvement Act -Concld.

The Collector allowed 20 years purchase as the value of the property. On appeal, the Tribunal took an average of the instances adduced before them and allowed the claimants 21-50 years purchase.

Held, that the striking of an average as done by the Tribunal might be a crude method of calculation; but it could not, on evidence, be said that the claimants had been awarded too little.

3.—Transfer of civil cases-Civil Procedure Code Secs. 23, 25—Reference by District Judge-Bengal Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887) Secs, 9, 39—Court of Subordinate Judge, if subordinate to the Court of the District Judge—Delay.
The Court of the Subordinate Judge is Subordinate to the District Court for the purposes of section 23 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), no matter what the forum of appeal may be in the particular case for the transfer of which the application is made.

The jurisdiction of a superior Court to transfer a suit from one subordinate Court to another ought to be exercised with extreme caution. The choice of forum given to plaintiff by the Legislature ought not to be lightly interfered with,and the Court will not transfer a suit properly laid, except upon proof of special circumstances. A well-recognised ground exists when the convenience of necessary witnesses and the ends of justice will be promoted by the transfer: but the ground alleged must be clearly established.

Under section 25 of Code of Civil Procedure (1882) the Court has, no doubt, ample power to make the order even after the issues have been framed: but satisfactory reasons ought to be given in explanation of the delay. (22 ch. Dist. 397 Ref.). Umatul Mehdi v Kulsoom. 10 C L J 208.

Civil Court-Jurisdiction.

1.—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts—Suit of a civil nature—Suit by Temple Committee against Temple servants for declaration as to their right to have the services performed by others.

The plaintiffs held the office of members of the Committee of Management of a certain temple under a sannad from Government and received annually a certain sum of money for defraying the expenses of certain kinds of religious worship in the temple. The obligation attached to the office was to get the worship performed by the hereditary officers or servants attached to the temple. Plaintiffs alleged that they failed to perform the worship owing to differences among themselves with the result that the duties owing to the idol were neglected and the funds in the hands of the plaintiffs remained unexpended. The plaintiffs therefore, asked for a declaration of their right to disburse the funds by getting the worship performed by a suitable person or persons in the event of the hereditary officers or servants of the temple concerned failing to perform it; and for an injunction to restrain those servants from obstructing the plaintiffs in the exercise of the right so declared. It was objected that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit in which the prayer was for a bare declaration of the plaintiff's right either to perform by themselves or to get performed certain religious ceremonies in a temple and there was no contest as to any right to property or to any office. Held, overruling the objection, that the plaintiffs were trustees of a public charitable trust holding moneys in their hands for disposal in a certain manner for certain defined purposes. An action would lie against them by the Advocate-General acting on behalf of the public to compel them to a due execution of their particular acts of duty. The obligation cast on them by the trust gave them a corresponding right to disburse the funds after getting the religious worship for which those funds were intended properly performed. Such a a right was not less of a civil nature though the funds were to be appropriated to religious ceremonies. The Court was not called upon to enter into the adjudication of any rites and cermeonies but only to decide the right of the trustees to fulfil the trust unhindered. 1—S. 13—Subordinate Judges having same local jurisdiction—No assignment of business by District Judge—Effect—Concurrent jurisdiction.

Where no order has been made by a District Judge under S. 13 of the Civil Courts Act assigning to each of two or more Subordinate Judges having the same local jurisdiction the particular business to be done by each, the subordinate Judges must be taken to have concurrent jurisdiction.

An application for execution was made and registered in the office of the Deputy Commissioner of Singhbhum and then forwarded by post to the Subordinate Judge of Singhbhum sitting at Purulia.

1.—Ss. 20. 111—Set off—Same transaction—Sale of Mortgage decree free of incumbrance—Existence of prior attachment-Claim for purchase money-Raising of attachment by vendee.

Defendant executed an amanati receipt in favour of the two plaintiffs, the contents of which were as follows: "That you keep in deposit with me Rs.7,774-5-10 in order to pay off debts due to your Calcutta creditors on account of your joint business as well as to meet the expenses of your joint law suit. I shall return the said deposit money to you when you both will jointly demand payment from me of the said money in deposit." (The rest of it provides for the payment of interest at a certain rate from the date of demand.)

The amount mentioned in the receipt represented the unpaid balance of the purchase money of mortgage-decree sold by the plaintiffs to the defendant, on the same day, free of incumbrance. The decree, however, had been already attached by some creditors of the plaintiffs. In a suit brought by the plaintiffs on the basis of the amanati receipt to recover the amount of deposit with interest, the Defendant claimed to set off a sum of Rs.6,289-12-5 paid by him to release the decree from attachment, the payment having been made at a time when a second mortgagee of the property recovered by the decree applied for execution of a decree obtained on his mortgage by sale of the property. In support of his claim the defendant adduced evidence to prove (1) that the deposit was made as a security for the release of the decree from attachment, and (2) further that there was an oral agreement between the parties that on plaintiffs failing to pay off the attaching creditors, the Defendant would be at liberty to make the payment out of the deposit.

Held, that the defendant was entitled to the set off claimed.

(1) because, having the right to compel the plaintiffs to pay off the claim of the attaching creditors, Defendant had been forced to pay it off himself in order to save his own interests under the purchased decree from the second mortgage.

(2) because, the payment was made on the plaintiff's behalf and they had the benefit of it.

3—Section 20—Staying proceedings, grounds for—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Section 20—Analogous suit instituted elsewhere-Plaintiff not party thereto.

Plaintiff having obtained permission to sue in forma pauperis in the Court of the District Judge, Ferozepore, for certain property which he claimed as heir of one B. L., instituted his suit in the Court. Application was thereupon made to the Court under Section 20 of the Civil Procedure Code to stay proceedings on the ground that one of the defendants in plaintiff's suit was at the time suing certain of his co-defendants in the Umballa Court for part of the property comprised in plaintiff's claim. It was admitted that plaintiff had not been made (and he was not necessarily) a party to the latter suit. The District Judge granted the application on the grounds that "all the property claimed at Umballa was included in the present suit; that plaintiff though not a party to the Umballa case would probably be made one now, that the Umballa case had been pending some time and much evidence had been taken, and that the points for decision in both cases were the same."

Held, that, as the jurisdiction given by Section 20 of the Civil Procedure Code is of an exceptional character to be exercised cautiously and only upon very clear cause shown the sole test under that section being whether "the Court is satisfied that justice is more likely to be done by the suit being instituted in some other Court" and there being no mention of convenience or expediency, the mere fact that the points for decision in both cases might be analogous was not sufficient reason for holding that justice was more likely to be done by compelling the plaintiff to sue in the other Court, especially in view of the facts that plaintiff had not been made a party to the suit at Umballa and that the value of the property claimed by plaintiff at Ferozepore was considerably larger than of that in suit at Umballa. On the 4th December 1889, the plaintiffs obtained a decree against the defendants for Rs. 941. The decree was made payable in eight days i. e. on or before the 12th Dec. 1889. On the 9th Dec. 1889. i. e., before the decree was capable of execution, it was settled by the defendants' paying Rs. 600 in cash and passing a promissory note for Rs. 341 payable on demand and carrying interest at 3 per cent per mensem. The decree was satisfied and handed over to defendants, and plaintiffs also endorsed the summons to that effect. That compromise was not sanctioned by the Court. On the 9th November 1892, and again on the 4th November 1895, the plaintiffs made up their account with defendants and obtained new promissory notes from them for the amount found due in renewal of the note passed in 1889. The present suit was brought on the note passed on the 4th November 1895, which was for Rs. 815 and carried interest at 3 per cent. per mensem. Held that the note sued on fell within the purview of s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and was void and unenforceable under the provisions of that section. The consideration for the note given in 1889 was the agreement of the plaintiffs to accept it in satisfaction of the decretal balance due to them. 20—Civil Procedure Code s 257A—Amendment Act (VII of 1888) s.27-Adjustment of a decree, suit upon—Agreement to extend time for enforcing decree by execution.—

On the 16th July 1886, S. obtained a decree against K for Rs 315 with costs. On the next day K paid S Rs 200 in part satisfaction of the decree, and induced K to accept a bond by which he (S) gave up the costs, and by which K was to pay the balance of the decree with interest at the end of eight months. S sued upon the bond. K contended that the bond was void under s. 257 A of Civil Procedure Code, and that the suit would not lie Held that the suit would lie. Since amendment made in s. 258 by Act VII of 1888 such payments or adjustments may be recognized by a Civil Court, except when executing the decree and, therefore, a suit based upon such a payment or adjustment should be admitted. The concluding clause of s. 258 has no direct bearing on s. 257 A, as it relates to a different subject-matter. Quere—Whether s. 257 A relates exclusively to agreements to extend the time for enforcing decrees by execution, as ruled by the Calcutta High Court, or is applicable to all agreements according to the view taken by the Bombay High Court ' (11 Calc 671; 1881 P J 315; 8 Bom. 538; 8 Bom. 300 and 9 Bom 176 referred).

21—C P C S. 257 A—Agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt—Agreement not enforceable without sanction by the Court.

S. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, when it provides that "every agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt shall be void" unless made for consideration and with the sanction of the Court, etc., does not make such agreements illegal, in the sense prohibited by law. It only prevents such agreements being enforced in a Court of Law. Where such an agreement to give time, never sanctioned by the Court as required by s. 257A, formed part of the consideration for a bond, and had actually been enjoyed by the obligee of the bond,—Held that such consideration, not being in its nature illegal, and not having as a fact failed, there was no reason why the obligor should not enforce the terms of the bond. Bank of Bengal v Vyabhoy Ganji. 16 Bom 618.

One of the plaintiffs died before the execution of the decree and a question arose between the surviving plaintiff & one of the defendants as to the devolution of the deceased plaintiff's interest & it was decided in favour of the surviving plaintiff. The contending parties however entered into an agreement, which set out that some portion of the land going to the share of the deceased plaintiff should be given to the defendant. This agreement was not however certified to the court. The surviving plaintiff got his decree executed & subsequently refused to abide by the agreement. The defendant thereupon filed a suit praying in the alternative for possession of the land awarded to him for damages

27.—S. 257A—Agreement for satisfaction of judgment-debt.—

A money-decree was passed against a zamindar by the High Court in 1883, and it was transferred to the District Court for execution. The decree-holder attached and prepared to bring to sale certain villages of the judgment-debtor. These villages were included in a mortgage subsequently executed by the judgment-debtor in favour of third parties. Both before and after the mortgage the decree-holder received from the zamindar certain sums in consideration of his agreeing to postponements of the sale; also it was agreed between them at a date subsequent to the mortgage that interest should be computed at a higher rate than that provided by the decree. Subsequently the decree-holder sought to bring the land to sale, and in computing the amount then due gave credit for none of the sums so received and calculated interest at the enhanced rate. The mortgagee objected that the computation was erroneous in both these respects, and the District Judge upheld his objection. The judgment-debtor took no part in the contest. Held that the District Court, not being the Court which passed the decree, had no power to sanction the agreements under s. 257A, and that the decision was right. Paramananda Das v Mahabeer Dossji 20 Mad 378.

The judgment-debtor gave the hundi but the sanction of the Court was not obtained to the transaction. In a suit by the decree-holders to recover the money secured by the hundi given under the circumstances mentioned above, it was held that the transaction was one contemplated by s. 257A of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that, as it had not been made with the sanction of the Court, it could not be enforced and the suit should be dismissed. 46—Section 257 A—Money decree—Mortgage bond.

The defendant executed a deed of mortgage by conditional sale in the plaintiff's favour, the consideration being, partly a judgement-debt and partly cash lent. Held that the deed not having received the sanction of the Court which passed the decree was void under section 257 A, Civil Procedure Code. But as the satisfaction of a judgment-debt is not an illegal consideration, the plaintiff could recover the amount paid in cash. But he could not foreclose for this portion of the debt, for the agreement of mortgage was one and indivisible; and to allow the plaintiff to foreclose for a part of the debt would be to let him get for a part of the consideration what it was agreed he would get for the whole. He should, therefore, get only a money decree for the amount due excluding the judgment-debt.

Under Section 257 A of the Civil Procedure Code when the sanction of the Court which passed the decree to the execution of a bond was in question such sanction cannot be presumed until it was proved. According to all ordinary rules of evidence the onus lay on the party who asserted that the Court had given its sanction, to prove the assertion to be true. A note in the register of suits to the effect that the decree had been fully satisfied does not raise a presumption that the Court accorded its sanction to a particular agreement. An agreement between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor securing some additional benefit to the former does not become a part of the decree by sanction of Court, but can only be enforced in a separate suit. Without sanction of Court, such agreement is void and cannot be enforced either in execution or in a separate suit To hold that the section does not make it void for a separate suit is to defeat the very policy of the section which is intended to protect judgment-debtors from being coerced by threat of execution proceedings to submit to unconscionable extortion by the decree-holders and is also opposed to the clear terms of the section. A sanctioned agreement to give time for the payment of the judgment-debt operates as a stay of execution under S. 244. An agreement which adjusts the decree is enforceable in a separate suit, even though sanction has not been obtained if it does not secure the payment of any sum more than the amount payable under the decree. If the sanctioned agreement makes any sums payable towards the decree in any particular manner and payments are so made, such payment should be certified to the Court under S. 258; otherwise such payments will not be recognised in subsequent execution proceedings. The judgment-debtor can only sue for breach of contract if such payments were not given credit for. 55—Civil Procedure Code, S. 257A s. 258—Execution of decree— Estoppel.—

The parties by petition under s 259, Civil Procedure Code, informed the Court executing the decree, that part of the decretal money had been realized, and that they had agreed that the balance of the decree should be paid in two instalments, with interest at 8 annas per mensem; that in default of payment of the instalments on the due dates, interest at 1 anna per rupee per mensem should be charged from the date of the agreement. Held, that in so far as the agreement provided for the payment of interest in excess of the sum due under the decree, it undoubtedly required the sanction of the Court under s. 257 A, Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the sanction of the Court, under s. 257 A, should be given in terms and under circumstances to show that it had considered the propriety of the proposed compromise, and that it should state in such sanction that it regarded the consideration for which it had been made a reasonable consideration. Held, that no question of estoppel arises when the previous warrants of attachment either proved ineffectual or were not executed. 56—S. 257 A—Agreement between decree-holder and judgment-debtor and a third person not party to decree for satisfaction of decree—Sanction of Court.—

In a previous suit the plaintiff obtained a decree for a sum of money against K Subsequently the defendants K. and R. who was no relation of K, executed a bond in favour of the plaintiff, accepted liability for the debt and agreed to pay it by instalments. In default the plaintiff was empowered to recover the debt from either debtor. On this bond the plaintiff sued the defendant for the recovery of his money. Held, that the bond was void and unenforceable against the parties to the decree. The terms of s. 257 A, Civil Procedure Code, appear to include within their scope an agreement between the judgment-creditor and a person other than the judgment debtor, whereby such person in consideration of the postponement of the execution of such decree against the judgment-debtor undertakes to pay a certain sum of money. Held, therefore, that the bond was unenforceable against the defendant. Bankey Lal v. A judgment-creditor after suing out execution took an instalment bond from the judgment-debtor in satisfaction of the decree, without the sanction of the Court which passed the decree.

Held, that the bond was not void. By merely taking a bond the decree-holder does not agree to give time for the satisfaction of the judgment debt. He does not agree to anything at all. He merely acquires, or ostensibly acquires, a right against the obligor. Narayan v Baba. 1883 P J 340.

58-S.257A-The sanction, required for agreements under S. 257A, should be applied for at least at the time when the agreements are made or within a reasonable time thereafter A year and five months held to be not such a time. Yeshavantrao v Keval 1887 P J 323.

59—S 257A-Sanction-Satisfaction of decree.

(Per Jardine, J.) Sanction though given two years later being neither appealed against nor set aside was binding.

(Per Parsons. J.) Agreement for satisfaction of decree was really sanctioned at the time. Then both the parties applied to the Court that an endorsement in terms of the agreement be made on the decree. The Court granted the application. Held, that this was sufficient sanction under S. 257A. Sakharam v. Bala, 1889 P J 251.

64—C.P.C., S.257A—Agreement to give time to judgment-debtor—Sanction of "Court which passed the decree".—

Held, that the words "Court which passed the decree" in Section 257A of the Civil Procedure Code mean the Court which passed the first decree, and not the Appellate Court, though they cannot be construed so as to include the Court which is executing the decree, unless that Court and the Court which passed the decree are identical. Chajju v. Gulab, P R 61 of 1886.

65—C.P.C., S. 257A—Execution of decree—Court compelling decree-holder to grant time to judgment-debtor.—

It is not competent to a Court executing a decree to compel the decree-holder to grant the judgment-debtor time to pay the judgment-debt. Even if the decree-holder himself agrees to give time, without consideration, and the judgment-debtor relies upon the agreement as preventing immediate execution, the Judge, under Section 257A, Civil Procedure Code, would be bound to hold the agreement void. Teja Singh v. 66—C.P.C., Sections 257A and 649— Agreement for satisfaction of judgment-debt—Decree passed by Judicial Assistant Commissioner—Jurisdiction of District Judge to sanction such agreement after Judicial Assistant Commissioner's Court has ceased to exist.—

Where, after a decree had been obtained from a Judicial Assistant Commissioner, the parties thereto in execution-proceedings entered into an agreement for the satisfaction of the decree, providing for the payment of the decree by instalments and that interest should be chargeable in case of failure to pay such instalments, held, that the Court of the Judicial Assistant having ceased to exist, the sanction required by Section 257A, of the Civil Procedure Code to give validity to the agreement, could in accordance with Section 649 of the same Code, be granted by the Court of the District Judge, which had succeeded that of the Judical Assistant Commissioner.— Siddhu v. Ramji Das, 25 P R of 1887.

67—C.P.C., S. 257A—Execution of decree—Payment by instalments — Agreement to give time for satisfaction of judgment-debt — Civil Procedure Code, 1882, Sections 210, 257A-Limitation Act (XV of 1887), 2nd Schedule, Articles 175, 178, 179.—

Appellant obtained decree against the respondents on the 3rd February 1888, and applied for execution thereof on the 25th October 1888. A warrant was directed to issue, but on the 27th November 1888, both parties put in a petition reciting that an arrangement had been made between them, by which the debt was to be paid by instalments, and praying that the sanction of the Court might be given thereto. The proceedings were thereupon ordered to be filed, a separate order of even date being recorded in the proceedings that the property should remain under attachment but not be brought to sale. On the 8th April 1892, the appellant filed an application in which, after reciting the former arrangement, it was prayed that the respondents might be summoned with a view to recovery of the sum still remaining due, and on the 5th July 1892 the appellant again applied for execution by attachment of the judgment-debtor's property.

Held, that the order of the 27th November 1888 was not one falling under Section 210 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the application leading to that order did not purport to be under that section, nor was it presented within the period of 6 months prescribed by Article 175 of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act for the presentation of applications under that section.

Held, further, that the said order was one sanctioning "an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt" within the meaning of Section 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, and that,as the mere sanction by the Court of an agreement under that section does not "alter" the decree, the decree to be executed was the decree, dated the 3rd February 1888.

Held, also, that inasmuch as the applications of the 8th April 1892 and of the 5th July 1892 were applications for "execution or to take some steps in aid of execution", they were applications to which Article 179, and not Article 178, of the 2nd Schedule of the Limitation Act was applicable, and that consequently the decree of the 3rd February 1888 was time-barred. 68—C.P.C., S. 257A—Mortgage—Construction of mortgage-deed—Satisfaction of judgment-debt—Uncertified adjustment of decree — Civil Procedure Code, 1882, Sections 257A, 258.—

Plaintiff sued upon two mortgage-deeds, executed on the 19th January 1890 and the 5th March 1890, respectively.

In the case of the second mortgage.of the consideration money of Rs. 1,800, Rs. 1,000 were on account of principal and Rs. 144 on account of interest on two decrees passed in favour of plaintiff against defendant, and the Divisional Judge, finding that interest was not allowed on one of the said decrees, which was for Rs 738, and that no sanction of the issuing Court had been given, held that the agreement in the mortgage-deed to pay interest was invalid under Section 257A of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, that the section applicable to the case was Section 258, and not Section 257A, of the Code, inasmuch as the judgment-debt had been adjusted in whole to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, and that though such adjustment had not been certified to the Court whose duty it was to execute the decree, it could be recognized as an adjustment by a Civil Court except in execution. A list of debts filed under S 345, prior to a declaration under S. 352, is not a schedule as required by S. 352. It is necessary that the Court should by order determine the persons who have proved themselves to be the insolvent's creditors and their respective debts and then frame a schedule of such persons and debts. In the absence of any such determination by Court, the declaration under S 351, that the applicant was an insolvent, cannot be deemed to be a decree in favour of the creditor for the amount due to him. And a suit by the creditor is therefore maintainable and is not barred as res judicata (7 Mad 318 Fol; 76 P R 1899 Dist.) Harya v. Mul Chand. 64 P R 1907=89 P L R 1908.

100—C P C Sections 353 and 588—Insolvent—Schedule.

To entitle a creditor to appeal under Sections 353 and 588, he must show that a Schedule of the insolvent's creditors has been prepared under Section 352-that his name is entered in it-that the names of his opponents are also entered in it that he applied to the lower Court to alter the Schedule as regards the amount, nature and particulars of the debt of his opponents and that the Court passed an order on his application adverse to his interests. In the present case no Schedule having been prepared. held, that the appeal did not lie

101—C P C—(1882) Ss. 355, 356 358—Insolvency—Discharge of insolvent-Order not expressly made—Appeal—Revision.

The insolvent applied to the Insolvent Estates Court, Delhi, for an order to the Receiver to pay him the surplus in his hands. The application was rejected and the order was confirmed on appeal. Held, that it must be assumed that the Court did pass an order of discharge under S. 355, of the C.P.C. 1882, as soon as the conditions laid down in that section had been complied with, that S. 358 would therefore apply, and under S. 356 the petitioner was entitled to receive the surplus in the hands of the Receiver.

Held, also that the Divisional Judge was right in holding that no appeal lay to him from the order of Insolvent Estates Court, but, as the order appealed against was obviously wrong, it must be set aside on revision. (43 P. R. 1894 Fol). Harji Mal v. Receiver of the Insolvent Debtor's Estate. 26 P L R 1910.

Note—Repealed by Pro. Insolvency Act 1907.

101A—C P C S. 357—Applicability of Act XV of 1877.

S. 357, Code of Civil Procedure, provides a limitation of its own and in supersession of the rules prescribed by Act XV of 1877 in respect of the execution of decrees. Lalman v. Gopi Nath. 19 All 144, 17 W N 18.

102—C P C—(1882), S. 357:—Creditor whose debt is not included in the schedule debt can proceed with the execution of his decree. A creditor whose debt has not been included in the scheduled debts within the meaning of sec. 357 of the Code of Civil Procedure is entitled to proceed with the execution of his decree against the insolvent's property notwithstanding his discharge. Amthalal v Cursetji. 9 Bom L R 466.

103—C P C—(1882). S. 357—Effect of discharge-Insolvency—Debt not included in the schedule-Discharge of insolvent debtor—Right of creditors not in the Schedule, against the discharged insolvent's property.

A creditor whose debt has not been included in the scheduled debts within the meaning of S. 357 of the Code, is entitled to proceed with the execution of his decree against the insolvent's property notwithstanding his discharge (16 Cal. 592 and 21 All. 227 referred to). Ashrafuddin Ahmed v. Bepin Behari Mullick 30 Cal 407.

104—C P C S. 357—Discharge of Insolvent from liability.

Held, that the proper construction to be put upon Sections 357, 358 of the Civil Procedure Code when read together is that as soon as it appears that one-third of the aggregate of scheduled debts, including secured debts, has been discharged from the Insolvent's property, he is absolved from further liability. The sections cannot be read as entitling any creditor to take action through the Court under Section 357, until the third of his individual debt shall be realized.

105—C P C—(1882) Ss. 357 & 358, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, Chapter XX—Insolvency—Return of property in hands of Court after payment of one-third of schedule debts.

C was declared insolvent under the provisions of Chapter XX, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, and was discharged with an order of protection under Civil Pro. Code (1882)-Contd, S. 357-Concld.

Sections 357 and 358 of the Code. C. then claimed to be entitled to a return of the property in the hands of the Receiver, on the ground that his scheduled debts had been satisfied to the extent of one-third, and that he was absolved from further liability in respect of such debts.

Held, that this contention was not well founded. Property vested in the Receiver is an exception to the rule prescribed in Sections 357, 358, of the Code, regarding non-liability of property to attachment. G E Coates, Insolvent. 91 P R 1891.

106—C P C—(1882) S 358—Insolvency—Order discharging insolvent, appeal from—Agreement to satisfy debts—Property vested in Receiver—Future salary of insolvent.

Held, that though an order discharging an insolvent from further liability under Section 358 of the Civ Pro Code is not appealable under Section 588 of the Code as an "order," such order falls within the definition of a "decree" in Section 2 of the Code and is appealable as such.

Held, further, that although an order of absolution from further liability contemplated by Section 358 of the Code cannot affect property which has vested in the Receiver under Section 354 and is, or may hereafter become, liable for distribution under Section 356, an insolvent's future salary which may or may not accrue due, is not "property" which under Section 354 vests in the Receiver for an unknown and unlimited time the effect of the attaching order, in such case, being to vest the salary in the Receiver as it accrues and not before.

107—C.P.C. (1882) S.359-Imprisonment, simple or rigorous—Order, subsequent, declaring it rigorous unauthorized, may be discharged under Sec. 622 Civil Procedure Code.

Imprisonment under section 359 of the Civil Procedure Code may be either simple or rigorous. The order must specify the character of the imprisonment; if it omits to do so, the imprisonment must be taken to be simple.

A Judge, after having made an order for imprisonment under section 359 of the Civil Procedure Code, cannot subsequently by a separate order declare it to be one for rigorous imprisonment. If he does so, his order is not authorised by any provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, and may be discharged by the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction. A petition in insolvency, addressed to a District Judge, was presented to a Judge of the Court of Small Causes, who ordered notices to be issued, and subsequently adjudicated the petitioner to be insolvent. The District Judge on appeal affirmed the order of the Judge of Small Cause Court. In neither Court was any plea as to jurisdiction taken. It was objected, before the High Court in revision, against the order adjudicating the petitioner insolvent, that, on the date on which the petition was presented to the Judge of Small Causes, no jurisdiction under S. 3. cl. (1) of the Insolvency Act, III of 1907, had been conferred on him. Such jurisdiction was, however, conferred upon him a few days after the presentation of the petition, so that he possessed it on the date on which he directed notices to be issued and gave his final decision. Having regard to the very last stage of the case at which the objection was raised, and also to the fact that the petition was addressed to the District Judge who had jurisdiction, and that, at any moment after the jurisdiction, had been conferred upon the Judge of Small Causes, the case could have been transferred to his Court, held, that the case had been properly entertained and decided by the Judge of Small Causes. Debi Prasad v Stanley Ray. 6 A L J 483=2 Ind Cas 223.

An application was made by a person for permission to sue as a pauper. The suit was for construction of a Will and other reliefs; the plaint contained certain allegations upon which the Plaintiff had a right to sue. The lower Court was satisfied that the applicant was a pauper but rejected the application on the ground that he had no right to sue expressing its opinion upon the merits of the suit itself: Held That the lower Court applied to the matter before him a course of enquiry which was entirely foreign to the enquiry which he was called upon to make under sec. 407, C. Where a Subordinate Judge recommended a person to the District Judge for receivership, and the District Judge declined to appoint a receiver and the petition was then dismissed, held, no appeal lies against the District Judge's order under S. 505 refusing to authorize the appointment of a receiver. 112—C. P. C. Ss. 505, 582—Jurisdiction of Dismissal Court to appoint a Receiver—Enquiry to be made under Section 503.

Held, that the direction contained in Section 505 of the Civil Procedure Code, that the powers conferred by Chapter XXXVI should be "exercised only by High Courts and by District Courts," does not preclude a Court superior to the District Court and hearing an appeal from the decree of that Court, from appointing a Receiver under Section 503 by virtue of the powers obtained under Section 582 of the Code, and that the word "only" in Section 505 must be regarded as intended to exclude Courts subordinate to a District Court, but not superior Courts of appeal. The question whether the appointment of a Receiver is necessary for any of the purposes stated in Section 503 of the Code is one to be determined judicially, and if the necessity of the appointment is in dispute between the parties, the question can only be determined after enquiry with reference to the evidence. Budh Parkash v Sant Rain. 102 P R of 1885.

113—C. P. C. (1882) Ss. 562, 564, 566—Power of appellate court to remand for trial on the merits otherwise than under the provisions of S. 562.

S. 564 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be read subject to the other provisions of the Code, for example, those contained in S. 27, S. 32 or S. 53. An appellate court has power to make an order under any of those sections, and in order to give effect to the provisions of the section which is applicable it is necessary that it should in certain cases send back the case to the court of first instance. Under such circumstances S. 564 of the Code will not preclude an appellate court from remitting a case to the Court of first instance.

An order of remand under S. 564, C. P. C. by appellate Court directing addition of new parties is an order upon a point which is necessarily preliminary to the proper decision and trial of the suit and is prefectly legal. (23 All 167, Fol.)

Per Subrahmanya Aiyar, J. A remand in contravention of S.564 of the Civil Procedure Code is a violation of a mandatory provision of the law and is as such not a mere irregularity, but is illegal and the remand and all proceedings taken thereunder can be set aside at the instance of a party entitled to object to such a procedure. The doctrine that consent does not give jurisdiction, only applies where the court has no inherent jurisdiction over the subject matter and does not apply to violation of rules of procedure, though they are not mere irregularities. The doctrine does not apply to an illegal order of remand so that if a remand is made at the request of both parties the same cannot be set aside at the instance of any of them, although it may be contrary to the provisions of S 564 C P C. Where a suit was not disposed of on a priliminary point by the court of first instance and the appellate court, finding the main question for the defendants (the appellant before the court) remanded the suit at the request of both the parties for trial on other points and in second appeal the plaintiff's vakil stated that he wanted a decision on the merits on the main question and that if the decision on the same went against him, he did not intend to object to the order of remand, there was a waiver of the defect and the plaintiff was estopped from afterwards questioning the propriety of the order of remand. Where a Judge in appeal gives a certain finding upon a question of fact and remands the suit although it was not disposed of on a preliminary point, and such finding of fact is such as cannot be questioned in second appeal in an appeal against the order of remand the finding of fact must be accepted and the appeal sent back to the Appellate Judge for disposal according to law of other points. An order of remand which is illegal cannot affect what has already been properly done and the Appellate Judge cannot be directed to direct the trial of the entire appeal de novo. Per Moore, J. Where the order of remand is illegal under S 564 of the Code, consent of parties cannot make it legal. Where an order of remand is set aside as illegal, the whole appeal must be left open for fresh decision by the Appellate Judge. Manager of the Court of Wards v Ramasami Reddi 15 M L J 236=28 Mad 437.

116—C. P. C. S.564—Not raising and deciding issues in appeal—Opportunity to respondent to appeal on merits.

The Court of First Instance found against plaintiff on an issue of limitation and in his favour on the merits, but the findings on merits were not embodied in the decree. The Lower Appellate Court found in his favour as to limitation and awarded his claim on Lower Court's findings on the merits. Held, that defendant had never had an opportunity of appealing on the merits, and the Lower Appellate Court should have raised and decided those issues itself. Mahomed v Nakhwa 1886 P J 64.

117—C. P. C. S 564.

Where what might have been a suit between landlord and tenant became an action of ejectment on title by the course taken by the plaintiff, and the acceptance on both sides in the Court of First Instance of an issue as to his ownership; and the Lower Appellate Court refused to go into that issue; held, that the Lower Appellate Court was bound to try that issue, whether or not there were other sharers or claimants to shares. Vishwanth v Kashinath 1886, P J 213.

118—C.P.C S 564-Objection as to want of cause of action raised for first time by Court of Appeal proprio motu.

Where the plaintiff alleged that his right of way was obstructed in 1871, that he took no proceedings then to enforce his right because the question was raised by defendant's suit which was then pending, that his right was since declared by the decree of 1882 in that suit and prayed for an injunction restraining the defendant from obstructing it in the future; and the defendant by his written statement confined himself to denying the plaintiff's right and did not dispute the plaintiff's claim to an injunction on any other ground; held, that under the circumstances it might well be that the defendant had threatened to obstruct the plaintiff's right as contemplated by S 54 of the Specific Relief Act, which would be ground for granting the injunction prayed for and although such threat not have been distinctly alleged in the plaint it was certainly not a case in which the Court of Appeal should have taken upon itself to raise the very technical objection that there was no cause of action without a fresh obstruction. Baji v Trimbuk. 1887 P J 287.

119—C.P.C.S.564-Issue not covered by pleadings. Plaintiff sued to recover certain lands as ancestral property. Defendant did not deny that they were so, but set up a gift and prescriptive title. Both these pleas failing, the Sub-Judge decreed for plaintiff. The Appeal Court framed an additional issue as to the plaintiff's ownership, found against defendant the issues of gift and prescription; and yet held the plaintiff's ownership not proved. Held, it was not right of the Appeal Court proprio motu to raise an issue as to the plaintiff's title contrary to the admissions and contentions of the parties and the conduct of the case in the Original Court. Balu v Dhondi.1888 P J 369.

Construction & interpretation.

1—A code of procedure should not be construed as taking away or affecting existing substantive rights, unless it says so,

Rai Budreedas Mukim Bahadur v Chunilal Johurry. 10 C W N 581.

2—C. P. C.—The Civil Procedure Code does not affect pre existing power of the Court unless it takes them away. Rash Behary Dey v. Bhavani Churn Bose 34 Cal 97.

See also. 34 Cal 101.

3—C. P. C. Whether exhaustive—Equitable powers of courts inherent where no express provision is made.

The Code of Civil Pro. is not exhaustive ; it binds the Courts only so far as it goes. The court does not affect powers previously possessed, unless it expressly takes them away. It does not affect the power and duty of the Courts to act according to equity and good conscience in cases for which no express provision is made. The Court has an inherent power to do that justice for the administration for which alone it exists Hukum Chand v Kamalanand Singh 3 C L J 67=33 Cal 927

See also Panchanan v Dwarka Nath 3 C L J 29

Also Per Mukerjee J and Rampini J in Rasik Lall Dutt v Bidhu Mukhi Dasi, 4 C L J 306=33 Cal 1094= 10 C W N 719

See also Gurdeo Singh v Chaudrikat 5 C L J 611=11 C W N 856= 34 Cal 860.

Plaintiff, a solicitor, advanced money to a client on a mortgage bond and three further charges. The consideration for the third further charge was not paid in cash, but was made up of (1) amounts due to the plaintiff on several promissory notes in the plaintiff's favor, (2) certain promissory notes executed by the client in favor of a third party, which the plaintiff is said to have "taken up" (3) balance of amount due as interest on the mortgage and 2 further charges, and (4) a certain amount stated to have been found due to the plaintiff as costs for acting for him in various suits, upon a settlement made of amounts due under various taxed and untaxed bills, a large remission having been allowed in consideration of all the bills not being taxed. In a suit by the plaintiff against the heirs of his deceased client to realize the amount due on the mortgage and the three further charges, the plaintiff obtained a decree on the 1st three bonds, but the 4th bond was ordered to be re-opended and it was directed that the plaintiff "do get all his bills of costs up to the 3rd August 1905 taxed by the Taxing Officer of the High Court, and then refile the bills in this Court," that then a Commissioner be appinted to take accounts in the light of the observations in this case, that after the Commissioner's Report is received and the parties are heard thereon the final decree will be drawn up under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act. Held that this order was a decree. The 'rights of the parties' referred to by the definition of the term 'decree' in S. 2 (2), Civ. Pro. Code (1908), must be taken to be the rights of the parties inter se in regard to the subject-matter of the suit.

An interlocutory order passed by a Court on any objection raised by the defendant, however frivolous, cannot be treated as coming within the definition of a decree and therefore justifying an immediate appeal to a Higher Court.

Ooders made with reference to

(1) an objection as to part of the suit based upon the terms of the Pensions Act,

(2) a question as to how that portion of the claim dealing with profits is to be determined;

(3) a demand by the defendant that security should be taken from the plaintiff before the case proceeds further; and do not amount to 'preliminary decrees' within the meaning of S. 2 (2), and are not appealable.

Where an appeal lies against the decree that might be passed in a suit, the Court will decline to interfere in revision with interlocutory orders passed in that suit. (146 P R 1908, Dist.).

23—C P C. 1908 S. 2 (2)—Interlocutory order—'Decree'—Preliminary decree.

The definition of decree is not intended to include an interlocutory decision in ordinary suit upon each and every point in controversy between the parties, even in those cases, where the decision upon any such question is embodied in a separate and distinct order passed during the pendency of the proceedings.

An order cannot be regarded as a decree unless it is formally drawn up as such or, at all events, unless it could be so drawn up.

A 'preliminary decree' properly understood is passed only in those cases in which the Court has first to adjudicate upon the rights of the parties and has then to stay its hand for the time being until it is in a position to pass a final decree in the suit. Kashi Nath v Nathu Ram. 115 P L R 1911=41 P R 1911= 9 Ind Cas 1019.

The jurisdiction of the High Courts is what was formerly possessed by the Supreme Court at Calcutta and continued to it by the Indian High Courts Act 1861 (24 and 25 Vict C 104), viz over Bengal. Behar and Orissa; and for the purpose of restraining suits, any Court outside such jurisdiction is to be considered foreign Court.

The definition of "foreign Court" in S. 2, C P C 1882 is for the purposes of that Code only, and semble, does not apply to extend the jurisdiction of the High Court for the purpose of restraining suits pending in Court outside its jurisdiction under the charter.

A Court can restrain a person from proceeding with a suit in a foreign Court only when the person sought to be restrained is within its jurisdiction and not otherwise so that in the event of an injunction being granted against him and disobeyed by him he would be subject to the process of that Court for contempt. The jurisdiction of a Court, apart from statutory power, can only be exercised over persons who are within its territorial limits. L R 32 Ch D 131 (1886), referred to. The Supreme Court of Mauritius is a foreign Court within the meaning of sec. 2 of C, P.C. and as such its judgments, passed in absentem against a Defendant who at the time of the suit or judgment was neither resident in nor subject of the same country, are not enforceable against him in a Court in British India. S, a voter in a devastanam circle, instituted a suit with sanction under O 1 r 8 for a declaration that the election of a member of a Devastanam Committee was void and for an injunction to restrain him from exercising the office of such member. He died pending the suit and R, another voter was brought on record as the legal representative of S, and the suit was revived at R's instance. Held that R though not a legal representative within the definition of that term in S. 2 of Act V of 1908 could be allowed to continue the suit. Mere misdescription as legal representative would not in itself justify the setting aside of the order of revival. O 1 r 8 applies not only to cases where concurrent interests are concerned, but also where they are similar though distinct, and the sanction granted to a voter whose interest is personal to himself is not therefore bad.

A plaintiff who has obtained sanction under O 1 r 8 has so far as continuing or not continuing the suit is concerned an entire control of the action. In this sense he is undoubtedly dominus litis and not a trustee of the action.

It does not follow that other members of the Note:—"The words 'at any stage' have been added to clause (1) to remove the difficulty created by the view that a suit cannot be transferred after the hearing was once commenced, as to which there is a conflict of decision". Report of the Committee.

This section corresponds with section 25 of Act XIV of 1882. Material changes have been made in this section to set at rest the conflicting decisions. Under the old Act, there was diversity of judicial opinion as to whether the District Judge had power to transfer execution proceedings and hence the words "other proceeding" have been added.

Then there was also diversity of judicial opinion as to whether the District Judge after withdrawing a suit or appeal could re-transfer it or not, and hence the word "re-transfer" has been added.

Again there was also diversity of judicial opinion as to whether a District Judge could transfer a suit pending in his own Court to any Subordinate Court, as it was held in some cases that a District Judge could only transfer a case pending in a Subordinate Court and that he could not transfer a case pending in his own Court. In order to set at rest all the conflicting decisions, the present section has been made more comprehensive, so as to include all the debatable points. The conflicting decisions have also been inserted under this section, to enable the readers to understand the object of the changes made.

A decree passed by a Court of Small Causes sought to attach and sell immoveable property and was thereafter sent for execution to the Munsiff's Court under S. 223 Code of Civil Procedure. Application was made for execution in the plaintiff's Court and judgment debtor raised certain objections which were overruled Held that the appeal lay to the District Judge neither the suit nor the execution proceedings having been transferred to the Munsiff's Court, but the decree having been sent under S. 223 of the Code Had the suit or the execution proceedings been transferred to the Munsiff's Court under S. 26 of the Code or the execution proceedings instituted in the Munsiff's Court under S, 35 Provincial Small Causes Courts Act the proceedings held in the Munsiff's Court might be regarded as proceedings held by a Court of Small Causes.

Notes:—"Though a system of execution based on precepts is, in the opinion of the committee, open to grave objection, they think that the idea may be utilised for the purpose of enabling a decree-holder to obtain an interim attachment where there is ground to apprehend that he may otherwise be deprived of the fruits of his decree. They have, for this purpose, introduced Clause 46 into the Bill. They think it expedient to fix a time for the continuance of this interim attachment, but at the same time they have empowered the Court to extend the period to meet the exigencies of particular cases.

After careful consideration they have come to the conclusion that notwithstanding attachment under a precept, re-attachment on the ordinary application for execution will still be necessary. Though at first sight it may appear a better course to provide that re-attachment shall not be necessary when the issue of the precept is followed by the ordinary application for execution, after careful consideration they have come to the conclusion that it will be safer to require re-attachment, having regard to the agency by which execution is carried into effect".—Report of the Special Committee.

Notes.—The present Code effects several amendments. In the first place clause (a) of Sect 244 of the last Code has not been re-enacted. This clause ran: (a) "questions regarding the amount of any mesne profits as to which the decree has now been directed inquiry". All reference to mesne profits has omitted. This omission is due to the recognition of the principle that inquiries into the amount of mesne profits are properly not a matter for the execution department, but should be treated as an integral part of the suit, for the duties of execution do not properly arise until the amount of mesne profits has been ascertained and the successful party is in a position to apply to the Court with all the necessary formalities in order to realize the sum as though it were the subject of a decree for the payment of money. Under the former code the court might under Sect. 212 of the code have passed a decree for the property and directed an inquiry into the amount of mesne profits accrued due prior to the suit which under clause, (a) of s. 244 might have been determined by the court executing the decree, and under clause (b) of that section of the court of execution might also determine questions regarding the amount of mesne profits accruing after the institution of the suit as allowed by sect 211. Now the ascertainment of the mesne profits no longer forms part of the proceedings in execution but is a part of the suit itself. Under O. XX. r, 12 of the Present Code the Court, in the case of mesne profits accruing before the suit, may either determine the amount in the decree, or pass a preliminary decree of possession only. In the case of mesne profits accruing after the suit, it may pass such a preliminary decree. Whenever it passes a preliminary decree the court must then, in continuation of the suit, inquire as to mesne profits and dispose of the same by a final decree which is then capable of execution.

On the same principle, viz that questions regarding the amount of both mesne profits and interest should be determined by the decree and not in execution, clause (6) of the former section has been omitted.

The reference to stay of execution has omitted, but this is a matter clearly coming within the words "all questions," etc.

The third sub-section has been re-drafted, and the Legislature has made it compulsory on the Court to determine questions arising as to representation of parties. It was considered in expedient that separate suits should be instituted for the decision of such questions, as the delay and expense were often very great and resulted in the needless protraction of litigation.

The second sub-section and the explanation are new. The first sanctions an existing practice and the latter is intended to end a conflict of Judicial decisions.

1 APPLICABILITY, EFFECT & SCOPE OF THE SECTION

(1) Meaning of Section.

136-C P C S. 47.=S 244. of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that there must be some question in controversy and conflict in execution, which has been brought to a final determination and conclusion, so as to be binding upon the parties to the proceedings, and which must relate in terms to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Hulas Rai v. Pirthi Singh.

(3) Sale in Execution Application to set aside sale on the ground of fraud

138. C P C S. 47—(1882 s. 244)—Applicability.

(1) Applicability & Scope of the Section -Contd.

An application to set aside on the ground of fraud a sale held in execution of a decree can be made under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure even after the sale has been confirmed. (26 Cal 326 and 26 Cal 324 foll. 19 Cal 683 ref to.)

(4) Proir and puisne mortgage.

139—C P C S.47 (1882 S.244)-Aapplicability.-A decree for sale and order absolute for sale had been passed against the mortgagor. He then borrowed more money on a mortgage of several villages, including those previously mortgaged, and applied a portion of such money in satisfying the previous decree for sale. The subsequent mortgagee then brought a suit upon the mortgage in which she sought to bring to sale the villages which were the subject of the previous mortgage and decree Held that she could do so, and that s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not apply (24 All 179 Distinguished.)

(5). Plea of agreement before decree not to execute,

140—C P C S.47=(1882 s.244)—Applicability—Remedy.

A court cannot inquire under s.244 into an objection that a decree cannot be executed by reason of an agreement entered into between the parties before the decree was passed that it will not be executed. The proper remedy is to sue to restrain execution (22 Bom 463 dissented from 29 Cal 810; 6 C W N 796 followed.) Hassan Ali v Ganzi Ali Mir. 31 Cal 179;

S. 244 Civil Procedure Code does not apply to the case of execution proceedings held under the Public Demands Recovery Act (29 Cal 94, 6 C W N 246, 5 C W N 331 relied upon.) Ramrup Sahay v Khus Lal Misser, 6 C W N 630.

(1) Applicability, Effect & scope of the section—Contd.

(7) Attaching creditors—Representatives.

142.—C P C S. 47=(1882. S. 244)

To attract the applicability of section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, it must not only be shown that the question relates to the execution of the decree but arises between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives.

Two attaching creditors of the judgment-debtors neither of whom was a party to the suit brought by the other, are not the representatives of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Ram Chandra v Mussammat Hamiran 6 C L J 437=11 C W N 433.

(8) Mortgage decree—Section 244, applicability of.

143. C P C S47, O 21 r 60=1882 sections 244 280.

Per Mookerjee J—S 244 of the Civil Procedure Code has no application to a case where the judgment-debtor tries to set aside the effect of the decree itself. In the case of a mortgage decree, the decree itself directs the sale of the property and if objection is taken that the property cannot be sold because it belonged not to the judgment debtor but to a party who is a stranger to the suit, the propriety of the decree is called in question. A question of this description must be tried in a regular suit and not in the execution proceedings which are based on the assumption that the decree is a good and valid decree.

Shib Lakshan Bhakat v Srimati Tarangini Dasi. 8 C L J 20.

(9) Applicability-Conditions necessary for.

144.—S. 47=(1882 S 244,)—Purchaser under decree of puisne mortgage obtaining possession of mortgaged property—Subsequent purchase under decree on the first mortgage—Suit for possession by subsequent purchaser—Redemption.

A puisne mortgagee obtained a decree against the mortgagor without impleading the first mortgagee, and bought the property in execution of his mortgage-decree and also obtained possession thereof.

(1) Applicability, Effect & scope of the section—Contd.

The first mortgagee then sued on his mortgage and bought the property in execution of his mortgage decree. The first mortgagee afterwards sued the puisne mortgagee, and claimed that the puisne mortgagee should either give up possession or redeem him.

Held, that the suit was not barred by S. 244 C P C.

In order that S. 244 Civ Pro Code, should apply, the conditions must be fulfilled:

(1) The question must relate to the execution discharge or satisfaction of the decree or stay of execution thereof;

(2) The question must arise between parties to the suit or their representatives.

In the present case the question at issue arose only after the satisfaction of the original decree, and it was not between the parties to the same suit or their representatives but between representatives of the same party.

Held, also that the defendant being a puisne mortgagee, his only right was to redeem the plaintiff. He was not concerned with the account taken in the plaintiff's suit to which he was not a party nor was he concerned with the price paid by the plaintiff at his purchase (25 Bom 631; 20 Bom 390; 19 All 527 and 33 Cal 590 Ref).

(10) Applicability—Essentials.

145—C P C—S. 47=(1882—S. 244)-Applicability—Essentials:—S 244 does not apply to a case where the decree itself is impeached, and no appeal lies from an order dealing with such objection. Tallaprasada Sundarappa v. Sreeramulu. 17 M L J 288=30 Mad 402

147—C P C S.47=(1882 s.244):—S.244 of the Code pre-supposes a decree enforceable by the decree-holder, against a person between whom and the decree-holder the question has arisen, and does not apply to a question arising between a decree-holder and a person against whom there is no decree to be executed. (23 All 346 Fol)

Hence, where, in a suit for sale upon a mortgage, a person was impleaded as defendant against whom no relief was claimed, Held that a subsequent suit for redemption by him was not barred by s. 244, C P C, 1882. Sheo Pargas Singh v. Nawab Singh 7 A L J 264=5 Ind Cas 496= 32 All 321.

(13) Construction.

148—C P C—S. 47=(1882 S.244)—The Court should construe s.244 liberally and widely. An assignee of a decree-holder is a representative within the meaning of this section. Jamai Nath roy v. Dharma Das Sur. 4 C L J 192= 33 Cal 857.

(14) Construction—Liberal to avoid multiplicity.

149—C P C-S. 47=(1882 Sec.244.)—Section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code ought to be liberally construed in order to avoid multiplicity of suits

Where a judgment-debtor does not challenge the validity of a decree but contends that in execution thereof certain property should not be attached and sold, in consequence of circumstances arising subsequent to the decree, such contention ought to be dealt with under section 244 Civil Procedure Code, and not by a separate suit. Rajbansi Roy v. Where the plaintiff instead of proceeding by way of execution filed a suit and such a suit has been tried by the very Court which could have dealt with the matter in execution proceedings.

Held that the Court has not acted without jurisdiction, even though there was already an application under S. 244, on which an order was passed against the person bringing the suit.

The question is only one of procedure and does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court.

An objection as to the maintainability of a suit should be taken in the original Court (19 W R 90; 14 Cal 605, 22 Cal 483, 22 All 121, 22 Mad 347; 28 Mad 64. Ref: 19 W R 90; 14 Cal 605 (608), Fol:) Yenkatakrishnama Charlu v. Krishna Rao 32 Mad 425=4 Ind Cas 723.

(17) Suit may be treated as an application under S. 244.

An execution sale may be challenged on the ground of fraud in the execution proceedings; it may also be challenged on ground that the decree, on which the proceedings are founded, is itself tainted with fraud. In the fomer case, the remedy is by an application under section 221, in the latter case, the remedy is by a regular suit.

If the decree is tainted with fraud, a suit will lie to set aside the execution sale even though the decree may have been previously set aside under section 108 of the Code and there is no subsisting decree to be set aside in the suit in which the sale is impeached.

Cases can only be enquired into under section 244, when the existence of a decree which is susceptible and capable of execution is conceded, and it does not apply to a case, when the object is to impugn the decree itself.

If there was fraud in the execution proceedings it would be open to the party affected by the fraud to make an application under section 244, if instead of an application, he presents a plaint in the Court competent to deal with the matter, the defect is one of form rather than of substance, and there is no real want of jurisdiction.

The application to have the sale set aside under section 244, may be made within three years from the date of the sale, under Art. 178 of Schedule II of the Limitation Act.

Section 578 of the Civil Procedure Code cures the defect in an irregular order of remand made by an appellate Court unless the merits of the case are shewn to have been affected in any way by the order. Debendra Nath Bhattacharjee v Prasanna Kumar Chakravarti. 5 C L J 328.

(19) Circumstances under which plaint may be treated as an application under S.244.

Plaintiff's father took a loan from the defendant. The latter sued the plaintiff and his brothers, after the death of the father to recover the money, and obtained a simple money decree, in execution of which certain ancestral property was attached. Objection was taken to the attachment, but was dismissed by two lower Courts, whereupon the sons appealed to the High Court. Pending the decision of the High Court, the plaintiff deposited money in Court, which was realised by defendant. The High Court held that, on the true construction of the decree, the property could not be attached and sold.

The plaintiff then brought the suit to recover the money newly, because of the decision of the High Court. Held, that the suit was not maintainable, and the plaint could not be treated under the circumstances as an application under S. 244, Civ. In an execution proceeding, the judgment-debtor contended that he was entitled to deduct a larger sum than was allowed by the decree-holder on account of the transfer of certain properties by him to the decree holder, and that the interest was erroneously claimed at a higher figure than what was due. There was also the question raised as to the date upon which credit ought to be allowed for the consideration money for the transfer.

Held, that these questions were covered by S. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, and the Court should not decline to investigate into them on the ground that the remedy of the judgment-debtor was by way of a regular suit. Surendra Nath Dutt v. Kumar Manmotha Nath Mitter, 9 Ind Cas 382.

In such a case it is not open to the Court to investigate, under S. 47 of the Code, allegations of fraud made by the judgment-debtor against the decree-holder.

Even if it is established that the conduct of a decree-holder is fraudulent, the judgment-debtor is not entitled to obtain an extension of the time within which to make an application to the Court under cl. 2 of r 2 of O XXI because the judgment-debtor is not, by means of fraud, kept from the knowledge of his right to make the application, within the meaning of S. 18 of the Limitation Act, but from the exercise of his right to make the application.

(58) Execution of decree-Power of Court executing transferred decree to implead representative of deceased judgment-debtor -Jurisdiction of-Court to execute decree in excess of the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction as an original Court, 203.—C P C S. 47=Civil Procedure Code 1882, Ss. 244, 228, 232, 234, 235, 248—Court which passed the decree-Application for execution dismissed for default-Subsequent application without fresh certificate from Court which passed the decree.

The amendment of Section 244, Civil Procedure Code, by Section 26 of Act VII of 1888, has had the effect of practically doing away with the necessity of resorting to the Court which passed the decree, when the execution of such decree is pending elsewhere in order to implead the representative of the judgment-debtor if he happenes to die while execution is going on. In such a case, the Court executing the decree is enabled by virtue of the said section to implead such representative, and is not debarred from so doing by Section 234 of the Code, which is at best imperative only when no execution is pending but the decree has not been fully realized.

An application for execution of a decree which had been transferred to a Court for execution was consigned to the Record room by an order in the following terms:—'There has been no attachment, nor has property been pointed out on the spot, decree-holder or his mukhtar not present. Let the file be sent to the Record-room (Ithaza misl dakhil daftar hoe)". A subsequent application for execution having been made to the same Court and granted, it was objected on appeal that in consequence of the order above set forth the executing Court had become functus officio and could not proceed with the exeution without a fresh certificate from the Court which passed the decree.

Held, that the effect of such order was merely that the application "was struck off" the file of the business pending in the Court, but that the case really continued pending in the Court, which was therefore competent to proceed with the execution on a fresh application made to it within time.

It cannot be applied against a person who in the previous suit has been successful. Held that disclaimer of title will not per se operate as an estoppel. Held, that under s. 244 Civil Procedure Code, it is the duty of a Court to construe the decree and give effect to it, not to re-try the suit. Raja Ewaz Ali Khan v Bakar Khan 1 O C 22,

The Court rejected the application. Held, that the language of the last paragraph of S. 244, Civil Procedure Code, does not indicate that the determination of the question contemplated is a determination not merely by the Court of the first instance, but also where appeals are preferred,a determination by the Appellate Courts. Held, therefore, that the question whether A was the legal representative of the decree-holder had been determined by the separate suit. Held further that the Court having referred the parties to a regular suit had power to proceed with the execution as soon as the question as to who was the legal representative of the deceased decree-holder had been determined in that suit.

In a suit upon a hypothecation bond a third party was made defendant, as she claimed the hypothecated property. The mortgagee obtained a decree for recovery of the amount of the bond, and for enforcement of the mortgage In execution of the decree, the debt not being satisfied by sale of the mortgaged property, the decree holder caused certain other immoveable property in the possession of the third party to be attached She objected to the attachment on the ground that this property was her own, and was not liable to sale in execution of the decree. The objection was allowed, and the decree-holder then sued for a declaration that the property belonged to the mortgagor, judgment-debtor and was liable to attachment and sale in execution of the decree. Held that, as no claim in the former suit was made against the objector personally or in a representative character, but as regards her, the only claim was virtually for a declaration that she was not entitled to the hypothecated property, the decree affected her only so far as it negatived her alleged interest in that property and, so far as it was sought to be enforced against other property, she was a stranger to that suit and her objection must be taken to have been decided under ss. 278 and 280 of the Civil Procedure Code,and the present suit was rightly brought under s. 283 and was not barred by s 244. Where the same property is simultaneously attached in execution of one decree of the District Judge, and another of the Subordinate Judge, the District Judge alone has the power to realise the property. The Court of a Disrict Judge is of a higher grade than that of a Subordinate Judge. The fact that the judgment-debtor was also a rival decree-holder did not take away her right to raise the objection that the property could not be sold by the Subordinate Judge. (21) Minor not a party to the decree under s. 47.

251—Where a jurisdiction is usurped by a Court in passing an order against which an appeal would lie, appeal against the order cannot be defeated by showing that the order was without jurisdiction. So, where, a court purporting to act under S 47 Civ Pro Code directed execution to proceed against a minor and an appeal was preferred on the ground that the decree sought to be executed did not bind the minor, held—that the fact that, on the applicant's own showing, the minor would not be a party to the decree within the meaning of s 47 and thus the order would not be an order under s. 47, would not make the appeal incompetent An execution Court must proceed on the assumption that there is a valid decree capable of execution, and it is not open to it to investigat the validity of the decree or its binding character. Moharaj Kumar Bindeswari Charan Singh v Thakur Lakpat Nath Singh. 15 C W N 725.

252.—C P C S 47 of 1908=S 244 of (1882) A widow of a last full owner of property had mortgaged certain properties. After her death a suit was brought upon the mortgage bond in which the defence of the minor heir represented by a manager of a Court of wards, was that the widow had no right to mortgage the property But subsequently he withdrew his defence and a decree was made. Without any notice to the present plaintiff a part of the mortgaged property was sold in execution. The plaintiff sued for the recovery of the property. The defence was that no separate suit can lie. Held—inasmuch as the plaintiff was a party to a suit in which the decree was made his remedy, if he could object to the sale, was by an application under section 244 and not by a separate suit.

The word representative in cl. [c] s. 244 C P Code means any person succeeding to the right of any of the parties to the decree. A Hindu widow mortgaged certain properties and then assigned them to the next reversioner on condition that he was to pay the mortgage-debtor. The mortgagee brought a suit against the widow and the assignee. The suit resulted in a money decree against the widow personally. While an appeal to the privy Council was pending, the widow died and B was brought on the record as her representative. The decree of the High Court was confirmed. In execution B was sought to be made liable to satisfy the amount out of the mortgaged property. Held—with regards to this property he was not a legal representative of the widow as he inherited it from her husband. Held that B's liability under the ikranamah did not fall within the scope of cl (c) of s 244 C P Code because although B was a party to the suit, the only claim against him was that property in his hands was liable as having been previously hypothecated; and as the suit was dismissed, so far as that claim was concerned, it was not a question relating to the execution of the decree. Kameshwar Pershad v Run Bahadur Singh 12 Cal 458.

The term 'representative' as used in section 244 of the Code of Civil Procednre Act XIV of 1882 means not merely the legal representative in the sense of the heirs, executors or administrators, but includes any representative in interest that is, any transferee of the interest of the decree-holder or judgment-debtor, who so for as such interest is concerned, is bound by the decree.

(3) Representative—Contd.

To determine whether a particular person is a representative of a party to the suit, the two tests to be applied are, first, whether any portion of the interest of the decree-holder or of the judgment-debtor, which was originally vested in one of the parties to the suit, has, by act of parties or by operation of law, vested in the person who is sought to be treated as representative, and secondly, if there has been a devolution of interest, whether so far as such interest is concerned, that person is bound by the decree.

Where the entire interest in the properties mortgaged is vested in the original judgment-debtors who are parties to the mortgage suit and a son of one of the judgment-debtors, a member of the joint Mitakshara family, is born after the mortgage decree, the immediate effect of his birth is that the aggregate of rights then vested in his grandfather, his father and his two uncles, becomes vested in him conjointly with them. By reason of the birth of his son there is a transference of interest in the eye of the law. To the extent of this interest, the son is a representative of one of the parties to the suit, namely his father. It is, on principle, strictly analogous to that of the transfer of the equity of redemption of the judgment-debtor, in whole or in part after the mortgage decree has been made.

The purchaser of a fragment of the equity of redemption after the decree, is a representative of the judgment-debtor, whether he acquires his interest under a private alienation or by a judicial sale.

The son is also, to the extent of the interest acquired by him by birth bound by the mortgage decree made before his birth. A son cannot object to alienations validly made by his father before he was born or begotten because he could only by birth obtain an interest in property which was then existing in his ancestors.

As in the case of a mortgage suit, the lis continues after the decree nisi and the doctrine of lis pendens is applicable to proceedings to realise the mortgage after the decree for sale, the son, who, by reason of his birth subsequent to the mortgage decree acquired an interest in the mort-

Where a mortgagee, in execution of his own decree, purchase the mortgaged property at an auction sale which is confirmed, and he obtains the sale certificate, there is no bar to his subsequently maintaining a suit to recover possession thereof if the judgment-debtor does not deliver up the property. S. 244 (c) does not apply to such a case.

Per Stanley, C. J., dissentiente (Knox J., concurring with him); The recognition of a dual personality in a decree-holder-purchaser would be to introduce a strange and novel legal fiction. An executor who is sued as such only cannot in his personal capacity be prejudiced by any decree which may be passed in the suit. On the contrary in the case of a decree-holder, he sues on his own behalf and for his own benefit. If he gets leave to bid and buys the mortgaged property, he does so on his own account and in his own interest alone. By becoming a purchaser he does not cease to be a party to the suit and as such be bound by any order which may be passed therein. The intention of the legislature in passing the enactment in question was to prevent any question which could be disposed of in execution becoming the cause of fresh litigation.

The word, 'representative' in S. 244 of the Code includes a party who by assignment or gift succeeds to the rights of the decree-holder after decree.

Art 138, Limitation Act, 1877, might be applicable to the case of a purchaser who was a stranger to the suit in which a decree for sale was passed and, not being a party to the suit, was entitled to take proceedings under S. 244. When a Court has passed a decree for sale in a a mortgage suit, the proceedings are not at an end when the sale to the decree-holder who has obtained leave to bid has been confirmed and a certificate of sale granted. Delivery of possession is necessary and until such possession is given, the decree cannot be said to have been executed or satisfied.

(3) Representative—Contd.

Per Banerji J (Aikman and Griffin, JJ., concurring): In order that cl (c), of S. 244 may apply, two conditions are essential; first, that the question arises between the parties to the suit, in which the decree was passed or their representatives, and second, that it is a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. As regards the first condition it is manifest that the party must be arrayed as decree-holder or his representative on the one side and judgment-debtor or his representative on the other. Any question arising between the decree-holder and his representative or between the judgment-debtor and his representative is clearly not a question within the purview of S. 244.

The decree-holder as such is not entitled to possession if the decree does not award possession. It is only in his capacity as auction purchaser that he can apply for and obtain possession. In this respect his position is no better and should be no worse than that of any other purchaser. The fact that the decree holder purchased the property is a pure accident though the same person may be the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser he fills two different capacities and it is in the latter capacity that he can obtain possession.

The question which arises under S. 318 or 319, C P C is not a question between the parties to the suit or their representative and cannot be determined under S. 244. A question between the auction-purchaser or his representative and the judgment-debtor or his representative relating to the delivery of possession is not a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Under the meaning of S. 244, cl (c), upon the judgment-debtor's property being sold and the amount due under the decree being realized, the decree is fully executed, discharged and satisfied, and no question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree remains to be determined.

Whether or not the auction-purchaser obtains possession of the property sold, is wholly immatèrial for purposes of the decree and does not in any way affect it. The validity of the sale or the completion of it does not depend on the decree-holder's obtaining possession. So far as the purchaser is concerned, he does not obtain possession by virtue of the decree and the question of delivery of possession to him is not one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. That the legislature intended that a purchaser at an auction sale may obtain possession by means of suit is manifest from Act 138, Limitation Act. A decree-holder auction-purchser, like any other auction purchaser, is entitled to claim possession not only by an application under S. 318 or s 319 but also by suit . he has alternative remedies, one of the remedies a summary application being for possession,and S.244 is not a bar to such a suit and does not apply to such an application.

No appeal lies from an order under S. 318 C. P. C.

An application under s. 318 is not an application for execution, and so also an application for delivery of possession is not an application to take a step-in-aid of execution. The opinion of Konx, J., in the undermentioned cases (f) doubted.

At a sale in execution of redemption decree, the decree-holder (mortgagee) himself purchased the property in 1899. The sale was confirmed in 1900. In 1909, the representative of the decree-holder (auction-purchaser) brought a suit to recover possession of the property so purchased. The defendants (representatives of the judgment-debtors, mortgagors) contended that, as the question involved in the suit related to the execution of the decree, the suit was not maintainable under s. 47 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, and that the plaintiff's remedy lay under O. XXI, r. 5. The first Court decreed the claim. On appeal: Held, reversing the decree, that the suit was barred by s. 47 of the Civ. Pro Code, 1908. A decree-holder, by becoming a purchaser at a Court-sale held in execution of his decree, does not cease to be a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 47 of the Civ. Pro. Code. (27 Cal 34, 31 Cal 737, 25 Mad 529, Fol: 31 All 82, Diss:). Proceedings for delivery of possession of property purchased by the decree-holder are proceedings in execution of the decree and fall within the scope of s. 47 of the Civ. Pro. Code. (27 Cal 34, 31 Cal 742, 26 Mad 740, 25 Mad 529, 13 Mad 504, Fol:). Art. 138 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) does not override the provisions of s. 47 of the Civ. Pro. Code. The two should be read together. Where the auction-purchaser is also a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, his claim for delivery of possession of the property purchased must be determined by the Court in the execution department. But where the auction-purchaser is a third party, it is open to him to bring a suit for possession of the property purchased by him,and such a suit will be governed by Art. 138 of the Limitation Act. Under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, the execution proceedings do not terminate with the sale. Where the execution of the decree is barred at the date of the suit, it cannot be allowed to be treated as a proceeding in execution.

291—C P C S. 47 of (1908)=S. 244 of (1882) -Clause (c)-Questions for Court executing decree —"Parties to suit"-Representative—Right to sue.

The decision of the Privy Council in (11 B L R 149), to the effect that " where a decree has been properly passed and proceedings taken under it to obtain execution against a party in a representative character, there seems to be no good reason for saying he should not be considered a party to the suit with respect to any question which may arise between him and the other parties relating to the execution of the decree " within the meaning of Act XXIII of 1861, Section 11 (Act XIV of 1882, Section 244 [c]) cited and followed.

Held, semble, that the above decision does not go to the length of affirming that a person who is a party to a suit in any character is a party in every other character he may happen to fill: and therefore an objection by a judgment-debtor that, while the decree was against his private property, the thing attached was property which he was holding as a mere trustee or executor or in his capacity of an office-bearer would not fall within Section 244 of the Code of 1882, so as to bar a separate suit.

Held, further, that where the subsequent suit is no longer between the judgment-debtor claiming in a different capacity against his decree-holder only, but he is suing to eject a stranger to the previous suit, who has bought the attached property at the auction, the latter cannot be said to be either a party to the prior suit of the representative of a party, so as to bring the case within the scope of Section 244 (c) of the Code. 293—C P C S 47 and O. XXI, r. 58-(1908)-Claim-Previous purchaser in execution of mortgage decree, if competent to object to sale in execution of money decree.—

A property was sold in execution of a mortgage decree and purchased by A. M was about to have the same property sold in execution of his money-decree against the same judgment-debtors. A then made an application asking that the Court would exempt the property from sale. The Court granted the application. Held, that, as no provision has been made in the Civ. Pro. Code for such an application, the order of the Court below was made without jurisdiction Held, further, that the matter could not be regarded as a claim, inasmuch as the purchase by which the applicant claimed to have acquired his title to the property was made long after the attachment of the property by the second decree-holder. Held, also, that the matter did not fall within the purview of s. 47 of the Civ. Pro. Code, as the applicant could not be said to be the representative of judgment-debtor for the purposes of that section. Mahadeo Lal v. Dinkar Prasad, 9 Ind Cas 194=15 C W N 542

Before the sale of property, attached in execution of a decree, A, the judgment-debtor, deposited the amount due, but the receipt given by the bailiff was not filed in the execution record but in the regular record and on that account was overlooked by the Judge, in consequence of which the Township Judge ordered the land to be sold and confirmed the sale.

When, however, the fact of A's payment before the sale was brought to the notice of the Judge, he, after hearing all the parties concerned, cancelled the sale and ordered A to refund to the auction-purchaser Rs.530 plus 5 per cent. On appeal to the District Court, this order of refund was set aside:

Held, that an order of the above kind, to be appealable under S. 244 of the old Code (S. 47 of the new), must be an order determining a question arising between the parties or their representatives, to the suit, in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.

Held, further, that the auction-purchaser at a Court sale. who is a stranger to the suit, does not, by his purchase, become a party or a representative of either party, within the meaning of S. 244, and that the order of the District Court must. therefore, be reversed.

Held, also, that the purchaser under a sale in execution is not bound to inquire into the correctness of an order for execution. Maung Po Thet v P R Y Anamalay Chetty, 9 Ind Cas 472.

The respondent obtained against the appellant's father a decree for sale on a mortgage of certain villages which became absolute in 1897. The respondent applied for possession of the mortgaged property and got it on the 11th September 1904. On the 14th September the appellant, claiming the property under an alleged deed of gift from his father and as an assignee of a subsequent mortgage, filed objections on the ground that he was not bound by the compromise of the 16th January 1904. 325—C P C S. 47=(1882 S 244)—Application in execution—Rightful representative of party to the decree and of estate — Purchaser from the Judgment-debtor.

Plaintiffs obtained, in a suit based on a mortgage, a decree against the property of one S, deceased. That suit was brought against an alleged adopted son of S, and two widows of S's father. One of the widows died after suit. The widows would have represented the estate if the alleged adoption had failed. In execution plaintiffs purchased a portion of the lands and applied for delivery of possession. They were resisted by a third person, who alleged himself to be the nearest reversioner to the estate and to be in possession in his own right, because S himself was said to have been adopted by his father in conjunction only with the deceased widow and because the surviving widow had under such circumstances, no interest in the estate at all. He also relied on a release deed, alleged to have been executed in his favour by the survivor of the two widows, who were defendants in the suit. The lower Court dismissed the application for delivery of possession. Hence the present appeal. There was a preliminary objection to the effect that no appeal lay. Held, (1) that, if the objector had inherited the estate on the death of the deceased widow, he would be the person entitled to represent the estate; (2) if, on the other hand, the surviving widow were in possession as the adoptive mother of S, even then the objector must be a person claiming from the surviving widow, who was one of the parties to the suit. In either view, the objector was a 'representative' within the meaning of S. 244 and the matter must be dealt with and decided in execution-proceedings only. The appeal therefore, did lie. A decree for sale upon a mortgage of the husband's property was passed against a Hindu widow. She died before execution, and the decree-holders applied to bring the reversioners of the husband on the record.

The reversioners objected on the ground that they were not the representatives of the widow. Held, that it is the duty of the Court to stay execution until the question so raised is decided by a separate suit or to itself determine the question. In execution of a decree against the plaintiffs as representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor, certain property was attached as belonging to the judgment-debtor. The plaintiffs' objection to the effect that the property belonged to them having been disallowed and their appeal against the order rejecting their claim dismissed, they brought a fresh suit for damages for wrongful attachment in the Court of a Munsiff having Small Cause Court powers. The suit was also dismissed The District Judge, being of opinion that, since no suit lay, he was competent to hear an appeal against the order of dismissal, entertained an appeal made to him by the plaintiffs and affirmed the order of dismissal. On revision, it was contended that the District Judge was not competent to hear the appeal and that the suit was improperly dismissed. Held, that under the provisions of s. 244 of the Civ. Pro Code, the plaintiffs being representatives of the judgment-debtor and not third parties, were precluded from bringing a separate suit to establish their title to the property attached by the decree-holder. Held, also, that the order of the District Judge being right on the merits, no interference in revision was necessary, although he had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. The decree-holder under a decree for enforcement of lien against the zamindari rights and interests of K applied for execution by attachment and sale of certain shares, one of which was recorded in the khewat in the name of K, and two others in the name of B, his brother's widow. The shares having been attached, the judgment-debtor died, and J, his brother, and L, his son, were substituted as his representatives. In execution of the decree, only the share which had stood recorded in the name of the deceased judgment-debtor, and which was in possession of J and L as his representatives, was sold; and the decree-holder then applied for sale of the other shares which had been attached. To this B objected under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, claiming to be the owner of the shares in question. Before the hearing of her objection she died, and L applied to have his name brought upon the record in her place for the purpose of supporting the objections. An order having been passed disallowing the objections which had been filed by B, L applied to the High Court. A preliminary objection was taken on behalf of the decree-holder to the hearing of the appeal on the ground that, as the first Court's order related to L's claim as the heir of B to have the shares entered in her name released from attachment, it must be regarded as passed under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, and as conclusive, subject to L's bringing a suit to establish his right. On the other side it was contended that, L being the representative of the deceased judgment-debtor K, the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s. 244 of the Code, and the appeal would therefore lie. Held, that the preliminary objection must prevail,and the first Court's order must be regarded as passed under s. 281, and not under s. 244 of the Code, inasmuch as L's claim which was rejected by it, was nothing more than to come in as B's representative for the purpose of supporting her objections; and it was in right of a third person, whose interest he asserted to have passed to him, that he prayed admission to the proceedings, and his character was wholly distinct from that he filled as the legal representative of his deceased father. Because L happened, for the purpose of the execution proceeding, to be his father's legal representative. and to be liable to satisfy the decree to the extent of any assets which might have come to his hands, it did not follow that any rights claimed by him through a third person must be dealt with, and could only be dealt with, between him and the decree-holder in the execution-proceedings (11 B L R 149, 7 All 547, 7 All 733, 2 All 752, 7 All 36, and 6 Cal 777, referred to).

333—C P C S. 47 of (1908)=S. 244 of (1882) —Deceased judgment-debtor—Execution against a person not the legal representative.—

The defendants, along with one N and C, had brought a suit against one A in the Civil Court at Peshawar in the Punjab,and obtained a decree, on the 23rd July 1878 for Rs 3,05,545-12-0. In 1881 application for transfer of the decree to the Court at Moradabad for execution was made, and it was granted, but no steps were taken thereupon. On the 12th June 1883, A died. On the 30th April 1884, the defendants again applied to the Court at Peshawar, treating their judgment-debtor as being then alive, for a fresh certificate to execute their decree in the Moradabad district, and obtained it. On the 20th August 1885, they made an application to the District Judge of Moradabad for execution of their decree, and in it, it was stated that the application was "for execution against Adjudhia Prasad and after his death against Angan Lal, his own brother, and Durga Kuar, widow, and Lachman Prasad and others, sons of Ajudhia Prasad, residents of Kundarki, and the said Angan Lal, at present residing at Umballa and employed in the Commissariat-Transport Department, judgment-debtors". It was further stated that "the judgment-debtor was dead, and his heirs are living and in possession of his estate, and Angan Lal himself has realized Rs. 9,637-4-9 due to the deceased judgment-debtor from the Commissariat Department of Calcutta and appropriated the same; therefore to that extent the person of the said Angan Lal was liable." Notification of this application was issued to Angan Lal as also to the other persons named therein. Angan Lal objected to the application as against him, stating that, although he was the brother of A, deceased, yet he always lived separate and carried on business separately; and that there was no connection or partnership between him and the deceased judgment-debtor, and that he had no property of the deceased in his possession. Further, that as A left issue, it was wrong to call him an heir to A, and take out execution process against him. In reply to these objections, the judgment-creditors (defendants) did not contend that Angan Lal was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, but treated him as a person in possession of a sum of money belonging to the deceased,and, therefore, liable to the extent of the sum so received by him. The Subordinate Judge, holding that Angan Lal was the brother of the deceased and had realized the amount of the Commissariat Office, which he failed to prove that he paid to the deceased, ordered execution to proceed against him. Angan Lal then instituted this suit to set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge. It was contended that the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge were held under s. 244 of the Code, and, therefore, no separate suit would lie. Held, that the contention must fail, as the Subordinate Judge never treated the proceedings in execution against Angan Lal upon the footing that he was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. 3 I A 241, and 3 C L R 437, were referred to. Angan Lal v. 334—C. P. C. S. 47 of (1908)=S. 244 of (1882) —Legal representative of a deceased decree-holder—Representatives—Revision

The Code of Civil Procedure contains no provision under which a representative of a deceased decree-holder can have his name entered on the record when nothing remains to be done under the decree beyond its execution.

An order refusing to such a representative his claim to continue the execution proceedings, cannot be interfered with by way of revision, but is open to appeal under S. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Jeshankar v Pandaya Fulia. 2 Bom L R 887.

335—C P C S. 47 of (1908)=S. 244 of (1882) —Parties to suit—Representatives.

Held, that a person claiming to be the representative of a deceased decree-holder for purposes of executing the decree in favour of the heirs and who has been recognized by the Court as a petitioner, but has not been recognized as the representative of the deceased decree-holder, the Court having refused to permit him to execute the decree, unless and until he has established his representative title in a regular suit, is not a "representative" within the meaning of clause (c), of S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The only legitimate construction of the expression in the above clause "questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives" is one which restricts it to de facto representatives

A Hindu widow, having only a life interest in her husband's property, mortgaged a portion of it to the appellant for a certain sum of money. The appellant brought a suit against her to recover the mortgage money by sale of the mortgaged property. To this suit, on her death during the proceedings, the respondents were made defendants, as her legal representatives. A decree was passed against these defendants to be satisfied out of the deceased widow's personal estate in their hands. In execution of this decree a portion of the mortgaged property was sold by auction and purchased by the appellant. The respondent brought a suit against the appellant for possession of the property purchased by him at the auction sale, on the allegation that it did not form part of the widow's estate but belonged to the estate of her husband. Held, that the appellant was entitled to retain the property purchased by him. Whether the property formed part of the widow's estate or belonged to the estate of of her husband was a question which ought to have been decided in execution, and could not be made the subject of a separate suit by the respondents. The provisions of s. 244, Civil Procedure Code, make no distinction in this respect between representatives brought on the record before and representatives brought on the record after decree. Gajadhar Parshad v Ambika Sahai. In August 1868, the executors filed this suit against L as manager of certain landed property belonging to the Hallai Bhattia caste, and known as Mahajan Wadi to recover certain loans made by them as executors to him as manager of the said Wadi. On the 11th May 1870, while this suit was pending, the executors assigned all the property of their testator to the appellant P. By the deed of assignment they assigned to him inter alia, "all moveable property, debts, claims, and things in action whatsoever vested in them as such executors." No steps were taken, subsequently to this assignment, to make the assignee P a party to the suit, which proceeded without amendment. On the 23rd January 1873, a decree was passed for the plaintiffs on the record for Rs 31,272-13-5, and it was declared that the said sum should be a first charge on the rents and income of the said Wadi. Subsequently to this decree, L opened an account in the name of the appellant P, and from time to time made payments to him on account of the decree. The last of these payments was made on the 19th November 1884. None of these payments were certified to the Court. In 1885 the respondent V was appointed to the office of manager of the Hallai Bhattia caste in the place of L, the original defendant in the suit. On the 4th January 1886, his attorneys wrote to the appellant's attorneys offering to pay the appellant the balance due to him under the decree. Subsequently, however, he refused to make any payment to the appellant, whereupon the appellant applied for execution of the decree against him as manager of the said Wadi. He claimed to be a transferee of the decree under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). His application was refused by the Judge in Chambers. Held that the appellant was a transferee of the decree within the meaning of s 232 of the Civil Procedure Code. The decree had been transferred to him "by operation of law." As such, he was entitled to sue out execution and was to be regarded as the representative of the original decree-holder within the meaning of cl (c) of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and had a right of appeal against the order of the Judge in Chambers refusing execution. Purmanandas Jiwandas v Vallabdas Walji, 366—S. 47 (1882 s. 244)—Execution discharge or satisfaction, relating to—Small Causes Court, reasons for finding.

Under s. 244 of C P C the Court executing the decree could only restore to the rightful owner land of which he had been deprived in the execution proceedings in excess of that decreed, and that where damages had resulted from acts done under cover of the execution proceedings, either by the decree-holder, or at his instigation or suggestion, a separate suit for the recovery of such damages lies against the decree-holder.

The question of an assessment of damages for injury arising from the fact that execution was taken out in excess of the relief granted under the decree, is not one relating to the "execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree" itself but is one outside the decree. (3) Pre-emption suit—Execution Order allowing mesne profits to pre-emptor.

When a decree for possession of land is passed in a suit for pre-emption, a question, whether mesne profits should be allowed to the plaintiff for the period between the institution of his suit and the final decree on appeal is not "relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree" as used in S. 47; nor does the case come under S 144. The question could be carried only by a separate suit. Chaudhri Hoa Rama v Rama Paliya. 44 P L R 1910.

(4) Question as to amount received under mortgage

368—C P C S. 47=S.244-Attempt to obtain redemption of a usufructuary mortgage by means of an application in execution

Certain mortgagees held a simple mortgage which was to become usufructuary for non-payment of the mortgage-debt by a certain date. The debt was not paid as stipulated and the mortgagees obtained a decree for possession until the usufruct satisfied the debt. Sometime after this, the mortgagors applied under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure for recovery of posseesion of the property, and for payment of a large sum of money alleged to have been realised by the mortgagees in excess of their due. Held the proper remedy was a suit for redemption and not an application under s. 244. (12 B H C 183, 12 B H C 160; 14 Bom 327 referred to.) Har Prasad v Sheo Ram 20 All 506, 18 W N 139.

369—C P C S. 47=S. 244—Usufructuary mortgage.

In a suit for possession under an usufructuary mortgage, plaintiff obtained a decree which was afterwards authoritatively interpreted to mean that he was to get possession of the property in order to repay himself out of the profits, keeping the usual accounts, and, after satisfaction of his claim, restore the property. Held that, under the terms of the decree, he was in effect required to certify, for the information both of the Court and of the judgment-debtors, the amounts received and outstanding; and that the Court executing the decree was bound to require from him, from time to time, a statement of the amount received and could deal with the matter under Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11. Golam Russool Khan v Kishen Mohun Shaha. 23 W R 156.

(5) Mode of redeeming mortgaged lands in execution of former decree.

A mortgagee was put into possession of the mortgaged property, under a decree obtained by him against the mortgagor, to the effect that the mortgagee should remain in possession until the mortgage debt was paid. The mortgagor subsequently paid into Court the money due under the mortgage decree, and applied to be restored to the possession of the mortgaged property. Both the lower Courts granted the mortgagor's application. On special appeal——Held (following the decision of the Full Bench in 12 Bom 161) that such an application was not the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the property and to recover possession from the mortgagee, the previous decree for possession having

On a decree for sale in default of payment before a given date the mortgagor paid it after the date but the mortgagee did not apply for an order for sale. On the mortgagor's application for possession in the form of an execution petition possession was delivered to the mortgagor

Held that the decree for sale was final and subsequent proceedings were execution proceedings. Unless there is something in the decree to debar him from so doing, the judgment-debtor is entitled to stop execution by payment of the debt at any time after decree and before the execution sale is complete; the execution sale is not finally complete, until he had an opportunity of obtaining its decision under s. 310 A of Civil Procedure Code. The only penalty affixed to the default is the liability to have the property sold.

Even if that mortgagor be regarded as a decree-holder under sec. 2 Civil Procedure Code his default affects only his rights as such decree-holder but his rights as judgment-debtor are not affected. The mortgagor can get possession of property in execution proceedings. Held that the mortgagee after the decree for sale was entitled only to the Court rate of interest and not to the melvarm of the property as under the mortgage. Audipuranam Pillay v Gopalasawmy Mudally. 3 M L T 281=18 M L J 259=31 Mad 354.

arising in execution-Execution proceedings—Separate suit, not permissible.

There is no substantial distinction in regard to questions arising in execution between the position of legal representatives added as parties to the suit before decree and legal representatives brought in after decree under S. 234 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). All questions between them and the decree-holder relating to to execution must alike be disposed of under S. 244 of the Code.

Where the sons of deceased Hindu debtor are added as legal representatives in the course of a suit and before the decree is pronounced, it is open to them to dispute in execution proceedings the liability of the ancestral properties for the debt of their father on the ground that the debt was tainted with immorality or illegality. They cannot insist on the decree-holder resorting to a fresh suit to enforce their pious obligation as Hindu sons to satisfy the debt out of the ancestral properties, because the question having arisen in execution proceedings between the decree-holder and themselves as parties to the suit, separate suit is rendered inadmissible by the provisions of S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882.

398.—C P C S 47: S.52: O 21 r 41=(1882 Ss 244 252, 267.) Decree-Execution proceedings.

The plea should be raised in execution proceedings—Sale-Purchaser cannot be met with the plea in a separate suit.—

C sued M on a money bond. During the pendency of the suit, M having died, his widow R and his brother N were brought on the record as his legal representatives. The suit proceeded to a decree, which awarded the claim out of the property of M. Before, however, the decree was executed, both R and N died. C thereupon brought on the record the defendants as the legal representatives of M, and applied for execution of the decree by attachment and sale of the property in dispute. The defendants denied that they were legal representatives of M, and that they had any property of M which could be liable for the decree. The Court negatived the objections and sold the property which was purchased by the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued to recover possession from the defendants. The defendants contended that the property was joint family property of M and defendants and that at his death it survived to the defendants. The plaintiff contended that the defendants were debarred by S 244 of the Code of 1882 from asserting their title. The lower applellate Court disallowed the contention. On second appeal :—

Held, that, so far as the sale of the property by the Court at the decree-holder's instance as that of the deceased was concerned, the question was one relating to the execution of the decree arising between the decree-holder and the defendants as judgment-debtors under S 252 of the Code. It was, therefore, a question in relation to them falling within S 244 of the Code by reason of the explanation to S 647. The defendants, were, therefore, bound to object to the attachment and sale under that section, so far as the decree-holder's action was concerned.

(4) Queations relating to execution—Contd.

On further contention that, whatever might have been the result if the decree-holder had been a party to the suit, the dispute now was between the auction-purchaser, who was a stranger to the previous suit and the execution proceedings therein, and the defendant and that, therefore, S. 244 did not apply.

Held, negativing the contention, that, though an auction-purchaser at a Court-sale in execution of a decree was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, and though he was not representative of either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor for the purposes of S. 244. yet if the question raised by the judgment-debtor as to the legality of the Court-sale was virtually one between the parties to the suit, that is, between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, and if in the decision and result of that question the auction-purchaser was interested, the judgment-debtor should not be allowed to attack the sale in a suit, because he was precluded by S. 244 from raising the question by, or relying upon it as a defence in, any proceedings other than those under S. 244.

The test in all such cases is, whether the ground upon which the Court-sale is attacked as conferring no title upon the auction-purchaser, affects the parties to the suit, and could have as between them, been raised and determined under S 244, and whether the auction-purchaser though not a party in that suit, is a party interested in the result. (30) Preliminary objection to hearing of appeal—Right to begin—Interlocutory order in execution proceedings-Receiver—Appointment. effective.

401—C. P. C.—Ss.47, 51, O XL, r. 1—Decree preferred.—

It cannot be assumed that there is a right of appeal in every matter which comes under the consideration of a Judge; such right must be given by a statute or by some authority equivalent to a Statute; consequently, if the right of appeal is challenged, it is incumbent upon the appellant to establish the right to appeal. But unless the objection was obviously sound, the appellant could hardly be expected to answer by anticipation the grounds that might possibly be assigned by the respondent in supnort of the objection. The practice, therefore, usually followed in the Calcutta High Court, has been to require the respondent at the outset to indicate conclusively the grouud upon which his objection is based. (8 Bom 287, Not. Fol.). The expression "an order relating to execution of a decree" is comprehensive enough to include an order relating to the stay of execution thereof. (29 Bom 71 Expl.). An interlocutory order which does not conclusively determine the rights of the parties in controversy in the execution-proceedings is not a decree within the meaning of s. 47 read with s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. applying to execute the decree, the Court ordered that he might be allowed to do so if he fulfilled certain conditions at different stages of the proceedings. The Court determined various questions as to the character of the conditions to be imposed and called upon the decree-holder to comply with them. Before the time for compliance was over, the judgment-debtor appealed; Held, that the orders were interlocutory and were not orders determining a question relating to execution within the meaning of s. 47, S 51 of the Code is to be read with r. II of O. XXI and r. 1 of O XL. When a Court appoints a Receiver for purposes of execution of a decree, the order is one under r. 1 of O XL read with s. 51. If a Receiver is appointed without any direction given as to security, the order takes effect at once, and he is validly in possession though no security has been given. If the appointment is conditional upon the furnishing of security, the giving of security is a condition precedent, and there is no effective appointment till security has been given. Upon an appeal preferred under cl. (s) of r. 1 of O XLIII, the Court is bound to consider not only whether a Receiver should have been appointed, but also, whether a suitable person has been selected. No appeal lies till a final order for the appointment of a Receiver has been made. Srinivas Prosad Singh v Kesho Prosad Singh. 14 C L J 489.

The decree-holder by mistake paid into Court only Rs. 2,000 by the 28th June, and on the 1st July the vendee submitted an application urging that the decree had become void in consequence of the failure of the decree-holder to pay in the whole amount specified in the decree. This application having been rejected, the judgment-debtor (vendee) appealed to the Divisional Judge but his appeal was dismissed on the ground that no appeal lay.

Held, that the question whether the purchase-money had been deposited in time was one arising between the parties to the suit, in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution thereof within the meaning of Section 244 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held, therefore, that an appeal lay to the Divisional Judge from the order rejecting the application. Saghar Mal v Hyat. 38 P R of 1898.

405—S. 47 of 1908=1882 S. 244 — Decree incapable of execution by reason of events subsequent to decree—Decree giving an option to the parties.—

A partition suit brought by a son against his father was referred to arbitration. On the 9th January 1890, the award was published, and, on the 27th March 1890, the defendants moved for and obtained a decree in terms of the award. By this decree it was ordered that, in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, the defendant should pay to him Rs. 1,05,000 in the manner therein stated viz, Rs. 40,000 to be paid forthwith, and the balance of Rs.65,000 to be paid "upon that plaintiff delivering to the defendant certain specified property, which included two vessels or buglows, called respectively the Nasri and Sambuk". In no event was defendant to be required to pay the Rs. 65,000 before the 15th November 1890. At the date of the decree the vessel Sambuk was at sea on a voyage, and, on the 18th June 1890, while still on the voyage, she was lost. On the 15th November 1890, the plaintiff's attorneys demanded payment of the balance of Rs. 65,000. They offered to deliver the other properties specified in the decree, but stated that the vessel Sambuk had been lost. They offered to pay its value, which they estimated at Rs. 1,000. The defendants, however, demanded the delivery of the buglow, which they stated to be worth a very large sum. The defendant having, under the circumstances, refused to pay the Rs. 65.000, the plaintiff applied for execution of the decree, which was refused. He then obtained a rule calling on the defendant to show cause why the decree of the 27th March should not be amended or rectified by stating therein the amount of money to be paid to the defendant as an alternative, if delivery of the vessel Sambuk could not be made, such delivery having become impossible. That rule was discharged. The plaintiffs then took out a summons calling on the defendant to show cause why an order should be made, under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, directing the plaintiffs to pay to the first defendant, in lieu of the delivery of the vessel Sambuk, such sum of money as might be fixed by the Court as the value of or compensation for the loss of the vessel Sambuk in the decree mentioned, and why an order should not be made that on payment of such sum and delivery of the other properties mentioned in the decree which the plaintiffs were to deliver under the decree to the first defendant on payment by the latter to them of Rs.65,000 the first defendant should pay to the plaintiffs Rs,65000 and interest thereon from the 5th day of November 1890, mentioned in the said decree, and, in the event on its being held that the first defendant was not bound to pay the said sum of Rs,65,000, then why an order should not be made that the property mentioned in the decree which the plaintiffs were to hand over to the first defendant on payment of Rs,65,000 should not be retained, used, and appropriated, absolutely by the plaintiffs for their own use and benefit, freed and discharged of all claims on the part of the first defendant, and why the first defendant should not be directed to withdraw the claim made by him to a debt of Rs,22,000, or thereabouts, mentoined in an affidavit of one Ahmed bin Essa Khaliffa, and why such further or other order as to the Court might seem fit and the justice of the case may require should not be made in the premises and in relation to the properties mentioned in the decree which were to be delivered over by the plaintiffs to the first defendant on receiving from him Rs,65,000, and why in the alternative this suit should not be restored and placed on the board for trial. It was contended by the plaintiff that the questions raised in the summons were questions arising in execution to be dealt with by a Judge in chambers under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that a fresh suit was not necessary. Held, dismissing the summons, that the application was not one in execution of a decree, nor was the question one arising in the course of execution, but that the decree having become incapable of execution, the summons asked the Judge to decide what were the rights of the parties in consequence of its non-execution. Held, also (as to the part of the summons asking for restoration of the suit), that the matters in issue in the suit had been fully heard and determined, and the rights of all parties had been settled by the decree, and consequently there was nothing further to be tried. The Court could not in this suit, after passing a decree, proceed to ascertain the rights of the parties under a state of facts quite different from those which appeared in the pleadings and arising subsquently to the decree. Ahmed bin Shaik Essa Khaliffa v Essa bin Khaliffa. 18 Bom. 495.

(4) Questions relating to execution—Contd.

406—C P C S. 47=S. 244 of 1882—Objection by representative of party to the suit to the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree.

S. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure applies as well to a dispute arising between the parties contemplated by that section in relating to the execution of a decree after it has been executed, as it would to a dispute between such parties relating to the execution of adecree before it had been executed. It is competent to the Court charged with the execution of a decree to consider the question as to whether the Court which passed the decree had jurisdiction to pass it, unless the decree itself precludes that question. (32) Claim to attached property, 407—C P C S. 47 of 1908=S. 244—Questions to be decided in execution—Property liable to be sold therein.

The question whether certain property is liable to be sold in execution of a decree can be decided under s. 244 of C P Code. (11 B L R 149 18 W R 185, followed in principle). Mungeshur Kuar v Jumoona Pershad. 16 Cal 603.

(33) Party attached in execution after satisfaction of decree from other sources.

408—C P C S. 47=S. 244—Separate suit.

An elephant having been attached in execution, it was released on the claim of one P, upon S standing surety. It was finally declared to be the property of the judgment-debtor; but the decree having been satisfied from other sources, it was ordered that the elephant be returned to the judgment-debtors. It was then demanded from the surety; but he objecting, the claimant (P) was served with notice to produce it. This not having been done within the period fixed, the Munsif ordered that it should be demanded from the surety, and (on his failure to produce its stipulated price) should be realized by attachment;

(34) Question as to legality of purcharse by judgment-debtors of right of some of decree-holders.

Held that disputes as to the legality of the purchase by judgment-debtors of the rights of some of the decree-holders in the property to which the decree relates and the extent of the share acquired under the purchase are questions falling within the purview of section 244, clause (c), and must be determined by order of the Court executing the decree. 410--S. 47 of 1908=S. 244 of 1882—Separate suit—Limitation.

In execution of a decree, the property of the judgment-debtor was sold, and on an account being taken, a certain sum therein appearing to be due was paid in December 1868 to the decree-holders. Subsequently, on the application of the judgment-debtor, the account was re-opened, and had been overdrawn by the decree-holders. In 1876 the judgment-debtor applied to the Court which executed the decree for an order for the repayment of the amount over-drawn. Held that while the application was not barred by any provisions of the Limitation Act, IX of 1871, the English doctrine of laches did not apply in this country; and, further, that the application had been presented in the proper Court, as required by s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 (corresponding with s. 244 of Act X of 1877). Allij Hossein v Muzhur Hossein. 4 C L R 577.

(35) Objection to claim to portion of the land.

411—C P C S. 47=S. 244—Decree altering possession of land.

Where a decree directed certain land to be taken from first defendant and put into plaintiff's possession for a term, and a claim was put in by second defendant's assignees to part of the land,—Held that an objection by first defendant to the claim was a matter to be determined in execution proceedings, and not by separate suit. Rahiman Khan Samoji Sahib v Patcha Miyah 4 Mad 285

(36) Alleged fraudulent execution of decree.

412—C P C S. 47=S. 244—Separate suit.

Certain property in the 24-Pergunnahs having been seized and sold in execution of a decree of the High Court, application was successfully made to the District Judge to set aside the proceedings, on the ground that the execution was fraudulent and not warranted by the decree. Held that the Judge had no right to entertain such an application, or to re-open, at the instance of a third party, execution proceedings which had come to an end. The question could only be determined in a regular suit. Luchmeeput Singh v Adoyto Churn Mullick. 24 W R 452

413—C P C S. 47=S. 244—Suit for setting aside sale—Fraud—Sale under Act (X of 1859)—Act (XXIII of 1861) s. 11.

A landlord obtained an ex-parte decree for arrears of rent and in execution of that decree the tenure was sold. The tenant then brought a suit against both the landlord and the purchaser for setting aside the sale on the ground that the decree and the execution proceedings were fraudulent and that the purchaser was only a benamidar for the landlord. The defendant contended that the suit would not lie, the questions being such as could be determined and were actually determined by the Court executing the decree.—Held that neither s. 244 of the C P Code nor s. 11 of act XXIII of 1861 applies to proceedings in execution of a decree obtained under act (X of 1859) and that the suit being one to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud was maintainable. 414—C P C S. 47 1908=1882 S. 244—Application for further execution by taking an account.

An application to the Court passing a decree for possession in favour of the heirs of a mortgagee for further execution thereof, by taking an account is not the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the mortgaged lands and to recover possession thereof. The proper course for a mortgagor who seeks for an account and redemption or for redemption alone, is to bring an independent suit for that purpose.(2 Bom 371, overruled.) Ravji Shivram Joshi v Kaluram. 12 Bom H C R 160.

(37) Question after Court has executed decree and become functus officio—Review.

Pending the execution proceedings a judgment-debtor was permitted to examine the accounts, but failed to do it and then after the proceedings were struck off and the decree declared to be satisfied, he made a new application for a permission to examine the accounts. Held—the question must be determined according to s. 647 C P Code and the only remedy of the judgment-debtor is by a review of the order which struck off the proceedings and declared the decree satisfied. The words the 'following question shall be determined by order of the Court executing the decree' of s. 244 mean the Court executing the decree at the time when the application is made and that those words do not include the Court which had executed the decree and has become functus officio. Fakaruddin Mahomed Ahsan v Official Trustee of Bengal. 10 Cal 538.

Where it is contended that the decree that has been executed is not the decree that was passed between the parties, but a decree modified by a subsequent decretal order, s. 11. (39) Question raised for first time in execution.

Held that a question raised for the first time between the parties to a decree at the time of its execution, although not expressly reserved in that decree for determination at the time of its execution, may be enquired into and determined by the Court executing the deree under s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. Janoji Banaji v Vyankatesh Shrinivas. 2 Bom H C R 393: 2nd Ed 371.

420—C P C S.47 of 1908=S.244—Representatives of judgment-debtors—Question of liability of property to be sold.

Held that the question whether a person alleged to be a representative of a deceased party to a suit is such representative, and also the question whether property against which execution is sought in the hands of the representative of a deceased party was in fact the property of such deceased party and not the separate property of the representative, are questions to be decided under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure and not by separate suit. 421—Questions relating to execution—Representative—K and M were undivided Hindu brothers.

A suit was brought against K and decree for costs was made against him. K having died after decree, K's sons were brought on the record for him in execution of the same. Certain property was attached and the sons objected that the attached property was the self-acquired property of their uncle M who died after K and that they had inherited no property from K. Their objections became successful. The transferee of the decree brought against the sons of K to establish his right to proceed against the property in question.

Held—the question of the liability of the property to be taken in execution in the hands of the defendant was a question arising between the parties to the suit or their representatives, and relating to the execution &c. of the decree within the meaning of s. 244 and that the suit was not maintainable. A judgment-debtor sued the decree-holder for recovery of possession of certain land which had been sold in execution of the decree and to set aside the sale, on the ground that the land was not liable, under s. 9 of the N W P Rent Act to sale in execution of decree. Held that the question at issue between the parties was clearly one relating to the execution and satisfaction of the decree, and that the suit was therefore barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Janki Singh v Ablak Singh. 6 All 393.

A Court which is competent to execute a mortgage decree is not only competent but it is also its duty to determine how much is due and realisable under the decree at the time when execution is sought; and as such it can enquire into the matter of an adjustment between the parties after the order absolute for sale.

The powers of the Court which are called upon to execute a mortgage decree are not confined within the four corners of the rules framed under Sec. 104 of the Transfer of Property Act. Sec. 104 is an enabling section and the rules made by the High Court under the provisions of that section, do not limit the applicability of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as regards sales held in execution of mortgage decrees. Harish Chandra v Jagabandhu. 3 M L T 202=12 C W N 282=7 C L J 581.

A contract made between the parties to a suit in derogation of a decree which may be passed in future cannot form the subject of an enquiry under S. 244, C P C, in a proceeding for the execution of the decree; an agreement not to execute a decree, if effect is sought to be given to it in execution proceedings, must be a transaction between the parties, subsequent to the decree. Questions under S. 244 (c) relating to the execution of a decree and arising between the parties to a suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives must be such as have reference to matters arising subsequent to the passing of the decree and not antecedent to it. Chhoti Narain Singh v Musstt Rameshwar Koer. 6 C W N 796.

If the vendor agreed that he would repay the plaintiff profits which he must collect either himself or by his agent or by another person on his behalf, a suit to recover from the defendant by way of mesne profits the amount payable to him is not for recovery of the profits of immoveable property wrongfully received by the defendant and is not barred by Art 31 of the Provincial Small Cause Court Act, from the cognizance of the Small Cause Court.

Held (Per Miller, J.)—The purchase being effected in contravention of the provisions of S. 294 the sale was voidable on the application of any person interested in it and confirmation of the sale does not affect the case.

It is not the duty of the Court knowingly to accept the position of an instrument of fraud and that too when the fraud has been practised upon itself or upon another Court.

Per Sankaran Nair, J. the provisions of Section 294 of the Code of Civil Procedure which is enacted in the interests of the judgment-debtor and other persons interested in property, precluded the plaintiff from purchasing the property in the name of another.

Per Abdur Rahim. J.—The sale not having been set aside under Section 294, the plaintiffs are entitled to recover possession of the property.

A party relying upon a fraud either as the basis of his action or as defence to a suit must plead it in distinct terms so that the party whose act is impeached as fraudulent may have full notice of the charge he has to meet.

The restriction imposed on a decree-holder buying the property of the judgment-debtor in execution of his decree is the creation of a statute and when that same statute has provided a penalty for the violation of such restriction, the penalty should be regarded as co-extensive with the disobedience of the restriction, the Court cannot attach, to the disregard of a rule like this, consequences other than that contemplated by the Legislature, by converting such disregard into fraud; it should, without being hasty in inferring fraud, strictly and narrowly construe all charges of fraud.

The pharse "abuse of process of the Court" is generally used in connection with actions for using some process of the Court such as a writ of attachment taken out maliciously to the injury of another person. (12) Sale setting aside for fraud—Auction-purchaser & decree-holder-Parties.

A judgment-debtor is entitled by an application under sec. 244 C P C to have an execution sale of his properties set aside if he alleges and proves fraud on the part of the decree-holder though no fraud is alleged or proved against the auction-purchaser who is a stranger to the suit. (19 Cal 683=2 C W N 691=3 C W N 403=4 C W N 541 foll).

When during the pendency of an application under sec. 244 C P C to set aside an execution sale, the sale is confirmed, such confirmation is no bar to the maintenance of the application even though the auction purchaser is a stranger to the suit. (13) Sale in execution, the judgment-debtor being ignorant of the execution proceedings through the fraud of the decree-holder—Setting aside proceedings in execution.

In 1879 D obtained a decree against S. S gave security for the satisfaction of the decree, whereupon D agreed not to take proceedings in execution. In breach of this agreement, D in the same year applied for execution, and sold certain immoveable property belonging to S, of which K became the purchaser. K did not apply for possession until 1883, in which year he applied for and obtained possession of the property. S alleged that he then for the first time became aware of the sale, and that by the fraud of L and K he had been kept in ignorance of the execution proceedings taken by D in breach of the above-mentioned agreement, and within thirty days after K obtained possession, he (S) applied for a reversal of the orders which had been passed in the aforesaid fraudulent proceedings. The Subordinate Judge held that the application was barred, and referred the applicant to a separate Sale in execution of a decree-Possession given to purchaser who was the decree-holder—Satisfaction of decree and restoration of property to mortgagor—Remedy for recovery of mesne profits and interest—Application in execution proceedings—Separate suit—Right of purchaser to interest on purchase money.

Under mortgage decree obtained by the appellant against the respondents the mortgaged property was, in February 1901 put up for sale in default of payment and purchased by the decree-holder who had obtained leave to bid. The purchase money was not paid but was set off by the appellant against the amount due under the decree, which gave no future interest. Possession was given to the appellant in December 1901. In September 1903 the sale was set aside for irregularity and in March 1904 the respondents paid the appellant the amount due under the decree and possession of the property was restored to them. Held—(affirming the decisions of the Courts in India) that the respondents were entitled by Ss. 583 and 244 of Civil Procedure to recover mesne profits and interest thereon in the execution proceedings and were not obliged to have recourse to separate suit, for Lordships would not at this stage of the proceedings have been disposed to permit. Held, also, that the appellant was not entitled to interest on his purchase money which had not been actually paid, but was set off against what had not been actually paid, but was set off against what was due on the decree. The sale was set aside for his fault and it was out of the question that he should be allowed to make a profit at the expense of the respondents out of his own error, and so in effect recover interest not allowed him by the decree. Prag Narain v Kamakhia Singh. 31 All 551.

Suit brought to recover the amount to which plaintiff was entitled under a decree passed in favour of himself and defendant as co-plaintiffs in a former suit. It appeared that defendant purchased the property sold in execution of the decree and that the price for which the sale took place was sufficient to satisfy the decree. Instead of paying the purchase money into Court, defendant with the knowledge and assent of plaintiff, retained the whole sum upon the understanding that he should give the Court a receipt for himself and on behalf of plaintiff and afterwards pay to plaintiff his portion of the amount decreed. Accordingly defendant presented a petition to that effect and obtained a certificate confirming the sale. Defendant having failed to pay plaintiff his portion the present suit was brought. Upon these facts it was held in special appeal that the decree was satisfied by sale of the judgment debtor's property and that the execution proceedings were completely at an end the defendant having been

In a suit for redemption of a mortgage a decree was passed for possession by redemption on the plaintiff paying the sum of Rs 43,625-7-0 the amount of the mortgag-debt. Prior to the institution of the suit, the defendant had taken proceedings in the Judge's Court to foreclose the mortgage, and the plaintiff paid the above mentioned sum into that Court for the defendant, who took it. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from the decree directing him to pay Rs 43,625-7-0 as the mortgage debt, and obtained a decree by which the decree of the first Court was modified, and the amount payable on redemption was reduced to Rs. 22,155. The plaintiff then took out execution of the decree to recover from the defendant the difference between the two sums with interest. Held that the effect of the Appellate Court's decree was to direct restitution of any sum paid under the first Court's decree which was disallowed by the Appellate Court's decree and that the question was clearly one for determination by the Court executing the decree, and not by separate suit, being expressly provided for by s. 583 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that the decree-holder was entitled to restitution of the amount with interest. An objection by a judgment-debtor to a sale in execution of a decree on the ground that the property which was the subject of sale was not legally saleable, is not a matter which can be entertained by the Court under S. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure so as to afford a ground for setting aside the sale on account of material irregularity in publishing or conducting it. (6 All 448 and 6 All 393 distinguished).

Per Mahmood J.—The scope of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure is limited to matters connected with the execution of the decree between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor and covers all the questions which may arise between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor relating to the execution etc., of the decree. Questions that may arise after the sale are not, strictly speaking, questions relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of clause (3), s. 244 ; but, as soon as there has been a sale, the execution of the decree so far as the decree-holder is concerned, is over and the question whether the purchaser has purchased anything by the sale is not a question as to the execution of the decree holder's decree.

Also per Mahmood, J , the expression "conducting the sale" as used in s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not include any proceedings unconnected with the actual carrying out of the sale, but refers to the action of the officer who makes the sale, and not to anything done antecedent to the order of sale (L. The question whether the lands in dispute were covered by the decree was a question which arose between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed and which related to the execution of the decree. Such question must be determined by the Court executing the decree and could not be the subject of a separate suit. (12 Bom 449, 5 M H C 185, 14 W R 39, Fol.)

A decree having been passed awarding to a plaintiff in a suit a moiety of certain jewels which were stored in family boxes in the possession of the defendant, the boxes containing the jewels were taken possession of by an officer of the District Court, and a division was effected by a Commissioner appointed for that purpose by that Court. After the division, certain jewels remained, which had been set aside by the Commissioner as not forming part of the subject-matter of the decree, and these continued in the custody of the District Court. The defendant thereupon presented a petition to the District Court praying that the jewels so remaining undivided might be returned to him. Plaintiff resisted the application,but both parties agreed that the said remaining jewels were not part of the subject-matter of the suit, and were not dealt with by the decree. The petition was dismissed, whereupon the petitioner appealed. On objection being taken that no appeal lay against the order of dismissal on the ground that, since the jewels in question were not part of the subject-matter of the suit and were not dealt with in the decree, the question was not one relating to the execution of a decree and was not governed by S.244 of the Code of Civil Procedure-Held that the question as to what should be done with the boxes and their contents arose between the parties to the suit, and related to the execution of the decree; that the order was passed under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and that consequently an appeal lay. (49) Question in execution decree as to whether money paid in time.

The plaintiff in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption obtained a decree to the effect mentioned in section 214. On payment by him of the purchase-money into Court, the defendants objected, in the execution department, to such payment on the ground that it had been made within time. The Court which made the decree disallowed the objection. The defendants appealed from the order disallowing the objection. They had previously appealed from the decree. The appellate Court heard both appeals together, and holding that the purchase-money had not been paid into Court within time, reversed the decree, and allowed the objection. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court from the appellate Court's decree, which was admitted. He also preferred an appeal from the appellate order allowing the objection, but this appeal was rejected as being beyond time, and such order became final.

Held, that, inasmuch as the question whether the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money into Court within time was not one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 214 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but was one which should be decided in the suit itself and therefore the proceedings in the execution department touching that question were ill-founded, such order was not a bar to the hearing of the second appeal preferred by the plaintiff.

A and B, who were joint owners of some property together, mortgaged it to C. C then sued on the mortgage and got a decree against them both. After decree A sold away his share of the property to B in consideration of the latter undertaking to pay the whole of the decree amount and executing to him a simple mortgage on the share so sold for the balance of the sale amount. Subsequent to this arrangement, C executed his decree and purchased the entire property himself in execution. B then applied to the Court to have the sale set aside under S. 310 (A), C P C.

Held: that as B's mortgage would be affected by the sale, he was a person whose immoveable property had been sold within the meaning of S. 310 (A), C P C and that consequently, he was entitled to the benefit of that section, and that as the purchaser was the decree-holder himself and the matter was done arising in execution the order passed between him and another party to the suit under S. 310 (A) was appealable. decree was made, under Section 231 of the Civil Procedure Code, by one of four joint decree-holders, but was dismissed by the District Judge on the ground that the decree could not be executed until all the decree holders joined in the application. It appeared that the judgment-debtor was not summoned to defend the application, but on appeal from the District Judge's order he was impleaded as well as the other co-decree-holders. The Divisional Judge ordered that the execution should proceed on the applicant joining with him such of his co-sharers as were willing to execute the decree jointly with him, and impleading the rest who objected and declined to take out execution, and that the Court should take possession of the entire land decreed, and separate off the shares of applicants from those of the others through the agency of the Collector. The judgment-debtor appealed to the Chief Court and it was contended on his behalf that the order of the District Judge under Section 231 of the Code was not appealable, and that, therefore, the order of the Divisional Judge was without jurisdiction and void.

Held, following 17 Mad., 394, that the Divisional Judge had jurisdiction to hear the appeal.

Although, if an application under Section 231 of the Code is dismissed without summoning the judgment-debtor or issuing process, and the latter is not made a party to the appeal the question may be one beyond the province of the Appellate Court to adjudicate upon, yet if, as in the present case, the judgment-debtor is impleaded on the appeal, the question then becomes one under Section 244 of the Code and an appeal lies.

The present petitioner purchased a holding under a money-decree. Two years later, the same holding was sold in execution of a rent decree and purchased for Rs 25 by the decree holder thereof. Thereupon an order was made by the Munsiff, upon an application by the petitioner under the conjoint effect of ss 311 and 244 of the Code, setting aside the second sale. stating that the petitioner had no locus standi. Held, the effect of the order of the Munsiff was practically to hold that the second purchaser had no title to the land, and the order certainly decided a question relating to title to the land or to some interest in the land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto. Here the parties had conflicting claims thereto. An appeal, therefore, did lie to the Additional District Judge, under s. 153 of the Tenancy Act, and, consequently, he was not acting without jurisdiction, when he made his order. (28 Cal 116 Dist). As to the second point:—What the Additional District Judge meant by stating that the petitioner had no locus standi was that the petitioner was not a representative of any of the parties within the meaning of s 244. XXI, r 55 of the Code of 1908, money sufficient to satisfy in full the decretal claims of the two attaching creditors. On an ex-parte application made to it, the Court ordered rateable distribution of the monies so paid into Court and sale of further properties which had been attached towards further satisfaction of the claims of the judgment-creditors. Against this order the judgment-debtor appealed to the District Court. During the pendency of the appeal, the other properties were sold in execution in January 1910, and the sale was, notwithstanding the judgment-debtor's objections, confirmed. The judgment-debtor appealed to the District Judge who dismissed the appeal on the 30th June 1910. In June 1911, the first appeal by the judgment-debtor came on before the District Court, but as the question of the confirmation of the sale had already been decided by that Court against the judgment-debtor, no further proceedings were taken. On appeal:

Held, (1) that the order dated the 20th June 1910, having been a question in execution between the parties to decrees, fell under the provisions of S. 47 of the Code of 1908, and was appealable.

549.—C P C S. 47 O 21 r 90 C P C (Act XIV of 1882), Ss. 244, 311—Limitation Act s 18.

A mortgagor whose property has been sold under a decree absolute on the mortgage may come in and question the validity of the sale, although his right to redeem may have been long since extinguished by the decree and a person to whom he has transferred his interest may also do the same.

Ordinarily the provisions of s 311 C P C can be availed of any when the sale has not been confirmed and within the period of thirty days from the date of sale, but if the right of the applicant to apply under the section was concealed from him by fraud, he would by operation of s. 18 of the Limitation Act and notwithstanding the confirmation of the sale have thirty days within which to make his application from the date on which the fraud first became known to him.

N. and M. executed a mortgage bond to the respondents whereby the former as one of several co-sharers in certain parcels of land mortgaged her undivided share in the same to secure the re-payment of the loan, her co-obligor M, joining in the bonds as personal security, subsequently by an ekrar the co-sharers partitioned the property, and the appellant who was one of the co-sharers became exclusively entitled to a large number of the parcels affected by the mortgage. In a suit upon the mortgage in which the co-sharers including the appellant were all made parties. Defendants on the allegation that the division made upon the ekrar was not valid, no relief was asked for specifically in respect of the ekrar the mortgagee prayed for a decree for the amount claimed for a declaration that the properties were liable for the amount decreed and for realisation of the decretal amount by sale of mortgaged properties as well as from the mortgagors personally, the co sharers defendants did not defend the suit which was decreed in terms of the prayers.

Held that the appellant (Defendant No 5) by failing to contest the suit did not lose his conclusive interest in the properties which resulted from the partition but he took the parties allotted exclusively to him subject to the extent of the interest previously belonging to the mortgagor, to the mortgagee.

That the effect of the partition was to extinguish as between the mortgagor and the appellant the interest of the former in the property allotted to the latter to vest it in the appellant, so that the position of the appellant before a close and-logy to that of a purchaser of the equity of redemption in the mortgaged property.

That the fact of the Defendant No 5 (the Appellant) not being made a party to the proceedings in execution had not the effect of making the sale nullity.

That although the sale was not a nullity, it was liable to be set aside on a proper application made in the manner prescribed by law.

It was argued that section 287 applied to incumbrances put forward by third parties and not to a mortgage bond on which was passed the decree, the execution of which is being sought and that therefore the order must be taken to fall under section 244 and thus open to appeal.

The delivery of formal possession in execution of a decree for possession gives a cause of action against a person in actual occupation of the property. His occupation in spite of the execution is that of a trespasser who commits a fresh act of dispossession, and a separate suit therefore lies for recovery of possession from him. A question was raised whether it was open to a defendant, who had contested a suit for possession on the ground of limitation in the lower Courts, could raise the contention for the first time in second appeal that the suit was barred under s. 244, Civ Pro Code. (2)—Decree for delivery of possession of equity of redemption—Wrongful delivery of land—Suit by mortgagee for restitution of land so delivered.

574.—C P C S. 47=S.244-Wrongful delivery of land instead of equity of redemption—Application of S. 244.

S. 244 bars a regular suit where the question relating to execution of a decree is raised bona fide. But when the decree itself is. on the face of it wholly irrelevant to the question raised, and the wrong-doer takes the plea of bar to shield his unlawful gain secured even against the express orders of the executing Court possibly in collusion with the officer executing the decree, and in the absence of the judgment-debtors, S. 244 would seem to have no application. So, where a person sued to enforce his right of pre-emption, in a property subject to mortgage, and got a decree directing delivery of possession of the equity of redemption therein, but in execution of the decree, the Patwari delivered possession of the property itself, instead of the equity of redemption, a regular suit by the mortgagee, claiming restitution of the property so wrongfully delivered cannot be said to be barred by S. 244, as the question raised in the suit does not relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Even if there were any room for doubt on this point the plaint may be treated as an application for execution of decree for claiming restitution of lands wrongfully delivered by the Patwari in executing the decree. S. 583 C P C only applies to a case where a party is entitled to a benefit by way of restitution or otherwise under a decree passed in appeal.

K obtained an ex-parte decree for sale on foot of a mortgage. The property mortgaged was sold in execution of that decree, and purchased by the decree-holder who obtained possession. The ex-parte decree was subsequently set aside and another decree was satisfied before the property could be sold a second time. K, however, continued in possession and this suit was brought to recover possession from him. The Court below dismissed the suit on the ground, that it was barred by ss. 244 and 583 of the Code. Held that s. 583 did not bar the suit. Held, further, that s. 244 has no application inasmuch as the decree had been satisfied and the defendant had no interest left in the property and the question was not one as to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Gridhari Lal v Khushali Ram 6 A L J 383=31 All 364=1 Ind Cas 744.

There are at least three tests for determining whether a particular provision is applicable, and if so, how far; first, such provisions only are applicable as apply to the enforcement and execution of the certificate as a decree for money, an application to set aside a sale is neither the enforcement nor the execution of the certificate; secondly, the provision sought to be applied must not contain any restriction which makes it inapplicable; thirdly, the provision must not be inconsistent with the provisions of the Public Demands Recovery Act. (30) Party against whom no decree was passed not precluded from bringing a suit

607.—C P C—S. 47=(1882—S. 244)—No bar—Exonerated defendant—Party to suit in which the decree was passed.—

S. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure presupposes a decree enforceable by the decree-holder against the person between whom and the decree-holder the question referred to therein arises. It has no application to questions arising between the decree-holder and persons against whom there is no decree to be executed. Where, therefore, certain persons had intervened in a suit as defendants and the suit was disposed of without any decision of the claim set up by them and without any decree being passed affecting them, it was held that they (or their assignees) were not precluded from bringing a suit to have released from attachment the property claimed by them in the former suit, but as to their title to which there had been no adjudication. On the sale being set aside, the judgment debtor's representatives in title (respondents) paid the decree-holder decretal amount and possession of the property was restored to them. On appeal by P, the Court of second appeal reversed this decree, and restored the decree of the first Court dismissing the suit as regards P. 645—C P C S. 47 of 1908=O.XXI, r. 15 [=Civ. Pro Code 1882, .244 and 231.]—

In a suit on a mortgage bond executed in favour of the plaintiff and sixth defendant, a decree was passed for a moiety of the mortgage amount in favour of sixth defendant. The plaintiff in execution of his half-share brought the mortgaged property to sale. Then the sixth defendant applied that it should again be sold for his half-share, but was informed, it could not be sold twice over. Thereupon, he applied for payment to him of half the sale proceeds. Held that his remedy lay by a separate suit and not in execution proceedings, inasmuch as the decree had not been passed jointly in favour of plaintiff and sixth defendant within the meaning of s. 231, Civil Pro. A decree was given to the defendants (then plaintiffs) in 1856 for possession of land and mesne profits against numerous defendants, including A. Some of them including A appealed to the Sardar Dewani Adalat, but A died before the decree of the latter Court. His representatives were not brought on the record; but in (1881) (the amount of the mesne profits having been determined in 1877) certain persons were made parties, as representatives of A to various proceedings in execution of the decree for mesne profits which ended in the sale of certain property which had been A's. Subsequently these representatives sued to recover the property sold on the ground that they were no parties to the decree under execution. Held that the suit was not barred. (13 All 53 P C) referred to. Held also that as it had not been shown that by reason of the plaintiff not objecting that they had been improperly brought on the record of the execution proceedings, the defendant had induced to accept a less favourable arrangement for the satisfaction of the decree than he might otherwise have done, there was no estoppel against the plaintiffs.

660—C P C S. 47=S. 244 Civil Procedure Code-Obligation of a son to pay debt of deceased father-Nature of that obligation.

The question is whether a son's pious obligation under the Hindu Law to pay debt of his father out of his share in the ancestral property is a matter which relates to the execution of a decree passed against his father who died afterwards but before execution, within the meaning of s 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, it is an obligation distinct from that created by the decree which was passed against the father that if the decreed debt was either illegal or immoral, the sons would be under no obligation to satisfy it, though the decree against the father might be perfectly rated and that the questions contemplated by S. 244 are those which relate to the enforcement of the obligation created by the decree. It is one thing to execute a decree as it is, and another to add to the obligation created by it so as to extend its scope.

Such an obligation must be decided by a separate suit and S. 244 would not be a bar to it. Aribudra v Dorasami. 11 Mad 413.

The interest of the father in a Mitakshara family in the ancestral properties is not asset in the hands of the son when he dies, and consequently proceedings cannot be taken against the son as the legal representative of the father under s. 234, Civ Pro Code. If after the death of the father in a Mitakshara family against whom alone a personal decree was passed, the creditor wishes to proceed against the son, it must be not because he is the heir or the legal representative, but upon the ground of his obligation to pay his father's debts; and whether having regard to the character of the debt, the obligation can be enforced against the son, cannot be determined in a proceeding either under s. 254 or s. 244, Civ. M, who held a decree against S. for possession of certain immoveable property and costs, assigned such decree to S by way of sale, agreeing to deliver the same to him on payment of the balance of the purchase-money. He subsequently applied for execution of the decree against S, claiming the costs which it awarded. S thereupon paid the amount of such costs into Court, and, having obtained stay of execution, sued M for such decree, claiming by virtue of such assignment. The lower Court held that the suit was barred by the provisions of s. 244 of Act X of 1877, and also, treating such assignment as an uncertified adjustment of such decree, that it was barred by the terms of the last paragraph

A suit will not lie to enforce an uncertified agreement of adjustment of a decree against a judgment-debtor, the consideration for which is that it shall operate in satisfaction of the decree, as there is in that case no consideration which the Court can recognize, and therefore no valid consideration for the judgment debtor's agreement. The plaintiff was the assignee of a decree obtained by one O K against the defendants on the 5th May 1883. By that decree O K was declared entitled to recover Rs 9,961-5-6, with interest at nine per cent from the defendants; and payment was ordered to be made to him of the said sum by weekly instalments of Rs 200. In order to secure the payment of the said instalments, the defendants were required to execute a mortgage to O K of certain property with power to him to sell the same, and to execute the decree for the whole amount in case of default for six months. O K assigned the decree to the plaintiff in the present suit and subsequently to the assignment (viz, on the 21st July 1883) the defendants executed to the plaintiff the mortgage on which the present suit was brought. The mortgage deed, after reciting the above facts, stated that the defendants had agreed to satisfy the amount of the decree, and it contained a covenant by the defendants that they would pay Rs 9,961-5-6 with interest at six per cent by monthly instalments of R400 from the 21st August 1883. The mortgage, therefore differed from the decree both with regard to the instalments and the rate of interest. The plaintiff sued to recover the sum of Rs 4,207, being the amount of instalments due to him under the said mortgage. Held that the suit would not lie, as the mortgage was an adjustment of the decree, and had not been certified to the Court, as required by s 258 of the C P C.

Mukund and Antaji were partners, and as such were indebted to Haridas. Antaji died, and subsequently the debt was settled between Haridas on one side and Mukund and Antaji's widow, as guardian of her minor sons, on the other. For a moiety of the debt a bond was passed by Mukund to Haridas and for the other moiety by the widow of Antaji. Haridas filed a suit against Mukund and got a decree, which was satisfied. Haridas then sued the widow on her bond. The Court allowed her objection that she was not competent to give a bond binding her sons personally and of its own accord made Mukund a defendant, and passed a decree against Mukund and Antaji's estate. Haridas assigned this decree to Ramchandra who applied for execution against Mukund. Mukund thereupon filed this suit against Haridas and Ramchandra praying for an injunction against the execution of the said decree and for damages against Haridas. He alleged that during the pendency of the suit in which the said decree had been passed, Haridas had agreed that he would not obtain a decree against him, and that, if such a decree were passed, he would not execute it. The Lower Appeal Court rejected the plaint holding (1) that as between the plaintiff Mukund and the defendant Ramchandra the question in issue was res judicata, and (2) that there was no cause of action against the defendant Haridas. chandra, the suit was not res judicata. The alleged agreement by its very terms provided for the event of the decree being passed, and was only intended to prevent its being executed. (11 Bom 708, distinguished.) It having been urged that the question was one which could be decided in execution, and that under Sec 244 of the Civil Procedure Code the present suit would not lie.

Held, that the words relating to execution in Sec 244 must be restricted to "the contents of the order made or to how far it has been carried out," and do not, therefore, include an agreement not to execute the decree. It being further contended that the agreement raised a question as to the "satisfaction" of the decree, and was, therefore, void without the sanction of the Court.

Held, that the satisfaction contemplated by Sec. 244 must have arisen out of some transaction between the parties subsequent to the decree.

Without sanction of Court such agreement is void and cannot be enforced either in execution or in a separate suit To hold that the section does not make it void for a separate suit is to defeat the very policy of the section which is intended to protect judgment-debtors from being coerced by threat of execution proceedings to submit to unconscionable extortion by the decree-holders and is also opposed to the clear terms of the section. A sanctioned agreement to give time for the payment of the judgment debt operates as a stay of execution under S. 244. An agreement which adjusts the decree is enforceable in a separate suit, even though sanction has not been obtained if it does not secure the payment of any sum more than the amount payable under the decree. If the sanctioned agreement makes any sums payable towards the decree in any particular manner and payments are so made, such payment should be certified to the Court under S. 258; otherwise such payments will not be recognised in subsequent execution proceedings. The judgment-debtor can only sue for breach of contract if such payments were not given credit for. An application for sanction under S. 257-A is not a step in aid of execution and cannot furnish a fresh starting point of limitation for execution.

(5) Loss or destruction of decree—Regular suit

693—C P. C. S. 47=S. 244 of 1882.

A decree passed for money was lost or destroyed: the decree-holder, on suing out execution, was referred to a regular suit. Held that the existence of the decree and of its terms might have been enquired into in the execution department, and that the order of the Court, to which application for execution was made, could not confer jurisdiction on a Court to entertain such a suit. Ranjeet v Choonee Lall. 1 Agra 78.

694—C. P. C. S. 47=S. 244—Same Court.

A sued B and others for the foreclosure of a mortgage of certain lands. It was decided that B was not liable and was therefore entitled to be discharged. But the decree was not drawn up in accordance with the judgment and the claim was decreed against B whose lands were delivered in execution to A. B then applied to the Court to correct the decree and his name was struck off entirely. B now sued to recover possession of his lands on the ground that possession had been given in execution. Held on second appeal that as the suit was instituted in the same Court which would have had to determine the matter in the execution department, there was at most only an error of procedure and no exercise of jurisdiction by the Court which it did not possess and that section 244 Civil Procedure Code does not bar the

This was a suit to recover certain money which had been deposited in Court to the credit of the plaintiff, but which money the defendants had got attached and paid to them in the execution of a decree which the defendants held against the present plaintiffs. The plaintiff alleged that he had been specially exempted from the operation of the decree held by the defendants. Held that the suit was a suit brought by a judgment-debtor to recover money alleged to have been wrongly realized from him by execution of a decree in a suit to which he was a party and was therefore not maintainable under s. 244 of Act X of 1877. The plaintiff sued to recover certain land of which the defendant obtained possession in execution of a decree in a former suit, in which the plaintiff was a defendant, although it was not part of the land mentioned in the plaint or decree in the former suit. Held that the plaintiff's suit could not be maintained, and that his only remedy for the wrongful dispossession was a proceeding under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Muttuvelu Pillai v Vithilinga Pillai 5 Mad H C R 185 execution sale of land set aside—Purchaser at sale sought to be set aside—Fraud, allegation of.

Where questions are raised between the parties to a decree relating to its execution, discharge, or satisfaction, the fact that the purchaser at a judicial sale, who is no party to the decree of which the execution is in question, is interested and concerned in the result, has never been held to prevent the application of s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, limiting the disposal of these matters to the Court executing the decree. The plaintiffs, in a suit to have the judicial sale of a zamindari set aside, alleged that the decree-holder, in part satisfaction of his decree, had received from them and other co-sharers, in the zamindari, their proportionate amounts of the debt decreed, and had agreed that their shares should be exempted from the execution sale about to take place; that the sale took place, subject to that exemption; that the decree holder, however, with whom some of the co-sharers and the purchasers colluded, fraudulently had the sale set aside, revived the attachment, and caused a second sale, at which all the shares in the zamindari were sold. Held that the question, besides that the charge of fraud was not sufficiently specific, was determinable, in virtue of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, only by order of the Court executing the decree. Where an auction-sale was impeached on the ground that the attachment was not properly levied and the sale proclamation had not been served.

Held, that an application to set aside a sale, on the ground that a notice under S 248 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, had not been served, could not be made under S. 311 of the said Code, when the validity of the sale was not attacked on the ground that there was irregularity in the publication or conduct of the sale. As the question of the validity of the sale was a matter relating to the execution of the decree and arose between the parties to the suit, the appropriate procedure was not by way of suit to be brought within one year from the date of the sale, but by way of application to be made under S. 244, and such application might be made within three years from the date of sale under Art. 178, Limitation Act.

The object of the service of the notice under S. 248 of the Code is not merely to give the judgment-debtor an opportunity to show cause why the decree should not be executed, but also to give an opportunity to satisfy it before execution issues.

Where the omission to take any objection as to the non-service of notice under S. 248 of the Code has not prejudiced the auction-purchaser, the appellate Court is justified in entertaining the objection. (1910) 11 C L J 489 Ref. Lakshmi Charn v Srish Chandra Roy. 13 C L J 162 =9 Ind Cas 584.

A consent decree declared the defendant the absolute owner of properties in dispute, but granted a concession to the plaintiff that if he could purchase the property from the defendant at a certain rate by a certain specified date he should be at liberty to do so, but that if he failed to do so by that date the defendant was to remain an absolute owner. The plaintiff failed to do his part and later on filed a suit to have determined and declared his rights under the decree.

Held, (1) that the suit could not be treated as a suit for redemption, since from the date of the consent decree the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee no longer subsisted between the parties; (2) that the question between the parties was one covered by S 244 of the Civil Procedure Code and should therefore be decided in execution proceedings under the consent decree and not by a separate suit and (3) that it was not competent to the Court to entertain the suit and treat it as an application for execution.

Under the last paragraph of s. 234, the Court executing the decree may try and determine the question whether property in the legal representative's hands formed part of the deceased judgment-debtor's estate, and finds this fact for the purpose of bringing the property to sale in execution, and giving the auction-purchaser a good title under the sale ; and the Court's order is subject to appeal, but not to a separate suit under s. 283. Where the legal representative asserts that the property is his own, and has not come to him from the deceased judgment-debtor he cannot set up a jus tertii, so as to come in under s. 278 and the following sections of the Code. He can only do so where he opposes execution against any particular property on the ground that, although it is vested in him, it is vested in him not beneficially, by reason of his being the representative of the judgment-debtor, but as trustee or executor of some one else. In that case either party may have the question of jus tertii determined in a separate suit. (16 Cal 1 apprsved. 4 All 190. and 6 All 109, overruled. 8 All 626, distinguished). Held by Tyrrell, J., contra, that where the legal representative of a deceased party to the decree appears, not in his capacity of legal representative contesting a question arising between the parties and relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, but in his personal character independent of the suit and the decree, and prefers a claim under s, 278 on the ground that the decree has no operation against certain property attached. for reasons personal to the objector and antagonistic to all the parties and their representatives as such the objector is not debarred from bringing a separate suit by the mere accident that he is a legal representative in the execution proceedings. Seth Chand Mal v Durga Dei. 12 All 313.

(56) Questions arising between the decree-holder & the representatives of the judgment-debtor.

750—C P C S. 47 of (1908)=S. 244 of (1882) Cl (c), Ss 278 and 283—

Per Ranade J. Where the representative of a judgment-debtor puts forward a personal claim to property which is attached as assets of the judgment-debtor in his hands, the investigation of the claim must be made in execution under the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure but that, where he asserts that he holds the property in trust for or on behalf of or as manager of some third person or body of persons or a relation or a religious charity or institution the claim must be investigated under the provisions of ss. 278 to 283 and the order passed therein cannot be challenged by an appeal but must form the subject of a separte suit.

Per Parsons J—Whenever a question arises between the representative on the record (whether originally sued as such or added before or after decree) and the decree-holder as to whether property in the hands of the representative was of the assets of the deceased or not that question must be determined by order of the Court executing the decree under the provisions of S. 244.

On the merits, the Court, following the ruling in 10 Bom P 40, reversed the decree of the District Judge and restored that of Court of first instance. Murigeya Guru Gulaya Veraktmath v Hayat Saheb. P J (1898) 137=23 Bom 237.

753.—S 47=S.244-Judgment-debtor's transferee.

After the death of a childless Hindu widow, a lessee from her of property which had belonged to her husband obtained against her vendees of part of the same property, a decree for damages for wrongfully keeping him out of possession. The effect of the decision was to decree the claim against the estate of the widow, and to exempt from liability the judgment-debtors personally and the property which they had purchased. In execution of the decree the said property was sold and was purchased by the decree-holder: one of the judgment-debtors had died during the execution proceedings, and her son was duly impleaded as her representative, and he raised no objection to the attachment and sale. Subsequently his son sold his rights and interests in the property and his vendee sued the decree-holder to recover possession, on the ground that the decree being limited to the estate of the childless Hindu widow, the defendant as purchaser could not acquire by the sale any rights superior to those of the widow; that those rights had expired upon her death, and left nothing to be sold, and that on her death the property devolved upon the plaintiff's vendor and had thence passed to the plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff's vendor was a party to the suit within the meaning of s 244 (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that he not having objected to the sale in execution of the decree; neither he nor the plaintiff could go behind that sale or claim the property upon any title which he might have asserted in the execution proceedings: and that the suit was barred by s. 244. (59) Questions for Court executing decree—Representative.

754.—S 47=S. 244 Clause (c)

One H sued and obtained a money decree against the sons and widow of one S., deceased to be executed against the property of the said S. In execution of this decree, the decree-holder attached certain houses as the property of S., whereupon one of the judgment-debtors objected to the attachment of one house, claiming it as his sole property, acquired from his maternal grandfather. The objection having been allowed the present suit was brought by H, to set aside the order and declare the house liable to attachment.

Held, that the case fell within the decision of Privy Council in (11 B R L 149), and was not maintainable, inasmuch as the proper mode of seeking relief from the order impugned was by way of appeal.

The question which arose in execution of the plaintiff's decree was " a question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution of the decree," within the meaning of Section 244 clause (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, and did not cease to be such a question either because the objector was a party before decree as

B sued V on a money claim. Whilst the suit was proceeding V died, and his sons were placed on the record as his legal representatives. The suit was decreed in B's favour. In execution of this decree the property in dispute was sold to N at a Court sale. N then sold the property to B. The plaintiffs, the assignees of V's sons, brought the suit against B to recover possession of the property on the ground that it was the self-acquisition of their assignors. The defence was that the decree in the previous suit and the purchase consequent upon it bound V's sons and that S 244 of the Civ Pro Code, 1882, was a bar. It was contended that S. 244 did not apply, because V's sons were parties to the decree in their representative, and not in their own personal capacity and as such were not bound to plead that the property was theirs; and that the question arising in the suit was not one between parties to the decree, because the action-purchaser was not a party thereto.

Held, (1) that the decree in the previous suit having been against the plaintiff's assignors as V's sons, it was a decree against them in respect of a debt of their father, which it was their pious duty to pay; and that when the assignors were brought on the record as their father's representatives, they were in their own as much as in their representative capacity. A judgment-debtor applied to the Court executing the decree to call upon the decree-holder to certify the receipt of payment in part of the decretal amount under s. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The Court dismissed the application on the ground that it was beyond time. The judgment-debtor brought a suit for cancellation of this order, for disallowance of the decree-holder's objection, and for a declaration that the alleged payment had been made and that the application for a certificate had been presented within time. Held that the question involved being one relating to the execution, satisfaction or discharge of the decree, within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code, could not be made the subject of a separate suit, and that the suit must therefore be dismissed, notwithstanding that the defendant's plea to this effect was made for the first time at the stage of second appeal; but that, in consequence of the defendant's delay in taking the plea, each party must pay his own costs. Tulsha v Badri Das. 9 W N 95.

A Court executing a decree is competent to pass under S. 258, Civil Procedure Code, to pass an order that a decree has been only partly satisfied.

Such an order passed under S 258 is one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, and a suit for a declaration that the decree has been fully satisfied and for an injunction to restrain the decree-holder from executing it is barred under S. 244.

Subsequently MH and others applied for execution of this decree seeking to recover the arrears of the annuity for 1291 and 1292 Fasli. MS objected that these arrears were not recoverable in execution of the decree but a fresh suit should be brought. The objection being allowed by the Court executing the decree, M H and others brought the present suit for the arrears in question and interest. The suit has now been resisted on the ground that the suit was barred by s. 244, Code of Civil Procedure. Held that the decree of 1882 was not a mere declaratory decree and the plaintiff's only remedy was by way of execution and not by a separate suit. A mortgage decree was obtained against the defendant's husband in a suit on a mortgage executed by the latter on the 29th September 1882. On the 27th July an order to transfer it to the High Court was made. In 1886 April the mortgagee made an application to the High Court for the execution of the mortgaged properties and an order for attachment was made. The mortgagee died in April 1892 and on the 20th August 1894 the plaintiff applied to the High Court for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged property under s. 89 T P Act. On 5th January the application was refused on the ground that the lands were outside the territorial jurisdiction of the High Court. The plaintiff brought the present suit, suing the administration of the mortgagor's estate and asked for the sale of such of the properties as may be found subject to such mortgage. Held—that the suit was not maintainable by reason of the provisions of ss 230 and 244 C P Code, the questions arising in the suit being such as should have been determined in execution of the decree and not by a separate suit.

A decree for sale of mortgaged property was passed in 1900 for a sum less than the amonnt claimed. The mortgagee appealed against the dismissal of a portion of his claim. An order absolute for sale was made in 1902. The properties were sold in 1903 and purchased by the decree-holders. The mortgagees purchasers applied to be put in possession which was refused by the Subordinate Judge and an appeal was preferred therefrom; and on 18-4-04 the High Court allowed the appeal by the mortgagees-purchasers against the order refusing to place them in possession; but before the date the High Court on 27th January 1904 allowed the main appeal of the appellants mortgagees directing the respondents mortgagors to pay the whole amount adjudged within 6 months and in case of default directing the property to be sold. This decree and its form was not apparently brought to the notice of the High Court on 18-4-04 when it disposed of the appeal of their purchase. The respondents (mortgagors) now claimed restoration of possession by setting aside the sale. Held, that the order dated 18-4-04 was not null and void and that the mortgagees were entitled to be in possession, the more so as there had been no offer to redeem by rhe respondents.

A purchaser at a Court-sale is not a party, or the representative of a party, within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). He is, therefore, not bound by any order in the miscellaneous inquiry under s. 280, 281, or 282 of the Code. Nor is he bound by the specifications contained in the proclamation of sale of the claims of intervenors. Certain property was attached in execution of a decree. The defendants intervened, and objected to the attachment on the ground that they held the property on permanent tenancy. Their objection was allowed, and the Court made an order, directing the property to be sold, subject to the defendants' rights. In the proclamation of sale however, it was stated that the Court did not guarantee the title of the intervenors. The plaintiff purchased the property at the Conrt sale. He then sued to eject the defendants. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff had purchased, subject to their rights as permanent tenants. Both the lower Courts rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that he was bound by the order in the miscellaneous inquiry, which had become conclusive by reason of his having omitted to sue within one year from the date of the order. Held, reversing the lower Court's decision, that the order in the miscellaneous inquiry was not binding on the plaintiff as an auction-purchaser. Vishvanath Chardu Naik v Subraya Shivapa Shetti 15 Bom 290.

(1) Previous application barred—Notice on judgment-debtor.

811.—C P C S 47=(1882) C P C S 244.

A judgment-debtor is not estopped from contending that a previous application for execution was barred by limitation merely because notice had been served on him and he did not appear to contest the proceedings. Umed Ali v. Abdul Karim. 8 C L J 193.

(2) Persons wrongly impleaded as defendants not estopped

812—C P C S. 47; O 21 r 58=(1882 Ss 244, 278)—

Some persons, who were wrongly impleaded as defendants in execution proceedings, did not prefer any claim to plaintiff's attachment and sale of property therein.

Held, that they were not estopped, by the said circumstance, from making a claim in any subsequent suit or proceedings. Akkamad Mohideen v Sowmya Narayana Aiyengar. 8 Ind Cas 161.

suit was compromised, and the amount was to be paid by instalments. Default was made in payment and the decree-holder applied for execution and obtained partial satisfaction; meanwhile A's property was taken into possession by the Court of Wards and the decree-holder died. After N a minor was substituted for the decree-holder and B for A. Present application for execution was made by the sub-manager of N. It was contended by the defendants that assuming that B's estate is liable, the liabelity could not be enforced in execution because the order of substitution as regards B is a mere nullity and that the appeal could not lie under S 244 C P C. Held, Court had power to make a substitution of this kind and B is rightly substituted. (16 Cal 40; L R 15 I A 195 ref to.) Held also that B was precluded by the previous proceedings from questioning the order of substitution. (4) Estoppel—Application to have the sale held and application to set the sale aside.

814.—C P C S 47; O 21 rr 83, 90=(1883 Ss. 244, 305, 311)—

In an application by the judgment-debtor under S 305, C P C., he stated that a sale proclamation had been issued, and he offered to have the sale held, without the service of a fresh sale proclamation, if time was given to enable him to raise money to pay the judgment debt. The application was refused and the sale took place. He then made an opplication for setting aside the sale on the grouud of irregularity:

Held, that there was no relinquishment of his right to question the validity of the sale, as the terms offered were accepted neither by the Court nor by the decree-holder, and that the application was, therefore, maintainable—(2 C L J 584, 25 W R 34 Dist, 6 C L J 62, 9 C L J 251; 2 Ind Cas 338; 36 Cal 422 Ref). Enamudin Jamadar v Abdul Jaffer Daftri 5 Ind Cas 489.

(5) Simple money-decree against father-Objection to execution on sons—Estoppel.

Held that the defendants were not entitled to plead S 244 of the Code as bar to a subsequent suit instituted on the strength of their former plea; and it matters nothing that the suit as framed was not exactly the suit suggested by the plea of the defendants. Jagannadha Row v Kurmayya 17 M L J 314.

(6) Appeal—Claim—Debutter property—Right of suit.

In execution of a decree obtained by the defendants against the plaintiff's father, the plaintiff as legal representative of his father preferred a claim to a property attached on the ground that it was not the personal property of his father but that it was debutter property; the claim being disallowed, he preferred an appeal which was dismissed upon the defendant's objection that it was an order, not under S. 244 of the Code but upon an application under S. 278.

Held, that in a regular suit by the plaintiff for declaration that the property is debutter, defendant is estopped from raising the question that it was barred by S 244 of the Code. Hara Dhan Kalia v Purna Chundra Mondal. 11 C W N 145.

(7) Fraud—Sale in violation of section 99 of T P Act— objection that no suit lay when application put in objection raised that a suit lay.

817—C. P. C. S. 47=(1882 S 244 cl (c)).

Clause (c) of S. 244 of the Code covers a case, where it is sought to set aside a sale held in execution of decree on the ground of fraud or as having been held in violation of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act. A regular suit does not lie to set aside a sale upon these grounds.

Per Aikman, J., that, where the appellant had successfully resisted a suit to set aside a sale on the ground that suit was not the proper remedy but that the matter should be tried in execution, he should not be allowed to go behind that and

(8) Right to show that previous proceeding and compromise were in fraud of applicant's right.

In an application for setting aside a sale purported to have been signed by the appellant and her brothers. A compromise petition purporting to have been signed by all of them was presented. Subsequently the appellant presented a similar application.

Held, that she is entitled in this application to show that she had no part in the former proceeding, that the compromise was obtained behind her back and in fraud of her rights, and that it was not binding upon her, without having the compromise set aside either on review or in a regular suit. Where an order by a Court made under S. 244 of the Civ. (1) Application of the section.

820—C P C—S. 48. O. XXI rr.10, 21.=S.230 S. 230 does not apply to decrees made by the High Courts. Mayabhai v Tribhuvandas. 6 Bom., 258.

821—C P C—S. 48=S. 230 of 1882 s. 48—Decree for sale upon mortgage passed before 1908—No curtailment of right to execute—Mortgage decree.

The right to enforce the execution of a decree is a substantive right. That right cannot be lost without an express provision of law to that effect.

A decree for sale of mortgaged property was passed while Act XIV of 1882 was in force. Twelve years expired, but the decree was not satisfied. In the meantime Act V of 1908 was passed, S. 48 of which was made applicable to all decrees. Held that the decree passed before the passing of that Act could be executed more than twelve years after the date it was passed. No statute shall be so construed as to have a retrospective operation, unless such a construction appears very clearly in the terms of the Act, or arises by necessary and distinct implication. Statutes are to be construed as operating on only cases or facts which come into existence after they are passed. Kounsilla v Ishri Singh. 7 A L J 420=6 Ind Cas 188=32 All 499.

A mere application for rateable distribution, which does not comply with the requirements of s. 235 in form or substance, cannot be treated as the sort of application falling within the scope of s. 295. (11 C. L. J. 69, Rel. on.) S. 230 provides for an application for execution and s. 235 specifies the form and contents of that application. S. 490, which gives validity and effect to the attachment before judgment even after decree for certain purposes, does not give rise to the implication that that attachment was made on a constructive application for execution of a decree that had not been passed.(31 Mad 502, Not Fol; 12 Bom 400, 33 Cal 639,Ref.).The section does not make the application to execute the decree a second application to execute it, because it says re-attachment is unnecessary. The subsisting attachment before judgment has its use in invalidating alienation by the judgment-debtor and dispensing with the need of a further attachment before sale, without necessitating the fiction, after a decree is passed that there was a pre-existing application for execution. A L A R Arunachallam Chettiar v P.S K Haji Sheikh Meera Rowther. 8 M L T 226=7 Ind Cas 856,

No moveable property having been found, the Court was asked to attach his immoveable property, but refusing to do so, struck off the proceedings. The application for execution having been renewed on the 13th September 1880, it was held that the former application for execution must be treated as having been granted within the meaning of s. 230 of the Code, and consequently that the further application was barred under that section, the decree being more than twelve years old.

835—C P C S. 48, O 21 rr 10, 21 (1908)=S. 230 —Execution of Decree—"Granted"-Meaning of.

A decree having been passed on the 9th May 1865, and confirmed on appeal on the 29th December 1865, an application was made for execution in September 1877, before Act X of 1877 came into force. A subsequent application made on the 31st January 1880, having been rejected as informal, another application was made on the 11th September 1880.

Held, that the last mentioned application was not barred by section 230 of Act X of 1877, inasmuch as the application of the 31st January 1880, although made under section 230 of that Act, had not been granted, so as to render a subsequent application within the terms of the section.

Semble:—The execution 'granted' in the third paragraph of Section 230 is equivalent to the expression 'admitted' used in Section 245 of the Civil Procedure Code. Dewan Ali v Sorosibala Dabee. 8 Cal 297=10 C L R 111.

836—C P C S. 48, O. 21 rr 10, 21 of 1908=S. 230—Granted.

Under s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, after a decree is twelve years old, there is a prohibition against its being executed more than once i. e., an application for execution should not be granted if a previous application has been allowed under the provisions of that section. The mere filing of a petition with the result that the application contained in it is subsequently struck off, is not, "granting" an application within the meaning of s. 230 of the Code, and ss. 245, 248 and 249 show that there is a broad distinction between admitting an application for the purpose of issuing notice to the other side and of hearing the objections that may be urged, and a decision of the Court as provided in s. 249. In 1865 a decree was passed for a sum of money payable by yearly instalments for a period of sixteen years. Down to March, 1877, various amounts were paid on account of the decree. In that month an application was made for execution of the decree the result being an arrangement for liquidation of the amount then due, which was confirmed by the Court. A second application for execution was made on the 9th March, 1881, the decree then being more than twelve years old. All that was done with reference to this application was that notice to appear was issued to the judgment-debtor's representatives, and subsequently a petition was filed notifying that an arrangement had been effected under which a certain sum had been paid by one of the said representatives in satisfaction of the claim against him, and that the other had agreed to pay the balance by yearly instalments. Upon this the application for execution was struck off on the 5th March, 1883, another application for execution was made, notice to appear was issued, and after this notice a petition was put in intimating that an arrangement had been come to, and praying that execution might be postponed, whereupon the application was struck off. Again on the 31st March, 1884, the decree-holder applied once more for execution of the decree. Held that neither the previous application of the 9th March, 1881, nor that of the 5th March, 1883, could properly be said to have been "granted" within the meaning of s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and, under these circumstances, the decree, though twelve years old and upwards, was not barred by that section and the application for execution should be allowed. Paraga Kuar v Bhagwan Din. 8 All 301, 6 W N 97.

cause why the decree should not be executed against him This notice (under Section 248) was issued, and eventually the case was heard in the presence of the parties, and the Court having directed the rateable distribution of the Rs. 150 in the hands of the Nazir, left the decree-holders to make any application for further proceedings to recover the balance which they might be advised to take and as no such proceedings were taken, the Court subsequently ordered the case to be consigned to the record-room.

Held, that the application of October 1883 must under the above circumstances be taken to have been "granted" within the meaning of Section 230 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The decree in the above case directed the money due under it to be paid annually in two instalments at a specified rate "each harvest," referring apparently to the Fasli harvests of rabi and kharif.

Held, that money payable as above could not be said to be payable "at a certain date" within the meaning of clause (b) of Section 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that therefore applying clause (a) of the same section, the present application for execution was barred.

It is a grave irregularity in an executing Court to permit several assignees of parts of a single and indivisible decree to execute that decree as to their shares independently of each other. Sher Ali v Deoki Nandan. 19 P R 1889.

An application by a decree-holder on which the judgment-debtor was arrested and brought up to Court, though he was subsequently released, held to have been "granted" within the meaning of Section 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, such application having been made the basis of proceedings in execution.

The holder of a decree applied for execution under s. 230 of Act X of 1877, and the application was granted. Within three years after the passing of Act XIV of 1882, by which Act X of 1877 was repealed, he applied, for the first time, under s. 230 of former Act, for execution of the decree. At the time this application was made more than twelve years had elapsed from the date of the decree. Held by Straight, Brodhurst, and Tyrell, J.J., that the application might be granted, it being the first made under s.230 of Act XIV of 1882, and the first made after the expiration of twelve years from the date of the decree and not being barred by the last paragraph of s. 230 of that Act read in conjunction with the 3rd paragraph of s. 230 of Act X of 1877, the "law in force" mentioned in the last paragraph of s. 230 of Act XIV of 1882 referring to the Law of Limitation in force at the time the Act was passed and not to the third paragraph of s. 230 of Act X of 1877. Held by Stuart, C J, and Oldfield J., that the application should not be granted the effect of the last paragraph of s. 230 of Act XIV of 1882 being to bar any proceedings to enforce a decree under that Act which would have been barred under s. 230 of Act X of 1877, if taken thereunder, on the 841—C P C—S. 48, O 21, rr 10, 21 of 1908= S. 230 of 1882.

The "subsequent application to execute the same decree" mentioned in s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure means a substantive application for execution in the form prescribed by S. 235 of the Code. Hence where an application for execution in accordance with s. 235 of the Code has been made within the period of limitation prescribed by s. 230 and has been granted, that is, execution has been ordered in accordance with the prayer of the decree holder's application: the right of the decree holder to obtain execution will not necessarily be defeated if, by a reason of objections on the part of the judgment-debtor or action taken by the Court or other cause for which the decree holder is not responsible, final completion, of the proceedings in execution initiated by the application under s. 235 above referred to cannot be obtained within the period limited by s. 230. Further applications of the decree-holder to the Court executing the decree to go on from the point where the execution proceedings had been arrested and complete execution of his decree would be applications merely ancillary to the substantive application under s. 235 and would not be obnoxious to the bar of s. 230. Mauza Raseen, which is under attachment by the Government in lieu of Rasadi debts be made over to plaintiff after release from attachment, mudai ko bad rajuzasht supurd kia jawe ".

The decree-holder made applications for execution, from time to time, so as to keep alive the right of execution so far as it is effected by Article 179, Schedule II, Limitation Act. It was contended that the present application made on the 6th December 1887 was barred under Section 230, Civil Procedure Code, as a previous application for execution had been made and granted and that 12 years had elapsed from the date of the decree. It was also contended that the decree did not direct the delivery of property and that if it did, no certain date was fixed for delivery.

Held, that the decree was for delivery of property. Section 230 is not restricted to a delivery of the property to the decree-holder as his own property, and does not exclude a delivery of property as mortgaged property

Held, also, that a certain date had been fixed for delivery, as the date could be sufficiently ascertained by reference to a contingent event—i. e, the release from attachment. In certum est quod certum reddipotest.. Muhammad Akbar Khan v Dwarka Das. 159 P R 1889

In 1868 a decree was obtained for Rs1.100, which provided that the amount should be paid in instalments, the first instalment being Rs200, to be paid at the end of the first year, and that the other instalments should be Rs100 at the end of each subsequent year, and that in the event of failure to carry this out, and 2½ months after the falling due of the instalment, the whole amount should be exigible in a lump sum with interest at 8 annas per cent.per mensem. In 1877 the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, asserting that Rs 600 had been paid up to that time by five instalments, one of Rs 200 and four of Rs 100 each,and that default had been made in payment of the fifth instalment of Rs 100, and he asked to recover the whole amount due on the decree. No order was passed on this application, and eventually the case was struck off In 1880 the decree-holder again applied for execution of the decree, upon the same grounds as those upon which the previous application was based. Notice was issued and served, and a warrant issued for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, but eventually the case was struck off. In 1883 the decree holder on the same grounds made another application for execution. It was contended by the judgment-debtor that execution was barred by s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as no instalments had been paid, and even if they had been paid, they could

The decree of which execution was sought was passed on the 11th May 1869. From 1869 to 1878, applications for execution were regularly made at intervals of less than three years. On the 20th August 1878, the decree-holder applied for execution. Notice was issued to the judgment-debtor, who, on the 14th October 1878, proposed an arrangement for payment of the amount of the decree by instalments which was agreed to by the decree-holder and the case struck off. The decree-holder applied for execution under this arrangement on the 9th May 1881, 22nd April 1884, and finally on the 7th August 1886 On notice having been served on him of this last application, the judgment-debtor appeared and contended that the decree could no longer be executed being more than 12 years old, and one application having been made and granted in 1884 (Section 230, Civil Procedure Code). He further contended that the arrangement made in 1878 was null and void, having been made without jurisdiction, inasmuch as a provision similar to that contained in Section 57 A, did not exist in Act X of 1877, and further that no decree could be altered by consent of parties except by the Court which passed the decree, and then only within six months of the date of the decree, which was not the case here.

Held, that the judgment-debtor could not be allowed to challenge the validity of an arrangement which was brought about by his own action in 1878. Where a Court has a general jurisdiction over the subject-matter of a claim, parties should be held to an agreement made by them that the questions between them should be heard and determined by proceedings contrary to the ordinary cursus curiæ: and consequently the decree of 1869, as modified by consent of parties in 1878 was still capable of execution. Per Mahmood. J.—The rule of construction being that a limited meaning can only be given to general words in a statute where the statute itself justifies such limitation, the words "any decree" in the proviso to s. 230 must not be construed as confined to such decrees as would be barred on the date of the Code coming into force, inasmuch as no reason for so restricting the meaning of those words can be found in the Code or is suggested by the legislative policy upon which clauses such as the proviso in question are based. This policy is to prevent a sudden disturbance of existing rights in consequence of new legislation; but it is beyond its object and scope to revive rights or remedies which have already expired before the new Act comes into operation and although the Legislature may revive such rights or remedies, it can only do so by express words to that effect. Jokhu Ram v Ram Din. 8 All 419.

A decree having been obtained in 1864, the first application for execution was made under section 215 of Act VIII of 1859 on the 18th September 1869, when an order was made for a writ of attachment to issue against the person of the judgment-debtor. On the 15th September 1880 another application was made, under section 230 of the new Civil Procedure Code, Act X of 1877, for execution.

Held, that the order under section 215 of Act VIII, which must be assumed to have been on notice, had the effect of reviving the judgment within the meaning of Article 180, schedule II, of Act XV, of 1877, and the application was not barred.

An order for execution under the Code of Civil Procedure made after notice has, on the original side of the High Court, the same effect of reviving a judgment as a scire facia had.

Section 230 of Act X of 1877 only appliee where the previous application for execution was actually made under that section.

debtor was arrested and imprisoned, and a small sum of money was realised by sale of a document. On the 29th January 1884 an application was made for execution by attachment and sale of immoveable property of the judgment-debtor. The executing Court dealt with this application as one for a farm of the property, but the error was amended by the Divisional Court on appeal, and proceedings were protracted until, on the 31st October 1891, the Commissioner of the Division refused to sanction sale of the property. On the 31st October 1892, the decree-holder filed an application, setting forth the refusal of the Commissioner to sanction the said sale and his own fruitless endeavours to realise his decree, and praying that the land be sold or a receiver appointed under Section 503 of the Civil Procedure Code. An order for the appointment of a receiver having been made, the judgment-debtor appealed to the Chief Court, and it was contended on his behalf that execution of the decree was barred under the provisions of Section 230 of the Code, and Article 179 (iv) of the 2nd Schedule to the Limitation Act, 1877. It was urged that the application of 1892 was "a subsequent application', within the meaning of the said section of the Code.

Held, that the said application was merely a petition to the Court seized of and already executing, the decree on the application of 1884, to take a step in aid of the execution on that application, and was, therefore, not barred under Section 230 of the Code, which does not apply to applications or petitions asking the Court to give effect of previous petitions still pending.

Held further, that inasmuch as proceedings in execution had been pending ever since 1884, execution was not barred by reason of "steps in aid of execution" not having been taken every three years. Budhe Khan v Bir Bal 40 P R 1898.

A decree for possession and wasilat having been made in 1854, it was, by an order in January 1881, directed upon the report of an Ameen that the decree-holder should recover a particular sum for wasilat. On the 14th March 1881 the decree-holder filed a petition praying that certain properties of the debtor might be attached and sold and the proceeds applied in payment of the wasilat. Held that, under sec 230 of Act X of 1877, the application of 14th March 1881 was not barred. The decree of 1854 so far as the wasilat was concerned, might be taken to be merely interlocutory, and did not become final until January 1881. Baroda Sundari Dabia v Furgusson 11 C L R 17.

A decree of the Subordinate Judge, dated the 27th June, 1881, having been transferred to the Collector for execution, the parties to it submitted to the Collector an agreement for the satisfaction of the decree by instalments. The Collector approved the agreement and sent it to the Court which passed the decree. On receipt thereof the Court made the following order on the 31st July, 1885:—"Having been received to day let it be forwarded to the District Court to be put up with the record." On the 4th August, the District Judge ordered that that document was to be sent to the record-keeper to be filed with the record of the execution proceeding. On the 16th June, 1888, an application was made for execution of the decree by giving effect to the terms of the agreement. Held that the order of the Subordinate Judge above quoted was not such an order as was contemplated by s. 257 (a) of the Code of Civil Procedure and was incapable of validating the agreement for the payment of the decree by instalments and that since the Court executing the decree was not capable of sanctioning such an agreement, execution of the decree was barred by limitation.

7. WHERE THE JUDGMENT—DEBTOR HAS BY FRAUD OR FORCE PREVENTED EXECUTION

(1) Execution of decree-Fraud construed in a broad sense-Evasion of warrant amounts to fraud—Whether fraud of one judgment-debtor keeps the decree alive after twelve years only against himself or against all.

888—C P C S. 48=S. 230 of 1882.

(7) Where the judgment-debtor has by fraud or force prevented execution-Contd

The expression 'fraud' in s. 48 of the Code of 1908 should be construed in a broad sense, and a deliberate evasion of the process of the Court with intention to defeat the execution of the decree would amount to "fraud." If the judgment-debtor, by fraud or force, at some time prevented the execution, it is not necessary for the decree-holder to show that the judgment-debtor, guilty of fraud, had means to pay the decree-amount or that the decree holder exercised continuous diligence and would have realised the fruits of his decree but for such fraud or force. (6 Mad 365, Dist; 8 M L J 203, Cons; 22 Mad 330, Appr.; 8 A L J 1020, Ref.) Quære:—Whether the Court has a discretion to allow or refuse execution after twelve years, even where fraud has been proved? (11 C W N 441, Doubted). Per Sundara Aiyar, J.—Where there are more judgment-debtors than one, the fraud of any particular judgment-debtor would give the decree-holder further time for execution only as against him under s. 48 (2). Per Phillips, J:—S. 48 is not intended to enlarge the time for execution only against the judgment-debtor who is guilty of fraud, but allows execution against all the judgment-debtors, even though only one of them has been guilty of fraud or force Abdul Khadir v Ajiyur Ahammad Shaiwa Ravuthar (1911) 2 M W N 434=10 M L T 413.

888A—C P C S. 48, rr. 10, 21, (=Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, s. 230)—Fraud.

In order to bring a case within the proviso to s. 230, Civ. Pro. Code, two things have to be proved:—(1) that the judgment-debtor used stratagems designed to prevent the execution of the decree, and (2) that the execution of the decree was by such means prevented. It is obviously not enough to prove fraud at some time during the 12 years' period, because it is quite consistent with such fraud that the decree-holder may, at latter period, have had full facility for executing his decree It must be proved that the non execution of the decree was brought about by the fraud complained of. Assuming that an application made before the expiration of the 12 years' period may, notwithstanding the provision contained in s 230, Civ. Pro. Code, be granted after the lapse of 12 years from the date of the decree, there is no reason for holding that a decree-holder can, on account of the pending of a prior application for warrant of arrest, be allowed, after the lapse of the 12 years, to make another application for the attachment of immoveable property. Sesachalam Chetti v Rajam Chetty. 8 M L J 203.

889—C. P C. S. 48, O. XXI rr. 10, 21 of 1908 =S. 230 of 1882.

A judgment-debtor, who, though able to pay his judgment-debt, dishonestly evades payment for more than twelve years by eluding service of warrants and making applications to the Court (which had the effect for the time of staying execution), is guilty of fraud within the meaning of s 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Pattakara Annamalai Goundan v Rangasami Chetti. 6 Mad 365.

When a judgment-debtor keeps out of the way when warrants are issued for his arrest and puts in false objections in bad faith and thereby dishonestly evades payment of money justly due he is not entitled to the benefit of S 230, C. The application for execution was presented more than 12 years after the date of the decree but within 3 years of the last application. Held, that the execution of the decree was not barred by S. 230 C. (4) Fraud interpretation of—Judgment debtor's objection to validity of sale proving unsuccessful—Fraud proved-Decree -holder's power to add to period of limitation.

891—C. P. C. 1908, S. 48—"Date of decree"—Order by appellate Court.

S. 48, sub-S. (2), cl. (a), Civ. Pro. Code, requires not only that there should be fraud on the part of the judgment-debtors, but also that the fraud should be of such a character as to prevent the decree-holder from executing the decree.

The term "fraud" in S. 48 should be interpreted in a wider sense than that in which it is generally used in English Law.

The conduct of a judgment-debtor cannot be deemed fraudulent, simply because his objection to the validity of the sale of his property in execution, ultimately proves unsuccessful, and that objection cannot stand in the way of further execution of the decree.

In the course of execution proceedings in connection with a certain decree, an appellate Court directed that the judgment-debtor should pay a certain amount every month in satisfaction of the decree:

Held, that, it was not the intention of the appellate Court to supersede the original decree and that the order merely determined the mode of payment for the satisfaction of the decree, and that if cl. (h) of sub-S. (1) of S 48 of the Code be not applicable to the case, the decree-holder cannot execute the decree after 12 years from the date of the original decree, though the application for execution is made within 12 years of the appellate Court's order aforesaid.

A decree-holder cannot, by binding himself not to execute a decree for a certain period, add to the time which the law allows him to execute it. (8 M L J 203, Rel. upon. 6 Mad 365, Fol. 13 W R (F. B) 44, Ref.) Ragunath Prosad v Kashi Prosad. 13 Ind. Cas. 88=15 C L J 678.

Having succeeded in the suit and in rendering the property alienated available for attachment under his decree, the respondent again applied for execution in 1879, but not against the property fictitiously alienated. Lastly, the respondent applied on September 28th, 1880—more than twelve years after decree -for execution against certain immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, other than the property fictitiously alienated, in the petitioner's possession. Held that, having regard to the fraud of the judgment-debtor, the application was not barred by s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

In order to obtain the benfit of the proviso in that section it is not necessary that a judgment-creditor should prove that the fraud of the judgment-debtor continued so as to prevent execution of the decree at any time. "Fraud" or "force" on the part of a judgment-debtor gives a new starting point for the period of limitation, and an application for the execution of a decree may be granted at any time within twelve years after the date on which a judgment debtor has by "fraud" or "force" prevented execution of a decree.

896.—C P C S. 48, O 21 rr. 10, 21 (1908)= S. 230.-Execution after 12 years from date of decree.

In order to bring a case within the proviso to S. 230 Civil Procedure Code, it has to be proved -(1) that the judgment-debtor used stratagems designed to prevent execution of the decree, and (2) that the execution of the decree was by such means prevented.

It is not enough to prove fraud at some time during the 12 years. It must be proved that the non-execution of the decree was brought about by the fraud complained of.

Held that, if the decree-holder exercises due diligence in proceeding with the execution of decree, he cannot be deprived of the benefits of S. 48 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Held further, that it is not necessary to show that the fraud or obstruction of the judgment-debtor extended continuously for the whole of the period of 12 years allowed from the date of the decree. It is sufficient to show that the judgment-debtor, on various occasions within the aforesaid period, dishonestly prevented the execution of the decree against him by frivolous devices. Such devices clearly constitute fraud within the meaning of s. 48 of the Civ P Code. (11 C. W. N.440,Foll.) Jogindra Nath Pal'ak v Mirsa Mohammad Husain. 14 C W N 93.

The transferee of a decree applied while an application by the original holder of such decree to execute it was pending, to be allowed to execute it. The Court, in accordance with section 232, directed notice of the transferee's aplication to be given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor. The transferee failed to pay the Court fee leviable for the issue of such notice, and the Court dismissed his application. The transferee subsequently made a second application to be allowed to execute the decree. Held that such application could not be rejected with reference to section 230 on the ground that due diligence had not been used on the former application to procure complete satisfaction of the decree, because such application had not been granted, and therefore, the question whether "on the last preceding application" due diligence was used to procure such satisfaction did not arise.

The plaintiff applied on the 17th December, 1898, to execute a decree dated the 12th December 1895, which ordered the defendant to make such improvements in the roof of his building so that it should not project over nor let rain-water fall on the plaintiff's land.

The lower appellate Court held that the application was not time barred because the plaintiff could not have demanded immediate fulfilment of the decree and that time did not begin to run until the defendant had had reasonable opportunity of obeying the decree :

Held, that the application was time-barred, because there was nothing in the decree which postponed the period of its execution and it was evidently intended to come into force at once as the plaintiff could have demanded its immediate performance. Shidlingappa v Durdundeppa. 2 Bom L R 199.

An application for execution of a decree by arrest of the judgment-debtor if subsequently amended by praying for execution against the properties of the judgment-debtor must be treated as a fresh application and as having been made with reference to the latter relief, on the date of the amendment. A decree for money was passed on 30th July 1891. In March 1904, the decree-holder applied to amend his execution application by inserting a prayer for the attachment of properties. This was ordered without notice to the judgment-debtors. Khem Karan prayed that he be allowed to set off a prior decree obtained by him against Ramzan Ali and three others, and the Court of first instance allowed the prayer, but the Lower Appellate Court reversed the order on the ground of res judicata. Held, that the law of res judicata does not apply to execution proceedings, and that s 233, Civil Procedure Code, clearly imposes upon the transferee of a decree the equities that bound the original decree holder, and inasmuch as Khem Karan was at liberty to have enforced his decree against Ramzan Ali alone, there was nothing to prevent Khem Karan from setting off his decree against Ramzan Ali's. Khem Karan v Parmanand. Oudh S C 131.

Where a decree is assigned, the assignment takes effect against the judgment-debtor only on notice to the latter and is accordingly subject to all equities arising prior to the date of such notice: Where therefore, there was a decree against S and the decree-holder assigned it to the appellant but before the assignment was perfected by notice, S obtained a decree for a larger sum against appellant's assignor: Held (1) that the appellant took the assignment subject to the equity attaching to the decree under s. 246, C P C and (2) that the appellant could not execute the decree assigned to him against S.

2 MEANING OF THE TERM "LEGAL REPRESENTATIVE" IN THIS SECTION.

(1) Lesgal Representative, meaning of 925.—C P C S. 50—(1882 S. 234)—"Legal representative," meaning of—Decree against life-holder when allowable—Holding a life estate with power to litigate on behalf of estate—Representation by agreement of parties and representation in law—Difference between.

Per Brett, J.—The term legal representative has been used in s. 234 to meet the circumstances of a certain event viz the passing of the property, the subject of the litigation on the death of the deceased judgment-debtor, to her successor to her estate or to the property in suit and to include such successor either. Per Woodroffe. J.—The term legal representative" is not limited to administrators and heirs and must on the authorities be held to include any person who in law represents the estate of a deceased judgment debtor. Quære, whether the principle of representation which exists by law in the case of decrees against Hindu widows and co-parceners can be extended to cases, such as the present, of agreement and conveyance between parties. A Hindu widow adopted B as her son under an anumatipatra of her husband, which provided that she was to hold and manage the properties left by him during her life time. Disputes arose between J and B as regards her right to hold the properties after the adoption and were ultimately settled by B executing in J's favour an ekranama which provided inter alia that J was to possess and enjoy the estate without power of alienation during her life time, with liberty to carry on litigations in her own name. Held,—that J did not hold a Hindu widow's estate, but an estate created by the ekrarnama, That a decree recovered by the Respondent against J for possession, with mesne profits and costs of some lands which J had been holding as an accretion to the estate, could, after J's death, be executed against B's widow succeeded to the estate on J's death as B's heiress, although B, was no party to the suit J having defended the suit in the interests of the estate and the authority of the ekrarnama which bound B and his heirs. Execution was prayed to recover only the costs awarded by the decree. Held,—that the lower Court had rightly substituted B's widow in the place of J, and execution ought to proceed against her.

3. EXTENT OF LIABLITY OF THE REPRESETATIVES OF A DECEASED PERSON.

(1) Decree against Karnavan-Tarwad property in hands of successors—Share of deceased father of joint family—Assets.

926.—C P C S. 50=1882 S. 234,

In a suit by the trustees to remove the defendant from the management of certain temples, a decree for mesne profits was passed against the defendant, who was the karnavan of a Malabar trawad Held that the tarwad property in the hands of the deceased defendant's successor was not assets of the deceased in the hands of his successor liable to satisfy the decree under s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. The share of a deceased father in an undivided Hindu family passes by survivorship to the sons, and is not assets in their hands to satisfy a decree against the father under s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877.

(3) Decree obtained against father executed against his sons as his re-presentatives.

In an undivided Hindu family, although the interests of the sons in the ancestral estate are liable to satisfy the father's debt, the holder of a money decree against the father who has not attached the ancestral estate before the death of the father cannot execute the decree against the ancestral property as assets in the hands of the representatives of the judgment-debtor under s.234 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1877. (4) Decree for maintenance obtained against father.

929—C P C S. 50 of (1908)=S 234 of (1882).

A maintenance decree directing an annual payment to the decree-holder during her life-time can be executed against the sons of the judgment-debtor after his death to the extent of the assets of the father in the possession of the sons but the share of the father in the family property is not included in their assets.

(5) Liability of son for father's debt—Decree against zamindar directing sale of land—Execution against son of zamindar

A suit was brought against a zamindar on a promissory note and was determined by a compromise whereby it was agreed that the debt should be paid as therein mentioned and that in default thereof the amount should be recovered by an issue of a warrant against certain land. And a decree was accordingly passed. After the death of the zamindar, the execution of the decree directing a sale of the hypothecated property, was asked for against the son. Held, that it was capable of execution against the son as representative of the deceased father. Zamindar of Sivagiri v. (6) Execution of decree for money-Legal representative—Hindu Law, Mitakshara-Son taking by survivorship—Decree against father- Separate suit.

931.—C P C Ss. 50, 47=1882 Ss. 234, 244.

Held—Per Maclean C. J. Brett and Mitra JJ. —A decree for money passed against a member of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara system of Hindu Law is capable of execution against his son and heir as his legal representative, though he left no self acquired property and the son took ancestral property by survivorship.

Held,-further that ancestral property in the hand of such legal representative may be sold in execution of the decree obtained against the father, and no separate suit need be brought against the son.

Per Harington and Geidt JJ contra—Where the son takes ancestral property by survivorship and the father had left no self-acquired property the decree against the father is not capable of execution against the son and the liability of the son must be determined by a separate suit. He is not the representative of his father within the meaning of section 241 of the Civil Procedure Code. Amar Chandra Kundu v Sebak Chand 34 Cal 642=11 C W N 593=5 C L J 491 F B=2 M L T 207.

(7) Mortgage decree against father-Execution against son succeeding by survivorship-Mitakshara law.

932.-C P C Ss. 50, 47=1882 ss. 234, 244.

(8) Liability of son as representative of father for his deabts.

933.—C P C S. 50 = 1882 S. 234.

As the entire interest in an impartible zamindari passes upon the death of the father to the son, there is nothing in the estate itself which can be attached as assests of the father under a decree against him or which can be made available in execution of the decree against his son as his representative. Though a son is bound under Hindu law to pay his father's just debts from any property he may possess, yet, when he is made a party to a decree as representative of his deceased father for the purpose of executing it his liability is limited to the amount of assets of the deceased which may have come to his hands and have not been duly disposed of. Zamindar of Sivagiri v Alwar Ayyangar. (10) Legal representatives of debtor—Decree-holder.

935—C. P. C. Ss. 50,47 (1908)=Ss. 234, 244 (1882).

Sons of a deceased Hindu debtor can raise questions of illegality or immorality of their father's debt in execution proceedings—Separate suit not permissible.

There is no substantial distinction in regard to questions arising in execution, between the position of legal representatives added as parties to the suit before decree and legal representatives brought in after decree under S. 234 of the Civil Procedure Code. All questions between them and the decree-holder relating to execution must alike be disposed of under S. 244 of the Code. Where the sons of a deceased Hindu-debtor are added as legal representatives in the course of a suit and before the decree is pronounced, it is open to them to dispute in execution proceedings the liability of the ancestral properties for the debt of their father on the ground that the debt was tainted with immorality or illegality. They cannot insist on the decree-holder resorting to a fresh suit to enforce their pious obligation as Hindu sons to satisfy the debt out of ancestral properties because the question having arisen in execution proceedings between the decree-holder and themselves as parties to the suit a separate suit is rendered inadmissiable by the provisions of S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code 1882. Shiv Ram Dondu v Sakharam.

5 LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES NOT BROUGHT ON THE RECORD AND VALIDITY OF EXECUTION PROCEEDINGS.

(1) Person entitled to apply.

937—C. P. C. S. 50 (1882 s. 234).

S. 234 does not authorise any application by the representative of the deceased judgment-debtor to bring them on the record, but only authorizes the judgment-creditors so to apply.

Sambasiva Chetty v Veeruperumal Mudali 28 Mad 361.

(2) Death of judgment-debtor-Transferee to be put on the record.

938—C. P. C. S. 50=1882 S. 234.

Where, during proceedings in execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor dies, the transferee of his property should be put on the record in place of the deceased, or a regular suit should be brought against him. He should not be treated as a claimant under s. 246, Act VIII of 1859.

6 DETERMINATION OF CLAIMS OR OBJECTIONS PREFERRED BY REPRESENTATIVES OF DECEASED PERSONS

(1) Execution of decree against representative.

939-C. P. C. S. 50 (1908)=Ss. 234, 244. Claim by personal representative of judgment-debtor.

Where it was sought to execute a decree obtained against a person who had died since the date of the decree, by attaching certain immoveable property in the possession of the personal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, and such personal representative claimed to hold the property not in her representative character, but in her own right,—Held that her claim was not a claim under s. 246, Act VIII of 1859, but that the case came under ss. 210 and 211.

7. JURISDICTION OF COURT TO WHICH A DECREE IS TRANSFERRED FOR EXECUTION TO EXECUTE IT AGAINST REPRESENTATIVES.

940—C. P. C. Ss. 50, 47 (1882 Ss. 234, 244).

Where, after a decree has been transferred, the judgment-debtor dies, an application against his legal representatives must be made under S. 234 C P C, to the court which passed the decree and not to the Court to which decree is transfered for execution. Per Arnold White C J:—S. 234 C P C contemplates the making of an order in general terms, viz "let the decree be executed against the personal representative. The canon of construction is that a statute ought to be so construed, that if it can be prevented, no clause, section or word shall be superfluous void or insignificant 4 Q B D 245 ref to S. 244 C P C, ought not to be construed as to cut down the powers given to the court which passed the decree under s. 234 C P C. The heir and legal representative of the deceased coming into possession of the deceased's assets is not bound to pay each and every creditor rateably. S. 252 C P C only provides that the representative can be proceeded against personally to the extent to which he has failed to apply the assets duly. An heir paying debts but not paying the creditors rateably has not failed to apply assets duly within the meaning of S. 252 C P C. Every payment on account of a debt is a perfectly lawful payment irrespective of its effect upon other creditors and will be a due application of the assets within the meaning of s 252. There is no analogy between the position of an executor governed by the special provisions of the Indian Succession Act and that of legal representative under the Hindu Law in respect of the distribution of assets. Where payments, have been made by the representative to the full value of the property that has come into his hands creditors cannot proceed against such property on the mere ground that the representative is still in possession of property originally belonging to the deceased. 12 W R C R 177 followed. 1 CONSTRUCTION.

(a) Arrest and imprisonment.

The last two clauses of this section are not a law of limitation. They merely enable the Court on the failure of the debtor to apply within a month to realize the security or to commit him to jail. The creditor interested ought to move the Court to take one of these steps, and pending this the debtor is not deprived of the facility otherwise given to him of taking the benefit of the insolvency provisions in Chapter XX of the Code. Bhudar v Kala. 1883 P J 348.

2 ARREST OF JUDGMENT-DEBTOR.

(1) Arrest and imprisonment in execution of decree Illegal confinement—Duress.

961—C P C S. 55=[1 08]=Ss. 336, 337—Subsequent application stating judgment-debtor's intention to apply to be declared an insolvent—Rejection of application.

Where a debtor on being arrested and brought before a Court in execution of a decree expresses his intention to apply to be declared an insolvent under section 336 of the Civil Procedure Code the Court must release him on his furnishing security to appear when called upon, and to apply within one month under Section 344 of the Code.

Where, however, the debtor did not apply under Section 336 on being first brought before the Court, but made such application after proceedings under Section 337 A had terminated, and it did not appear that he had furnished the requisite security.

Held, that, without holding that an application under Section 336 cannot under any circumstances be made after proceedings under Section 337 A, the Court in the present case was not bound to release the petitioner, and that his confinement in jail was not illegal by reason of such application.

Held, therefore, that a mortgage and bond executed by such debtor while in jail for the purpose of securing his release were not void on the ground of duress. Daulat Ram v Rup Lal. 59 P R 1898.

(2) Procedure in insolvency & in execution —Punjab Government——Notification.

962- C P C S. 55=[1882 S. 336].

Whenever a judgment debtor is arrested and brought before the Court, the Court is bound to inform him under s 336, Civ. Pro. Code, as notified in Notification No 3860 of the Chief Court's Rules and Orders, before any enquiry is made by it that he may apply under Chap XX to be declared an insolvent.

Procedure in insolvency is different from procedure in execution. Ram Lal v Mackenzie 16 P R 1909=50 P L R 1909= 15 P W R 1909=1 Ind Cas 409

(3) Order to furnish security in case of judgment-debtor, arrested in execution of a decree, but who has applied for insolvency.

963.—C P C S. 55 ; O 21, r, 38=[1882 Ss 336, 337, 344 and 357].

Held, per Wells, A J C,—that the mere fact that the judgment-debtor has made an application for insolvency in execution of one decree against him cannot debar other decree-holders even if their debts are scheduled from causing his arrest in execution of their decrees until he has been actually discharged by the insolvency Court under S. 357 of the Code.

Held, per Scott, J. C; that, when a judgment-debtor has already applied to be declared an insolvent under S. 344 of the Code, it becomes unnecessary to require him to furnish security except for his appearing before the Court when called upon. Suraj Prasad v Babu Bishambhar Nath. 9 O C 42 [B].

(4) Release of judgment-debtor on furnishing security to apply to be declared insolvent within one month—Subsequent application—Maintainable.

964.—C P C S 55=(Ss 336, 344)—

A judgment-debtor, who had been arrested, was released under S 336 of the C P C on furnishing security that he would, within one month, apply to be declared an insolvent. He did not do so. He was not arrested again, and later on he applied under S 334 to be declared an insolvent. Held, that he was entitled to do so.
Alagappa Chetti v Sarathambal 12 M L J 438.

3 LIABILITY OF SURETY

(1) Bound by surety—Dismissal of petition—Limitation.

965.—C P C S 55 (1882 S 336)—

Defendant No 2 was arrested in execution of a decree. Defendant No I stood surety for him and passed a bond that, if defendant No. 2 did not apply to be declared an insolvent or if the said application was rejected, he would produce defendant No 2 or pay Rs 500. Defendant No 2 applied but his application was dismissed. The plaintiff made a fresh application and the defendant No 1 failed to produce defendant No. 2. Then he sued to enforce the bond:

Held, that the bond was not opposed to public policy or without consideration, and was enforceable.

The defendant No. I was directed to produce the defendant No. 2 on September 27th, 1904. The time was subsequently extended to September 30th, on which date he failed to produce the judgment-debtor, and became liable on the bond: held, that, as the suit was brought within three years from that date, it was not barred by limitation. (16 All 37: 31 Cal 242; 19 Bom 694; 5 Cal 437, Rel.) Mir Musar Ali Khondkar v Guru Charan Sen. 7 Ind Cas 917 =12 C L J 419.

(2) Sureties execution against—Separate suit—Estoppel—Waiver.

Where in execution of a decree the judgment-debtor was arrested and brought before the Court and some sureties put in a surety-bond convenanting to pay the money to the decree-holder in the event of the judgment-debtor not paying it within a given time and agreed that, in default the decree-holder would be at liberty to realize the money by auction-sale of their immoveable and moveable property and by arrest; and when the decree holder sought to execute his decree against his sureties, they came in and applied for and obtained time to pay in the money, which, however, they failed to do, and the decree-holder again applied for execution of his decree against the sureties.

Held, that the Court before which execution was applied for against the sureties had general jurisdiction over the subject-matter, and though the proper course of the decree-holder was to institute a separate suit to enforce his remedies against the sureties, still having regard to the agreement that was come to and the conduct of the sureties in the previous proceedings, it ought to be taken that they waived their right of insisting upon such separate suit being brought against them. (4) Release of surety

Where a surety undertook that the judgment-debtor should apply to be declared an insolvent, and the latter did so, but did not afterwards appear when called on to do so, and the petition was dismissed. Held, that the decree could not be executed against the surety. Imbichunni Nayar v Lalji Ram Doss Sait. 24 Mad 560

(5) Surety released on application by judgment-debtor within time.

A surety undertaking to produce the judgment debtor when called upon is entitled to a notice to do so. He does not undertake to produce the debtor when the latter was called upon to appeal. A surety will be released on the judgment-debtor applying within time for insolvency. The subsequent withdrawal of the application will not subject to any liability the surety once released. One R D having obtained a decree against B S, and R S and having applied for the arrest and imprisonment of B S., one T S offered security under Section 336 of the Civil Procedure Code, which was accepted, the condition of the bond being that B S should apply within one month under Section 344 of the Code, to be adjudicated an insolvent, otherwise the surety undertook to produce B S on any date fixed by the Court, or, if he failed to do so, to be responsible for payment of the decree with costs. Within one month B S put in an application under Section 344 of the Code, but the application was returned by the Court for an alleged defect, and B S was ordered to file another application within one week. No further application having been filed and the case having been struck off, B S and T S were summoned to appear on a certain date. T S alone appeared on the date fixed, and offered to produce B S on a specified date, but as he failed to do this, the Court ordered execution to issue against T S's property. T S applied to the Chief Court for revision, and it was Held, that inasmuch as B S had applied within one month under Section 344, T S was released from his obligation, it being no concern of the surety's that the Court returned the application of the judgment-debtor for an alleged defect therein. (7) Surety-discharge—death of judgment debtor before terms of the security fulfilled.

Some money was deposited as security. One of the terms of security being that if the application of judgment-debtor for declaration of insolvency which he was going to make, was dismissed for any reason, the money will be paid to decree-holder. The judgment-debtor made the application but died before it could be disposed of. Held, that the application of the judgment-debtor was never rejected and the decree-holder was not entitled to the money deposited. A judgment-debtor was released on finding a surety for his production within a certain time. He died before the date. Held, the obligation could not be enforced as a decree against the surety and that the surety was discharged by judgment-debtor's death. Krishnan Nayar v Ittinan Nayar. 24 Mad 637.

(9) Surety—Executing Court had not power to review its order releasing the surety.

973—C P C S. 55 O. 21, r. 40=(1882 Ss. 336 and 337-A.)

On 10th July, 1908, judgment-debtor applied under s. 336, Civ. Pro. Code, and gave a surety. The judgment-debtor applied under s. 337-A instead of applying for insolvency. The Court heard the application in the presence of the judgment-debtor and postponed it to a date subsequent to the date originally fixed for the judgment debtor's appearance, but on this date the judgment-debtor remained absent T Court discharged the surety, but on review it made him liable.

Held, that under the circumstances the Executing Court had no power to review its order releasing the surety. Bhagwan Dass v Bhagat Ram. 61 P W R 1910.

(10) Applicability of provisions of s. 253 to realization of security under s. 336—Order directing security to be realized—Decree—Appeal.

974—C P C [1908] Ss. 55, 47, 52=[1882], Ss. 336, 244 252.—Security given under S. 336.—

An order against a surety under S. 253, C P C is appealable in the same manner as orders passed under S. 244, C P C in execution of decrees. S.336, C P C extends the provisions of S 253 C P C to the enforcement of the bond against the surety and an order against a surety under S. 336 is also, therefore, appealable. (1) Decree against the separate property of a married woman-Income of property subject to restraint upon anticipation.

985.—C P C S 60 (1908)=S 266 (1882) Rule 20—C P C S 260.—Attachment.

The income of property subject to a restraint upon anticipation accruing due after the date of the judgment cannot be attached in execution of a decree against the separate property of a married woman. S 8 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1874, was not intended to affect the operation of the doctrine of restraint upon anticipation by rendering property so restrained liable on contracts made by her as to her separate estate. Decrees passed in accordance with S 8 of the Married Women's Property Act against the separate property, if any, of a married woman in respect of a contract entered into by her cannot be considered as passed against property which she is restrained from alienating. Rule 220 of the Presidency Small Cause Court Rules (S 266 C P C) is only a rule of procedure, and the exemptions mentioned in the proviso are not stated in terms to be exhaustive. Such a rule cannot be taken as authorizing the attachment of property which by a rule substantively now embodied in S 10 of the Transfer of Property Act is incapable of being transferred or charged by the beneficiary. Goudoin v Venkatesa Moodelly. 17 M L J 363=30 Mad 378.

986.—C P C S 60=C P C 1882 S 266 (c)—Agriculturists, meaning and applicability of—

The terms 'agriculturist' in proviso (c) to the section does not refer to tenants only, but includes any person who is proprietor of his holding. (12 Bom 363 Dist; 7 Bom 530 ref).

Ganpat Ram v Lakshman Rao. 13 C P L R 30.

(2) Scope "Agriculturist" meaning of.

987.—C P C S 60 (=Old S 266).

The effect of this section is to confer an extraordinary privilege on certain classes of debtors and to trench on the ordinary rights of a creditor to realise his money from his debtor's property and, as such, this section should be construed very strictly. The word "agriculturist" in this section means not a mere owner of land, but a husbandman carrying on and making his living by tillage, Bawa Gurbakhsh Singh v Ghulam Qadir. 47 P R 1897.

(3) Agriculturist's house—Sale in execution of decree on mortgage whether legal.

988—C P C S. 60 [1] [c]—[1908]=S. 266 (1882]

Held per Richards, C. J., and Tudball, J., (Banerji, J, contra.) that the house of an agriculturist (which is not an appurtenance of his holding which he is forbidden by law to transfer,) is liable to sale in execution of a decree obtained on foot of a mortgage made by him there being nothing in S. 60, cl. I (c), of the Code of Civil Procedure to render such sale illegal.

Per Richards C. J.—The Code of Civil Procedure is an Act which deals entirely with matters of procedure; and prima facie it is very improbable that the legislature intended to deal with matters of substantive law. Where it was considered necessary for the protection of certain classes of tenants that their powers of transfer should be restricted, the legislature, by express provisions in the Tenancy Act, has so enacted. S. 60 and the proviso to it deal with simple money decrees and not with mortgage decrees.

Per Banerji, J—The legislature clearly intended that no Court should sell a house belonging to and occupied by an agriculturist, provided that the house is of the description mentioned in cl. (c) of the proviso to S. 60 Code of Civil Procedure, and it makes no difference in the powers of the Court, whether that house was mortgaged by the agriculturist for his debt or was not so mortgaged. The proviso forbids both attachment and sale, that is, where an attachment must precede a sale, it forbids attachment, as well as sale, and where attachment is not a preliminary step, it forbids sale. Bhola Nath v Kishori. 8 A. L. J. 1045 (F. B)=11 Ind. Cas. 646.

(4) Objection under the section.

989—C P C S. 60 (1908) = 1882 S. 266 [c]—Decree-Execution—Attachment—Sale—Possessing of the property.

In execution of a decree the house of the judgment-debtor (defendant) was attached and sold. The sale was confirmed by the Court. The plaintiff being obstructed in seeking its possession filed a suit to recover possession of the house. The defendant then contended that as he was an agriculturist and as the house was occupied by him the materials of it could not be sold having regard to S. 266 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code—Held, (1) that in the absence of proof the exemption from liability to attachment or sale of the house did not exist for the purpose of execution proceedings; therefore the executing Court had complete jurisdiction to make the order it did: and that, therefore, it was not open to the defendant to contend that there was no jurisdiction to order the sale of the house by reason of S. 266 (c) of the Code (2) that as 'strangers to a suit are justified in believing that the Court has done that which by the direction of the Code it ought to do', the plaintiff who was a stranger to the previous proceedings was justified in believing that the Court had authority to attach and sell the property.

In Courts of law only those facts can be taken to exist which are proved. Pandurang v Krishna. 5 Bom L R 799=28 Bom 125.

1014A—C P C S 64=S. 276 1882—Sale of a decree—Attachment pending—Validity of.

On the applicatirn of a decree holder the Munsif attached a decree of the Revenue Court in favor of the judgment-debtor, in the manner required by s. 273 of the Code of Civil Procedure and directed notice to be served on the judgment-debtor who was said to be in a certain jail. The authorities of such jail returned such notice unserved, reporting that there was no such person in such jail. The decree-holder though informed of the matter took no further steps and the Munsif in consequence on the 24th December 1878, ordered that the case should be struck off the file of pending cases. In May, 1879, the decree-holder sold his decree to R K S. Held that inasmuch as the order of the 24th December, 1878 declared in terms that no attachment had been perfected, the sale of the decree to R K S was not invalid and passed a good title.

1018—C P C S. 64= S. 276—Attachment, effect of—Attachment does not effect equitable rights enforceable against the property on the date of the attachment.

An attachement of property under the Civil Procedure Code does not affect subsisting equitable rights which could be enforced against the property at the date of attachment.

The plaintiff contracted with A in August, 1891, to take a mortgage of his property and advanced money under the contract, but took no registered instrument for the same. In September 1891, the property was attached in execution of a decree against A. In December 1891, the plaintiff took a registered mortgage-bond for the sum he had already advanced in August. 1891.

Held: that as the plaintiff had at the date of the attachment an enforceable contract in respect of the attached property the rights enforceable under the attachment do not override his contract and that a purchaser of the attached property in execution takes it subject to the plaintiff's mortgage, although the registered instrument was actually executed pending the attachment.

S. 295, C P C should be construed strictly as against judgment-creditors who claim rateable distribution under the section. The words "wherever assets are realized by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree" do not mean simply "where assets are realized for the purposes of satisfying a decree." "In execution" in S. 295, C P C., means by execution, viz., by some process of Court. Where a judgment-debtor effects a private sale of property attached by his judgment-creditor and the purchaser pays the amount of the attaching creditor's decree into Court, the money so paid is not "assets realized in execution" Vibudha Priya Thirthasami v. Notes:—This section with its additions and alterations corresponds with the latter part of section 316 of the old Code. The first part of s. 316 is to be found in Or XXI, r 94. Under the present section the property shall vest in the purchaser on the date of the sale and not from the time when the sale is confirmed. The language of section 316 of the old Code was to the following effect. "The title to the property sold shall vest in the purchaser from the date of such certificate and not before." In consequence of the ambiguity in the language of s. 316 there was some diversity of judicial opinions.

1 Protected interest—Darputni—Mortgage 1021
2 Certificate of sale granted—Determines date of vesting of property sold. 1022
3 Time from which the auction purchaser's title accrues 1023
4 Reversal of Sale, effect of 1024-1025.
5 Date of confirmation of sale—Starting of limitation for execution 1026-1029
6 Effect of attachment after sale—Placing attaching creditor in position of decree-holder—Confirmation of sale 1030

(2) Certificate of sale granted—Determines date of vesting of property sold.

1022—C P C S. 65 (1908).

A certificate of sale, granted under S. 316 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is not conclusive as to the property sold. So far as regards the parties to the suit and those claiming through or under them, the certificate as determinative as to the date from which the property sold actually vests in the purchaser. The property sold is what is described in the proclamation of sale.

(4) Reversale of Decree—Effect of.

Under this section the property sold vests in the purchaser after the sale becomes absolute. A sale becomes absolute after applications to set aside the sale are disallowed (Vide Or XXI r 92). A sale certificate will be granted after the sale becomes absolute (Vide Or XXI, r 94). It is therefore clear that if the decree under which the sale takes place is reversed at any time before a sale certificate is granted to the purchaser, the title of the auction-purchaser does not become absolute. Ram Sukh v Ram Sahai. 29 All 591: 4 A L J 485: A W N (1907) 198.

Notes:—This section has been made wider than sec 317 of the old Code. The language of the old section was that no suit shall be maintained against "the certified purchaser." But in the present Code the following words have been substituted for the expression "certified purchaser," viz., "against any person claiming title under a purchase certified by the Court in such manner as may be prescribed." The above change has been introduced to set at rest the following conflicting decisions, viz, 14 M I A 496; 21 All 196; 26 Cal 950; 3 C W N 657; 5 C W N 341; 21 Mad 7. In these cases it was held that the expression 'certified purchaser' means only the person who buys at the sale and obtains a certificate and does not include a person claiming through or under him, such as his heirs, representatives, assignees or mortgagees, &c. But according to the language of the present section, the expression 'certified purchaser' includes the person who stands in the shoes of the Court purchaser. The Bombay High Court in 31 Bom 61: 8 Bom L R 873 has adopted the law as laid down in the present section. The rulings quoted above have been rendered inoperative by the change above referred to.

Another change introduced in this section is by the addition of the words "or to interfere with the right of a third person to proceed against that property, though ostensibly sold to the certified purchaser, on the ground that it is liable to satisfy a claim of such third person against the real owner." The above change has been introduced in accordance with the principles laid down in 12 Cal 204; 21 Cal 519 and 18 All 461. In these cases it has been held that section 317, C P Code, 1882 (s. 66) contemplates a case between the certified purchaser and the beneficial owner and not a suit by a creditor of such person in which the creditor seeks to establish that the purchase was in reality made by his debtor and that the certified purchaser is only a benamidar of the debtor. There cannot be any doubt that if a creditor of a real owner of a property brings a suit for a declaration that it belongs to his debtor and not to the certified benami purchaser, it would not be precluded by this section. The section is intended to prevent and not to promote fraud.

Another of such co-owners, whilst the first application was pending applied under Rule 17 (XIII-A) to have the sale set aside making at the same time the necessary payments into Court required by the rule Held that upon the presentation of the latter application under Rule 17 (XIII A) the Collector was bound to set aside the sale and was in no way precluded from so doing by the existence of the former application under Rule 17 (XII) [23 Cal 686 and 29 Cal 1 ref. to]. Tulsiram v. 1050—C P C S 68(1908), Art 14=Civil Pro. Code s. 320 et seq.

In execution of a decree which had been transferred to the Collector for execution under the provisions of s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure, certain immoveable property was sold by auction on the 22nd of September 1891. But the judgment-debtors applied to the Collector to have the sale set aside, and on the 30th of October 1891 the Collector set aside the sale and ordered a fresh proclamation of sale to be issued. The order of the Collector setting aside the sale was on appeal confirmed by the Commissioner on the 4th of May 1892. After the setting aside of the sale the Judgment-debtors on the 14th of December 1891, with the permission of the Collector, mortgaged the bulk of the property. The mortgage money was paid into Court in discharge of the decree, and the satisfaction of the decree was entered up, and on the 21st December 1891 the execution case was struck off on the 12th of September 1894, the auction-purchaser, who after the sale had been set aside, had withdrawn the purchase-money paid in by her, brought a suit to have the sale in her favour confirmed Held, that inasmuch as the Plaintiff's claim involved the setting aside of the Collector's order of the 30th October 1891 by which the sale to the plaintiff had been set aside, the suit was barred by limitation, having regard to Art 14 of the second schedule to Act XV of 1877) (25 Bom 337 and 22 All 168 ref to, 3 Mad 83) held not to be of effect since the Ruling of the Privy Council in (25 Bom 337 and 25 Cal 179 distinguished). Raghunath Prasad v Kaniz Rasul 1902 A W N 116=24 All 467.

4 APPEAL AGAINST ORDERS OF COLLECTOR UNDER THIS & THE FOLLOWING SECTIONS.

(1) Appeal to the High Court—Execution of decree—Transfer of the Collector under Land Revenue Code.

1051—C. P. C. Ss. 68, 70, 71 (Bombay Act V of 1879), S. 320.

No appeal lies to the High Court from an order passed by the Collector in an execution proceeding transferred to him under S. 320 Civil Procedure Code.

Under S 320. Civil Procedure Code, and S. 203 of the Land Revenue Code, the Revenue Commissioner or the Government are vested with the appellate power in respect of such orders. Mancherji v Thakurdas. 7 Bom L R 682.

(2) Execution proceedings transferred to collector—Order made by Collector—Revision or appeal against—To whom lies—Relation between Collector and Civil Courts' such cases pointed out.

1052—C. P. C. Ss. 68, 70, 71=(1882 S.320)—An order made by Collector in such proceedings.

Held, that, against an order made by the Collector in execution-proceedings transferred to him by the Civil Court under the rules framed under S. 320, C P C 1882 (Ss. 68-71, C P C 1908), a revision or appeal lies only to the Chief Commissioner to whom the Collector is subordinate.

So far as the Central Provinces are concerned, the proper principles regulating the relations between the Collector and the Civil Court from which execution of a decree has been transferred to him, whether under S. 320 of Act XIV of 1882 or Ss 68-71 of Act V of 1908, would seem to be. —(1) that the Civil Court is precluded from interfering in any matter declared to be within the Collector's jurisdiction, but that it is not divested of its ordinary jurisdiction in regard to other matters, merely because the decree has been transferred to the Collector, and.

(2) that a civil suit will lie with respect to every order of the Collector, upon which, if it had been made by the Civil Court (acting within its jurisdiction) an action could have been maintained; but not otherwise. (11 C P L R 33, Fol: 3 All Held, (1) that an appeal would lie from an order under S. 310 A of the Code, where the case fell under S. 244 (c) of the Code, 23 Bom 418, qualified).

(2) that the Code conferred no power on the Collector to set aside a sale under S. 301 A nor was there any rule vesting that power in the Collector. The power to act under S. 310A continued in the Court, notwithstanding the transfer of execution to the Collector;

(3) that there was nothing in S. 310A which precluded the Court from setting aside a sale, merely because it had been confirmed;

(4) that it is not incumbent upon the judgment -debtor to deposit in Court anything except that, for which S. 310A has made provision. Pita Moti v Chunilal Hayakchand. 9 Bom L R 15=31 Bom 207.

1059—C P C S. 72=1882, S. 326—Arrangement for instalments extending over twelve years.—

Where a Collector recommended that the lands of a judgment-debtor should be exempted from auction sale, and that the judgment-debt should be satisfied by money, instalments extending over a period of twelve years, and the Judge, on the matter being referred to the Civil Courts for sanction and approval, in sending the proceedings to the Munsif, intimated that the arrangement was a proper one, and the Munsif in his order referred to this opinion of the Judge.—Held, that the recommendation of the Collector should have been dealt with by the Court executing the decree in the exercise of its own judgment, and not in deference to the opinion expressed by the Judge, who exceeded his jurisdiction in interfering in the matter. The arrangement proposed by the Collector was not one which could be proposed or accepted under the terms of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Muttra Pershad v. Rampershad, 6 N W 39.

C. P. C. (1908) S. 73.

Notes:—This section corresponds with section 295 of Act XIV of 1882 with some modifications. The most important change made in this section, is the substitution of the words "assets are held by a Court" for the words "assets realized by sale or otherwise in execution", which occurred in the old section.

The change has been introduced in order to set at rest a question on which there was diversity of judicial opinions. In 28 Mad 380; 1 C W N 695; 30 Cal 262; 7 C W N 341; 13 Cal 225; 15 Mad 372 and in 16 Bom 588, it was held that the word "realization" means realization in execution under the process of the Court, or realization in one of the modes prescribed by the Code: and that money paid under s. 174, B. T. Act, or under s. 310A of the C. P. Code, 1882 (Or. XXI, r. 89) does not come within the meaning of the word realization. The language of the present section is wide enough to include assets realized under process of Court or voluntary payment or money paid into Court. Almost all the conflicting decisions regarding the interpretation of the words "assets realized by sale or otherwise in execution" (old Code), seems to have become obsolete, inasmuch as those words have been replaced by the words "assets are held by a Court".

Held that sec 295, Civil Procedure Code, does not give such a discretion; it does not permit the Judge in his discretion to refuse to a party, who to his knowledge is entitled to relief, the relief to which he is entitled.

Held, also, that this order of the Judge is one which can be revised under sec. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Where a party has a remedy elsewhere than in the High Court, the High Court should not except in special cases interfere under sec, 622 of the Civil Procedure Code. But where there is no doubt as to the rights of the parties and no remedy except by suit to which there can be no defence, the lesser evil is to interfere under sec, 622

Before the moneys were taken out, the decree-holders in the remaining suit applied for execution and a re-distribution of the sale-proceeds. The application having been rejected,

Held, in revision, that S 73 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply to the case, and the lower Court was not justified in ordering a distribution of the sale-proceeds amongst the decree-holders in three of the suits in disregard of the order of attachment in the other suit, and the application of the decree holders in that suit, made whilst the money was still in Court, should not have been rejected. Butloo Khan v Gomani Singh.

All estates in the hands of the Administrator General are held by him as Administrator General i. e. as a Public officer, and in any suit instituted against him in respect of any act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity he is entitled to notice under S 424, C P C. The phrase " cause of action " in S 424 C P C should not be too narrowly construed, the object of the section being merely to inform the defendants of the grounds of complaint. (24 Mad 279; 25 All 187 at 191 foll). The portion of S. 424, C P C relating to the plaint containing a statement that such notice has been left or delivered in the manner prescribed by the section is separable from the earlier portion which deals with the delivery of the notice two months before suit. It is only when notice is not given that the suit is liable to be dismissed. The suit however, may be proceeded with if notice has been given in the manner prescribed, and subsequently the plaint is amended in order to state that fact

The true test of an action for the purposes of S. 424 which is the same as s 80 of the new Code of 1908 is whether the wrong complained of as having been done by the public officer sued amounts, first, to a distinct act on his part and secondly whether that act purported to have been done by him in his official capacity Both these elements must combine to render necessary the giving of notice under s 424 as a condition precedent to suit. Chhaggan Lal v Collector of Kaira. 12 Bom L R 845.

(10) Objection as to want of notice under s. 424 to be taken only by Secretary of State.

1078—C P C S. 80=[1882 s. 424]—Money supplied for litigation in a pre-emption suit by third person—Cost of improvement—Cost of stamp paper.

The Deputy Commissioner, as Manager, Court of Wards, sold to the defendant certain villages one of which was previously held by him under a usufructuary mortgage, the amount of which was deducted from the sale-price. The plaintiff claimed pre-emption. The Deputy Commissioner raised no objection for want of notice under S. 424.

Held, that the suit against the Deputy Commissioner was bad for want of notice under S.424, and should have been dismissed as against him. But the suit was not liable to be dismissed as against the vendee, inasmuch as, under the circumstances, the vendor was not a necessary party.

Held, also, that the objection as to notice could only be taken by the Secretary of State.

Held, further, that the suit was not liable to dismissal, simply because it was carried on with money supplied by a third person.

The plaintiff is bound by law to state his cause of action not only in the plaint but in the notice required by S. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code. And where the plaintiff charges the publication of a libel by a Government Resolusion, which on the face of it purports to be an official document and a privileged communication addressed only to specified officials, he is bound to allege in his plaint, the publication on which he relies as giving him a cause of action in respect of such a communication. A notice issued by some of many joint plaintiffs is enough to satisfy the provisions of section 424 C P C the object of which is only to give the defendant an opportunity of setting the plaintiff's claim.

The phrase "Cause of action" in section 424 C P C is not used in its narrow sense the object of the section being only to give notice of the substantial ground of complaint.

In a suit against the Deputy Magistrate of A and the Deputy Magistrate of B for damages for having in bad faith and maliciously caused the plaintiff to be confined in hujat, the plaintiff served a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code on the defendants, to the effect that the Deputy Magistrate, acting in concert with the intention of oppressing that plaintiff, had wilfully, improperly and illegally kept him in hujat and hereby caused him injury. Held that the notice sufficiently stated the cause of action within the terms of s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, it not being necessary that a notice under that section should be read with the strictness with which a plaint should be read in regard to the statement of the cause of action. Parbutty Churun Mozoomdar v Nobin Chunder. 13 C L R 195.

Plaintiffs in their notice of action describe themselves as Toll Bar contractors, Dharmpur, and residents of Simla, and stated that they intended to sue the Secretary of State for India in Council for damages for breach of the terms of three several leases granted to them, and the plaint was in conformity with the said notice. The leases filed purported to be executed as follows:—(1) that for the first year by plaintiff III alone; (2) that for the second year by plaintiffs 1 and 11 alone; and (3) that for the third year also by plaintiffs 1 and 11 alone. The plaint contained no statement of the circumstances which entitled the three plaintiffs to sue jointly for damages in respect of each of the three leases, none of which purported to be granted to all of them but in answer to defendant's first plea that he had contracted, if at all, with plaintiff III alone in respect of the first lease and with plaintiffs 1 and 11 alone in respect of the two other leases, plaintiffs replied that the contract was with all three and all were entitled to sue because " they were then, and still are, members of a trading partnership and also of an undivided Hindu family." Defendant having thereupon rejoined that the notice of action was insufficient, the lower Court framed, inter alia, two preliminary issues,—(i) whether the notice of action was sufficient, and (ii) whether the mere fact that plaintiffs are partners or members of a joint Hindu family suffices in law to include them all in the contract, if any, so as to enable them to sue jointly—and, deciding both issues in favour of defendant, dismissed plaintiffs' suit. The plaintiffs appealed to the Chief Court.

Held, that there was no substantial variance in respect of the statement of the cause of action between the notice of action given and the suit brought in pursuance of the notice given, that the notice of action given was sufficient, and that the suit was not liable to dismissal in consequence of such variance as there was.

Held, further, that the fact that the lease for the first year was in the name of plaintiff III alone, and the two other leases in the names of plaintiffs 1 and 11 alone was not of itself conclusive proof that plaintiffs were not jointly interested therein, and that S. 92 of the Evidence Act, 1872, would not debar plaintiffs 1 and 11 from proving that they were interested in the first lease or plaintiff III from proving that he was interested in the two other leases.

Held, that, if after trial it should prove that there has been a misjoinder of plaintiffs, it would not by reason of Section 26 of the Civil Procedure Code, be necessarily fatal to the suit. Tani Mahesha v Secretary of State for India. 67 P R., 1894.

Where in an action already instituted against the Secretary of State a public servant is also afterwards joined as defendant who however is not sued for any act done by him independently of Government, and no separate relief is asked for against him, no notice of action under S. 424 C P C., is required in his case.

The notice in question was given on the 7th November 1887 and the suit threatened therein instituted on the 10th March 1888. On the 18th June 1888 a decree was given in plaintiff's favour for a portion of his claim on the strength of an admission made by a person who appeared for the defendant. The 22nd April 1889 was fixed for evidence. On this date exception was taken for the first time to the sufficiency of the notice contemplated by Section 424 of the Code.

Held, that the objection had been taken too late and ought not to have been allowed after the defendant had pleaded on the merits.

An objection as to the sufficiency of a notice under S. 424 cannot be taken by any defendant other than the Secretary of State for whose benefit the notice is intended. The object of a notice under S. 424 is to give the Government and to the servants of Government time and opportunity of making amends before the matter is brought into Court. - When therefore, relief is claimed on the ground of fraud, but no fraud is charged against the Secretary of State and no relief is claimed as against him on that ground, the suit is not bad because the notice has not been served on him within the time prescribed by S. 424 of the Procedure Code.

(2) That the provisions of S. 433 C P C apply both to suits in which the Ruling Chief is sued in his public capacity and to those in which he sued in his private capacity, that consent under S. 433 C P C must be obtained prior to the institution of the suit, and that the suit, having been admittedly instituted without such consent fails.

(3) That the provisions of S 373 C P C permitting the withdrawal of suits with liberty to bring fresh suits, are as applicable to appeals as to proceedings in original Court, and that the present case was a fit one for the exercise of such powers.

There is no warrant in S. 433 C P C for the contention that the Court had neither the jurisdiction nor the power to entertain a suit in which one of the defendants is a Ruling Chief.

The Ruling Chief may not be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, but it is going much too far to argue from this that the Court cannot take cognizance of the claim in so far as it affects persons who cannot plead that they are Ruling Chiefs.

(4) Held, that the suit in which there is only one cause of action does not fail as against the other defendants, merely because it fails against the Raja of Poonch for want of consent under S. 433 C P C.

Assuming there is but one cause of action it cannot be said that the suit, if found to be bad as against one defendant, must ipso facto be held bad as against all other defendants, quite irrespectively of the grounds upon which the suit is held bad as against one defendant. There may be only one cause of action, but the defences raised by the various defendants may be entirely different, and it does not follow, because one defendant succeeds in escaping liability by reason of a defence peculiar to himself, that the claim as a whole falls to the ground. 1114—C P C Section 86 (1908)=s. 433 of (1882)-Jurisdiction—Suit against ruling chief—Institution of suit without obtaining the consent of Governor-General in Council—Waiver by defendant of objection to consent—Effect of such waiver.

Held, that the exemption from being sued in the Civil Courts in British India without the sanction of the Governor-General in Council conferred on independent ruling chiefs by Section 433, Civil Procedure Code, is a purely personal privilege capable of waiver and does create a defect of jurisdiction in the Courts, and that a defendant who is such a chief but who does not take the objection at the proper time waives his privilege thereby and cannot raise it for the first time in further appeal in the Chief Court. Held that a suit for alleged arrears of salary against a ruling Prince, was not one of the suits for which the Government of India could grant sanction under s. 433 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and such a suit, though instituted with the sanction of the Government of India could not be maintained, and must be dismissed.

Held, that the Court of a Judicial Assistant constituted under the powers conferred by Section 3 of Act XIV of 1875, and Section 9 of Act XVII of 1877, is not subordinate to the Court of the Deputy Commissioner, within the meaning of Section 433, Civil Procedure Code.

Held also, that where a certificate of the sanction of Government to a suit being brought against a Sovereign Prince has been granted under Section 433 of the Code, the Court is not only at liberty, but bound to consider, when the question is raised, whether the conditions laid down by the section have been fulfilled, under which alone the Legislature has empowered Government to grant such certificate,

The question whether it can be held on certain facts which are undisputed, that a Prince trades within the local limits of the jurisdiction of a Court within the meaning of Section 433 of the Code, is a question of construction, not of fact, and can be considered by a Court sitting in second appeal.

Held, on the facts found in the present case that the Maharaja of Kashmir could not be said to trade within the jurisdiction of the Lahore Court. Maharaja of Kashmir v Mohan Lal. P R 51 of 1886.

1117—C P C S. 86 (1908)=S. 433 (1852)—Suit against ruling Chief—Sanction under Sec. 433 of the Civil Procedure Code—Suit to recover Chouth—Onus of proof.—

A sanction of Government granted under Sec 433 of the Civil Procedure Code, which authorized the plaintiff to sue the defendant in respect of the Chouth of a village, entitles him to maintain a suit, so far as the jurisdiction of the Court is concerned, if he can show that he is legally entitled to some Chouth, i. e, some annual payment out of the village, even if he does not succeed in affirmatively establishing that his right to receive such payment originated in the manner and under the circumstances stated by him in his application to Government.

In a suit by plaintiff to recover arrears of Chouth Hak and for a declaration of his right to receive the same every year, defendant pleaded that the Hak was of the nature of "Pal or Wol" or blackmail levied by plaintiff's ancestors from defendant's ancestors, and that the payment being from its nature unlawful ought not now to be enforced by Courts of justice. Defendant, however, admitted that the Hak had been paid for many years prior to 1824, i. e, prior to the establishment of British rule in the place, that it was paid without any objection whatever up to 1857, and that from 1857, it was paid up to 1881, though not without some objection.

Held (1) That under the circumstances the onus of proving that the Hak originated in violence and wrong and was, therefore, illegal or unenforceable lay on the defendant. (2) That the defendant who failed to show by any evidence whatever how the payment really originated or anything more than that the payment was from the beginning called 'Pal or Wol" had not negatived a perfectly legal origin of the Hak. (3) That if the Hak was really " Pal or Wol " it might yet have been paid in consideration of services rendered and protection afforded by the plaintiff's ancestors which would make it perfectly legal and enforceable in Courts of justice, and that if on the other hand the Hak was "Pal" of an unlawful and illegal character, i. e., it was first extorted by threats of violence and plunder the legality of the Hak could not now after its recognition for so many years be called into question, so that even assuming that the true nature of the Hak was "Pal or Wol", it was not necessarily illegal or unenforceable on that ground.

The meaning of words "Chouth" and " Pal or Wol" discussed. The Thakore Saheb of Limbdi v. The Darbar of Jasdan, P J 1897, p. 121.
